

JEWISH NEW YEAR BEGINS TONIGHT

Celebration Will Continue Until Tomorrow Evening—Stores to Be Closed.

CUSTOMS TO BE OBSERVED

HORN WILL BE BLOWN AT TEMPLE B'NAI ISRAEL.

The Jewish New Year celebration commences this evening at sunset, and will continue until tomorrow evening.

The orthodox Jewish people will hold a two days' celebration. According to the Hebrew calendar which reckons from the deluge, Wednesday marks the arrival of the year 5667. Special services will be held at Temple B'naï Israel and Congregation Montefiore. All work will be suspended while the celebration of New Year is on.

Messages in the Food.

In olden times feasts were arranged with an idea of carrying certain messages in the meats. For instance, bread was dipped in honey. This signified a hope that the new year would be a sweet one. Nuts were tabooed because this food increases the activity of the salivary glands and this was supposed to interfere with the eaters' prayers.

The blowing of the shofar (ram's horn) is observed in the services of the orthodox Jewish people. A cornet will be used at the services at Temple B'naï Israel. The blowing of this shofar, or some horn as a substitute, has for its origin the Biblical story of Abraham's revelation. As Abraham was about to sacrifice his son, Isaac, he heard a voice from heaven and looking about him noticed a ram whose horns had become entangled in a bush. God had tested Abraham's faith and was satisfied. Isaac was spared and the ram offered as a sacrifice on the pyre built for Isaac.

Set for Harvest Time.

The Jewish New Year was set for the harvest time ages ago. The month of Tishri (September) holds the penitential season. A fast day will be observed Sept. 23. This begins Friday evening and continues until Saturday evening. All Jewish holidays begin in the evening.

AN ILLUSTRATION.

(London Tit-Bits.)

A late judge, whose personal appearance was as unprepossessing as his legal knowledge was profound and his intellect keen, interrupted a female witness.

"Humbugged you, my good woman! What do you mean by that?" said he sternly.

"Well, my lord," replied the woman. "I don't know how to explain it exactly, but if a girl called your worship a handsome man she would be humbugging you."

IT ALWAYS IS.

(Catholic Standard and Times.) "Isn't it ridiculous to say 'everybody's business is nobody's business'?" "Why, that's all right; you see, it means that when—"

"I don't care what it means. It's bound to be the busy-body's business, at least."

NORTH CAROLINA TOUR HAS ENDED

W. J. Bryan Accorded an Ovation at Charlotte by Thousands of People.

WILL SPEAK AT CHARLESTON, S. C., TONIGHT.

Charlotte, N. C., Sept. 18.—Closing a two days' tour of North Carolina, in which he made speeches in a dozen towns and rear platform talks in half as many more, W. J. Bryan closed his engagements in this state tonight with an hour's talk in Charlotte, and he will speak tomorrow in Columbia, S. C., where he will speak tomorrow. Four thousand persons heard the Nebraska here.

The special train provided by the state Democratic committee, bearing the Bryan party, arrived here this evening. Attorneys' club at the Southern Manufacturers' club, Mr. Bryan was escorted to a stand in Vance park, where he spoke for an hour. At 9:30 o'clock tonight Mr. and Mrs. Bryan, accompanied by a special committee of Columbia (S. C.) citizens, left for the South Carolina capital. He will continue his journey south from that point tomorrow afternoon.

Platform of 1896.

Noticing the great number of laboring men in his audience at High Point, Mr. Bryan said:

"I shall never forget that in my campaign of 1896 there was inserted in my platform a plank that I wrote myself. 'It was a plank for arbitration between labor and capital. Some will tell you that the silver plank drove away from me the most of the support, but I tell you it was not the silver plank, but the clause for arbitration that drove them away far more than silver.'"

The free silver question was prominent in his address here also, and Mr. Bryan declared he believed in the past that he was right on the question and he still believed so.

The special train arrived at Salisbury in a downpour of rain. In spite of the rain, however, 10,000 persons gave him a royal welcome. Mr. Bryan spoke for more than an hour. He discussed the trusts, Philippines and tariff questions at length.

From there Mr. Bryan proceeded to Concord, where fully 6,000 people heard him.

Ovation at Winston.

Winston Salem, N. C., Sept. 18.—W. J. Bryan was given a splendid reception and ovation here today. For one hour and a half he spoke to 3,000 gathered at the court house square. He was happily introduced by Governor E. B. Glenn as the "greatest living exponent of Democratic principles."

Mr. Bryan devoted most of his speech to an answer to Secretary Shaw's speech on the tariff at Salisbury last week. He styled this member of the president's cabinet the "prince of standpatters."

Mr. Bryan said that the arguments given by Secretary Shaw were second-hand garments cast off by his own party.

THREE SEAMEN AND THE MATE SAVED

Charleston, S. C., Sept. 18.—The Clyde liner New York today brought into port the mate and three seamen of the American schooner R. D. Bibber, Captain S. Sayres, lumber laden from Savannah to New York. The vessel was wrecked off the coast of Florida. The vessel turned turtle and went to pieces. The men were found clinging to the spars. The captain and others of the crew were not found. The normal crew of the schooner R. D. Bibber was eleven men.

TICKETS FIED AT THE CAPITAL

Election of Directors for Mutual and New York Life Develops Big Fight.

PROMINENT MEN INVOLVED

LAWYER HUGHES WILL DECLINE TO SERVE.

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 18.—The independent tickets of the several policyholders' committee of proposed trustees or directors to be voted for at the annual elections of the New York Life and the Mutual Life companies, under the provisions of the law passed by the legislature last spring, were filed with the state insurance department late this afternoon. The "administration" tickets were filed several weeks ago. The ticket for the New York Life is called the international committee ticket, and the ticket for the Mutual Life is called the mutual policyholders' committee. There are two for the Mutual—the mutual committee ticket, put forth as the joint work of the international policyholders' committee and the Mutual policyholders' association, and the "separate" ticket, which, it is said, contains the names of several officials and agents of the Mutual company. Among the names on the New York Life international committee ticket are those of Frederick R. Coudert, Francis K. Leggett, Adolph Lewisohn and Horace White, all of New York City; Walter O. Stensland, Hopedale, Mass.; J. S. Harmood-Banner, Liverpool, and Leopold Mabilleu, Paris.

On the Mutual Life united committee ticket are James N. Adams, Buffalo; Samuel S. McClure, Ardsley-on-Hudson; N. Y. Lyman C. Smith, Syracuse, N. Y.; James D. Phelan, San Francisco; Justus C. Strawbridge, Philadelphia; Hermann Steinhilber, Frankfort; William G. M. Gillaudau, J. Hampden Robb, and Her- man Ridder, all of New York City; Rowland Winn (Lord St. Oswald), Wakefield, England, and Pierre Baudin, Paris.

On the Mutual Life selected fusion ticket are the names of Charles E. Hughes, Hugo Burdick, Emory Medicus, Charles A. Peabody, Henry Phipps, George C. Rand, Louis Stern, William T. Gillaudau, Samuel S. McClure, Herman Ridder and Frank Tifford, all of New York City; John Wanamaker, Philadelphia; Sir Hilman S. Maxing, London; Emil O. Philipp, Paris; James N. Adams, Buffalo; James D. Phelan, San Francisco.

HUGHES WILL NOT SERVE.

Consent of the New York Lawyer Was Not Asked.

New York, Sept. 18.—The Mutual third ticket called by its promoters "the selected fusion ticket," and which was filed with the superintendent of insurance at Albany tonight, contains a nominee for the Mutual Life Mutual Life insurance company the names of fifteen candidates in the Mutual Life "Administration" ticket. "United committees' ticket," the names of three Mutual Life general agents, and vice president of the company, George T. Dexter. This ticket is headed by Charles E. Hughes, who tonight in a formal statement reiterated his declaration that if elected upon this ticket, he would decline to serve. Mr. Hughes said that his name was used without his consent, and he only received yesterday an intimation that it was to be so used.

The origin of this ticket is somewhat in doubt.

The promoters of the policyholders' committee insist that the third ticket had its origin in the office of the Mutual Life insurance company and that its purpose is to confuse the policyholders and draw support from them. They also insist that the administration nomination ticket is denied by the officials of the Mutual Life, who say they have no interest in the matter.

TELLS OF MINING CONGRESS

C. E. Wood, Special Representative Mentions Several Steps Planned by That Body.

C. E. Wood, special representative of the American mining congress, with headquarters at Denver, Colo., is in the city for a day or two in the interests of the association.

Mr. Wood told last evening of the congress and its work. "This year's session is to be held at Denver, Oct. 18 to 19, inclusive. Several matters of interest to mine owners and mining men generally are to come up at that time. Salt Lake will be represented.

One of the chief aims of the congress is to establish a department of mines and mining as a part of the cabinet at Washington. Such a department, it is argued, would be a great aid to the mining industry generally in tending to have it recognized as one of the national occupations.

"A strong committee has been appointed to draft a bill to be presented at the next session of congress for the protection of investors and reputable mining men generally against the fakers and wild-cat schemes which abound wherever mining is known," said Mr. Wood. "An effort will also be made to provide for the passing of a law to create a drainage system similar to city public improvement districts. Such a law will benefit many mining camps which have been held back for years owing to the unwillingness of some company to stand the expense of a drainage tunnel, which would benefit every mine in the district, in the face of the fact that the other companies operating would share equally in the benefit without the expenditure of a single cent."

Mr. Wood has made many visits to Salt Lake City. He will leave tomorrow.

WHITEWASH APPLIED.

Santa Fe, N. M., Sept. 18.—The territorial grand jury this afternoon operated H. O. Bursum, chairman of the Republican territorial committee and former superintendent of the penitentiary, from the charges which were made against him in connection with the alleged shortage of funds reported to Governor Harrison by expert accountants.

A TANGIER INCIDENT.

Stensland Case Was Almost Paralleled by Richard Harding Davis. (Chicago Post.)

Richard Harding Davis, in "The Exiles," one of his stronger short stories, paints a scene of the "lack of the rule of law" in Tangier that is singularly reminiscent of the general principles underlying the arrest of Paul O. Stensland in the Moroccan capital.

Keen lawyers declared yesterday that the so-called "arrest" had no legal standing, as there is nothing to make a warrant from the state of Illinois of any value whatever in the sultan's dominions. Assistant State's Attorney Olson "wanted" his man and he got him. That was all there to it, Stensland, to evade the law, had fled to a land where there was no law.

In Mr. Davis' story the defaulter, Winthrop Allen of New York, loots a trust company, and just before the crash flees to Tangier, carrying with him $50,000 in cash. This sum $50,000 is trust funds belonging to Miss Martha Fields, an old New York school teacher. Henry Howard Holcombe, a reform assistant district attorney, chances to be in Tangier when Allen is arrested. He is a man who has a bezzler has all Miss Fields' cash with him, and in a sudden burst of anger resolves to force restitution. The young reformer's stay at Tangier had slowly been passing. He had a revolver in his pocket and passed on quickly to a room on the second floor of the hotel. He knocked and the door was partly opened. Holcombe pushed it back with his shoulder, and stepping quickly inside, closed it again behind him.

"The man within, into whose presence he had forced himself, confronted him with surprise, which increased as he recognized his visitor. Winthrop Allen, seated at a table, with white hair and whiskers, cut after an English fashion, which left the mouth and chin clean shaven. He was of severe and dignified appearance and gave in his bearing the look of an elderly gentleman who had lived a scrupulously well-cared-for and well-ordered life.

"Holcombe shifted the weight of his body and closed his hands on the door-knob behind him. 'I had a letter about you from home tonight, Allen,' he began, and he looked at Allen as if he wrote it was anxious that I should return to New York and set things working in the district attorney's office in order to bring you back. It isn't your fault as much as you think."

"How dare you refer to my misfortune?" "Your misfortune! What rot! Holcombe growled resentfully. You mustn't talk like that to me. A man who has robbed people who trusted in him for years, as you have done, can't afford to talk of his misfortune. You were too long about it, Allen. You had too many chances to put it back. You've no feelings to be hurt."

"Mr. Holcombe," interrupted Allen earnestly, "I do not want any words with you about this. I am here owing to a combination of circumstances which have led me through hopeless, endless trouble. What I have some through with no one knows, and I am greatly to be pitied. Mr. Holcombe, greatly to be pitied. What do you think I am, anyway? A child that you can insult? I'm not a prisoner in the box for some heinous crime. I am a man of the house—and I'm going back with me tomorrow to New York."

"Are you drunk?" cried the other fiercely. "Do you propose to turn highwayman and thief? If you make a move toward me I'll call the people of the house—and I'll have you in a minute. I'd let you leave the country with my money? I'd have you dragged from your bed this very night, or I'd have you seized as you set foot on the wharf. I would appeal to our consular general. As far as the law goes, I am a man of protection as yourself, and, falling him, I'd appeal to the law of the land."

"You poor thing!" interrupted Holcombe. "Do you know where you are? You talk like a child. I am a man of the house—and I'm going back with me tomorrow to New York."

"Quite right; that's it, exactly," said Holcombe with cheerful alacrity. "I'm glad you have grasped the situation so soon. That makes it easier for me. Before leaving New York you converted bonds and mortgages belonging to me into ready money. You must have it with you now in this room. And this $50,000, which belongs to the best, purest and kindest woman in the city, is going back with me tomorrow to New York."

"I'm not a prisoner in the box for some heinous crime. I am a man of the house—and I'm going back with me tomorrow to New York."
