AGAINST JOINT STATEHOOD.
Both Democratic and Republican territorial conventions in Arizona have declared unequivocally against joint statehood. They say in their identical resolutions that they are "unalterably opposed to joint statehood between Arizona and New Mexico, and would prefer to remain a territory forever rather than to have a joint state with New Mexico."

It is quite certain that New Mexico will vote heavily in favor of the plan and that all of the Mexicans in Arizona will vote for it. But the law requires that both territories shall cast a majority in favor of joint statehood before the bill shall take effect. The action of the political conventions at Bisbee on Thursday makes it certain that the Arizona majority will be in the negative. Where now are the people that said the opposition in Arizona to joint statehood came only from a few interests.

Delegates to political conventions nearly always represent the popular will in their respective districts. It is certain that the joint statehood matter was thoroughly canvassed in Arizona before the delegates were elected, and the people knew in advance the sentiments of the men chosen to represent them. Therefore the passage of the identical resolution may be fairly taken to be expressive of the wishes of a great majority of the voters.

In the light of this circumstance an interesting question arises. If President Roosevelt persists in his expressed intention to send speakers into Arizona to talk for the combination, under whose auspices will they speak? Will the president form a little statehood party of his own for the issuance of his propaganda? It looks as if he would be compelled to do that very thing, unless he changes his mind and stays out of the fight, as he should stay out. Neither President Roosevelt nor anybody else has a right to dictate to Arizona.

The statehood question, as The Herald has heretofore had occasion to remark, is one that concerns the people of Arizona alone. If they want to come in with New Mexico the privilege is theirs. If they want to stay out in preference to coming in in combination with New Mexico, they have that privilege. It is neither advisable nor proper for outsiders to "butt in."

THE CONQUEST OF CANCER.

In all the history of medical discovery until recently there has been nothing approaching hope of a cure for cancer, though men of science have sought for it, dreamed of it, been ready to sacrifice almost anything to secure light on the problem. Excepting possibly consumption, no scourge of the human race has so baffled medical research, and even consumption has now yielded in some degree to the progress made in methods of treatment. But cancer has been apparently the most hopeless, the most dreadful of all diseases until within the past few months.

Now there is a gleam of hope amounting almost to certainty that a specific remedy is in sight, and if it realizes all that is hoped for, it rescue is coming for the thousands who have been face to face with death in its most terrible form.

Although a layman may not presume to give the details of the treatment, it is outlined fully in Harper's Weekly for Sept. 1, by Dr. C. W. Saleeby of Edinburgh university, writing for Dr. John Beard of the same university, who made the original researches leading to the achievements described. Briefly stated, the remedy consists in the application of trypsin, a digestive ferment and product of the pancreas or sweet-bread. The remedy is applied internally, and, where possible, a liquid solution is applied locally. Still further and more important, the solutions of trypsin are injected under the skin as near as possible to the malignant growth.

How much emphasis cannot be laid upon the fact that no treatment should be undertaken except under medical direction, because the consequent breaking down of the cancerous growth which follows the trypsin applications is dangerous, and none but a skillful practitioner is qualified to guard against this danger. Moreover, the remedy itself has not passed the experimental stage, the methods of its effect are unknown except in a general way, and it is folly to assume that an ordinary doctor, much less the layman, can safely experiment with the remedy.

upon the fact that no treatment should be undertaken except under medical direction, because the consequent breaking down of the cancerous growth which follows the trypsin applications is dangerous, and none but a skillful practitioner is qualified to guard against this danger. Moreover, the remedy itself has not passed the experimental stage, the methods of its effect are unknown except in a general way, and it is folly to assume that an ordinary doctor, much less the layman, can safely experiment with the remedy.

The important fact, and the one of greatest promise, is that cures have been effected by the treatment, and they are vouched for by one of the most eminent physicians in England. Moreover, the remedy is given to the world freely, without cost, and under the strictest observance of medical ethics, which is a guarantee that it is genuine. The trypsin itself is not expensive, can be secured easily and is in itself without elements of danger. If it realizes all its discoverer hopes for, the remedy will discover to rank with the discovery of anaesthetics, with Jenner's vaccine and Lister's application of the principles of antiseptic surgery.

DISREPUTABLE JOURNALISM.

Says a New York paper:
Seated at the ringside was Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., the son of the president of the United States. For a time his presence did not attract much attention, but when the crowd learned he was there they set up an immense cheer. Those near enough to speak to him asked why he did not bring his father along, and Teddy replied good naturedly. Several cheers were given for him.

Through the fight, like all the other spectators, young Roosevelt was deeply interested in the battle. He showed no preference for one man over the other, but cheered repeatedly. Whenever a good blow was landed he became enthusiastic. Asked what he thought of the fight, Roosevelt said:
"Gans plainly was the better fighter, and if he had been able to go along a little farther he might have knocked out the Dane. He was doing better fighting than the Danish boy, and at the end he was far ahead of Nelson as far as staying powers was concerned. The blow that Nelson landed in the forty-second round was plainly a foul."

This is interesting chiefly as an illustration of the utter absence of care exercised by some newspaper men in gathering and sending news to their papers. Young Roosevelt was not "seated at the ringside." He was not within 2,000 miles of the fight at Goldfield. He never had the least idea of being present. The crowd did not cheer for him, because he was not there to be cheered. He was not "deeply interested in the battle" as a spectator, unless he has eyesight so superhuman that he can look over mountains and forests and rivers between Colorado and Nevada and see two men fighting. Neither did he give the interview accredited to him.

The whole thing was a hoax perpetrated by some joker on the announcer, "Larry" Sullivan. Without stopping to verify the report, Sullivan announced that young Roosevelt was in the arena. The representative of the New York paper at the ringside did the rest, unless, indeed, the interview and the details were manufactured in the home office. The latter theory is not altogether untenable.

The appointment of Rollin W. Dole as secretary of the Democratic county committee will give general satisfaction to the Democrats of Salt Lake. Mr. Dole is a capable and enthusiastic young Democrat. He combines energy and intelligence with his enthusiasm and will undoubtedly make a most efficient officer. With M. F. Cunningham as chairman and Mr. Dole as secretary of the committee the Democrats have started off extremely well.

An Oklahoma Italian has started back to his birthplace to kill himself on his sweetheart's grave. He might have saved himself money by doing the job here. But then he would not have acquired the notoriety. It is possible that as a result of the advertising he has received he may come back as a star in some operatic organization.

The Louisville Courier-Journal says it cost an Indiana man $40.50 to kill a woodpecker, or 50 cents more than it costs to bring about the assassination of a neighbor in Breathitt county, Kentucky. Now, if somebody else had said that wouldn't Colonel Watterson have been hopping mad?

It cost the government something like $125,000 to make a Roosevelt holiday the day the great warships were reviewed in Oyster Bay. Teddy comes high, but we'll have to stand him for about two and one-half years more.

After the great receptions to Bryan in New York and Nebraska, it is not surprising that many Republican papers have come to the conclusion that Mr. Bryan is a more dangerous man now than he was in 1896.

Call money went to 30 per cent on Tuesday in New York. Now will some Wall street journal rise up and say Bryan is responsible for the lack of money in the bank reserves?
A Portland woman shot four times at her husband the other day and missed him. It is a very fortunate thing that there were no innocent bystanders around.

A speck of trouble appears in the Idaho Republican camp. Borah's habit of double-crossing friends and foes alike may ditch him in spite of the Focattello deal.

SOCIETY

Miss Mary Mayne was the hostess yesterday at a luncheon given for Miss Mollie Alexander, whose marriage to Adolph May takes place shortly. Twenty girls were invited to meet the guest of honor, and they were seated at one long oval table brilliant with the deep reds and yellows of nasturtiums.
