THE OLD CRY. Secretary Taft, campaigning in Representative Littlefield's district in Maine last week set up the old, old cry about holding up the hands of the administration by voting for Littlefield for congress.

The Democrats of the country are not, we believe, afraid to go before the country this fall on the Roosevelt issue. The president is not so popular as he was. He fooled practically all of the people part of the time and he will be able, as Mr. Lincoln said, to fool part of the people all the time.

But is it not absurd to make Roosevelt a party to every individual campaign? We will have it in Salt Lake and in Utah without question, if the Republican machine can bring it about.

Our Republican friends will go about proclaiming that a vote for Luke McLuke for constable is a vote for Theodore Roosevelt and his policies; they will tell the assembled voters that they must uphold the hands of the president of the United States by casting their ballots for Jackson McSwindler for county commissioner.

What a fraud and a sham it all is! The speakers themselves, more shame to them, know they are frauds and they go away laughing at the eagerness with which the rustics turn out to hear and agree with them.

The directors of the big Philadelphia trust company that failed the other day had not held a meeting for more than two years. Perhaps they were afraid if they got together they might have to tell each other how much money they had been borrowing from the institution.

In Butte the other night one highwayman killed another in a quarrel over the division of the spoils. Wouldn't it be great if we could get all the bandits to quarrel among themselves? It wouldn't take them long to exterminate one another.

It's about time for the fellow who is hankering for office to get out that "Owing to the solicitations of his many friends, John Jones has consented," etc. It's very familiar at this season but, somehow or other, it doesn't deceive many people.

A British newspaper says that "in Chicago loaves of bread must bear the weight and the name of the baker." If this is true the crust must be made pretty thick. Otherwise the baker, if at all heavy, might break through it.

Another negro was burned yesterday in Texas. But it happens that he was burned to death because he set fire to the jail in an attempt to escape, so no comment is necessary.

The police department at St. Petersburg reports that it has advices to the effect that the fighting at Siedce has ended. Was it because all the Jews had been killed?

The president's strenuous vacation is nearly over and soon Oyster Bay will nearly disappear from the map.

will accede to the proposition. He holds office by virtue of what he declares to be the will of his people as expressed by them at the polls in a fair and free election. His possession is more than nine points of the law. It might be said to be nine and one-half points, at least. If he should consent to arbitration he would tacitly admit that there might be a doubt as to the justness of his position. This he can hardly afford to do.

It will doubtless be said on behalf of the insurgents that if Palma refuses the junta's proposition it will be because he does not dare to arbitrate the question, that he feels sure the commission would decide against him. This is an old argument against people who refuse to arbitrate, and sometimes it is well founded. Perhaps Palma was unfairly elected; perhaps he did intimidate those who would have voted against him and protect those who were for him; but he would be foolish to arbitrate just the same.

It would be better for him to fight the revolutionists as long as he has the ability to fight them. He can no more afford to arbitrate than the average husband could afford to arbitrate the question as to whether or not his wife loves him. He may lose his position by continuing the fight, but that is the only line for him to work on.

CANNED MEATS ABROAD. The gloomiest predictions of the meat packers regarding the destruction of their foreign trade in canned meats seem in a fair way to be realized. It will be remembered that at the time of the passage of the meat inspection bill and the attendant "jungle" exposures, the packers said that their foreign trade in canned goods would be destroyed. A comparison of the figures for July, 1906, with the same month of 1905, may prove to be interesting to the reader.

Nearly 5,500,000 pounds of canned beef was sent by the United States to various foreign countries in July, 1905. In July, 1906, the shipments fell to less than 1,120,000 pounds, a shrinkage of not far from four-fifths. It is true that a part of this decrease can be accounted for by the ending of the war between Japan and Russia. The falling off in shipments to Japan was 1,576,000 pounds, or from 1,690,000 pounds to 24,000 pounds. This, however, leaves a practically 3,000,000-pound shortage unaccounted for as far as the war theory is concerned.

It is accounted for, though, in the shortage of shipments to the United Kingdom, which decreased by almost exactly that amount. And this decrease is attributable directly to the exposures. It is thought by some observers that the figures for August will show an even greater difference, when compared with August of 1905. At the same time the shipments of salted or pickled beef, bacon, pork and lard were heavier in July, 1906, than in July, 1905. And the reduction in exports of fresh beef and hams was only slightly less in July of this year.

And for the canned meat situation the packers have only themselves to blame. If they had not made a bitter fight against the meat inspection bill there would have been no official report about the packing industry; at least the report would not have been made public. For its part, The Herald cannot find, in the decline of the industry, any reason for the shedding of tears. In time the packers may restore their foreign markets, but they must bring about the restoration by clean products, carefully prepared and fit for the public to eat.
