

HILL PROMISED GREAT THINGS

That Was When He Wanted Right of Way Through Spokane for His Road.

CITY'S GRIEVANCE STATED

HEARING OF INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION.

Spokane, Wash., Jan. 14.—The personality of James J. Hill figured conspicuously in the first day's hearing of the Spokane freight rate case before the interstate commerce commission. H. M. Stephens of Spokane and Brooks Adams of Boston, counsel for the other company, put a number of witnesses on the stand and introduced extensive extracts from the records of the commission to prove that Mr. Hill, when he obtained in February, 1882, a free right of way through the city valued at $100,000, promised this city terminal rates or better. W. W. Cotton, for the Harriman lines, and Attorney Cannon, for the Northern Pacific, met again today, roads being bound by any promises which Mr. Hill might have made at that time.

Would Apply to All.

Commissioner Prouty said in reply to these protests that in a hearing of this character the acts of one company could not be dissociated from others; if Mr. Hill's company should be required to reduce rates into Spokane the other companies would necessarily have to meet the new rates. That, he said, was their misfortune. N. W. Durham, editor of the Spokesman-Review, was put on the stand to identify an interview which he personally obtained from Mr. Hill in February, 1902, proof of which was submitted to Mr. Hill and received his approval before it was published in the Review the following morning.

Hill Was Emphatic.

In that interview Mr. Hill said that the policy of charging Spokane through the rate to the coast, plus the local rate back to this city, was illegal, and that a rate of one cent could not be found to approve it. He said that the people of Spokane, who had a case before the interstate commerce commission, had made a mistake in going before that tribunal; that they should have gone direct to the United States court. In this interview Mr. Hill declared that his company was not afraid of water competition, and if a canal ten feet deep were dug alongside the Great Northern road, St. Paul to Puget sound, his railroad would continue doing the business.

W. D. Norman, one of the owners of the Spokane hotel, testified that he had heard Mr. Hill, while in Spokane, make repeated promises that when his road should be built to this city he would give Spokane "terminal rates or better," and rates which would enable it to "compete with any point to the south or the west."

Spokane Prosperous.

Cross-examination of these and other witnesses by attorneys for the railroads was along the line of showing that Spokane had enjoyed extraordinary prosperity under existing rates, and to show that under the present rates the jobbers of Spokane are doing business in points half way between Portland and the Puget sound cities and Spokane. Mr. Doland, president of the Spokane drug company, testified that he had heard Mr. Hill, while in Spokane, make repeated promises that when his road should be built to this city he would give Spokane "terminal rates or better," and rates which would enable it to "compete with any point to the south or the west."

ANOTHER MERGER PROJECT.

Daisy, Triangle and Great Bend Mines at Goldfield Included.

(Special to The Herald.) Goldfield, Nev., Jan. 14.—A well-defined report is in circulation that a gigantic merger of mining interests, including the Daisy, Triangle and Great Bend, is in process of formation. The interested parties refuse to discuss the rumor. William J. Brewer, who controls the Triangle, admits that an eastern syndicate is seeking that property, but will not admit that a merger is in contemplation. Should the scheme of consolidation go through, it will be second only to the Wingfield merger, known as the Goldfield Consolidated Mining company.

The most seriously hurt are as follows: Benjamin Lintley, right arm broken and both eyes seriously injured. Jimmy Myers, aged 11, lacerated wound on one foot. Samuel Newman, aged 14, wounds in both legs. Frozen water pipes caused the heater to blow up.

ENGINEER KILLED.

Pittsburg, Pa., Jan. 14.—The Chicago Express, eastbound on the Pittsburg & Western branch of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, was in collision at Allison Park, Pa., this morning. The passenger engine was wrecked and Engineer Myers was killed and the fireman fatally hurt. Several passengers on the express were slightly cut by broken glass.

Formal Opening of Chamber of Commerce a Big Success.

CITY'S GRIEVANCE STATED

COMBINED EFFORTS OF FOUR ORGANIZATIONS.

"Busy all the time in Utah" seemed never more appropriate and significant than last night, when 3,000 people filed past the brass buttoned porters at the entrance of the new chamber of commerce into the imposing brilliantly lighted chamber of the permanent exhibit of Utah's resources and products. The splendid appearance of the big room, with its hundreds of exhibits, its electric museum exhibits, the artistic reproduction of the Augustus natural bridge and the scores of stuffed birds and animals told a story of three months' hard work and patient endeavor on the part of the officers of four of Utah's and Salt Lake's most representative organizations—the Utah State Fair association, Manufacturers & Merchants' association, the Salt Lake Real Estate association and the state board of agriculture.

It was the formal opening of the Utah chamber of commerce and the inauguration of a permanent exhibit of Utah's resources and products. It was a material consummation of the get together spirit of Utah associations that is bringing them to the fore in the work for the civil, financial and moral advancement of Utah and Salt Lake.

The Governor Presides.

Governor Cutler in person did the honors of the occasion. Smiling zealously at the host of newly arrived spectators, who filed stiffly in and out of the room in the lead of admiring friends, he was introduced to the exhibit. He believed it is going to be a big thing for Salt Lake and that it speaks volumes for the executive ability of the men responsible for its installation. His excellency left for home leaving his legislative friends to roam through the new chamber to their hearts' content.

The artistic end of the big exhibit is particularly a success. As one enters the swinging doors of the room a splendid representation of the Augustus natural bridge is to be seen. Beneath its arch scores of mountain trout swim lazily under a pretty fountain basin. Passing under the arch the pretentious and interesting exhibits of the manufacturers of Salt Lake and the state are found. The extent of the display prohibits a detailed account. The visitor finds a hundred and one things to interest him, while in Spokane, makes repeated promises that when his road should be built to this city he would give Spokane "terminal rates or better," and rates which would enable it to "compete with any point to the south or the west."

State's Industries on View.

The thirty-four industries of Utah are in evidence in excellent specimens. In the southwest corner of the room stands the artificial superstructure of a "project" covered with rocks and trees and appearing unusually natural. Two cases of exhibits from the manual training departments of Salt Lake's schools and a big case of specimens of the work of the deaf and dumb are also on view. Ogdenville attract attention, while a dozen different historical relics are to be found on every hand. The press on which was printed the first "Book of Mormon" in Palmyra, N. Y., by Egbert G. Grandin, in 1829, is the most important of these. The exhibits are arranged by expert decorators and are in finished condition. It has taken three months of unremitting labor to get them into the building. They are to be added to in the future as occasion demands.

Shortly after 10 o'clock the city council attended the opening in a body, having adjourned from their work at the city county building. Not a city father but expressed himself well pleased at the showing.

Many Officials Present.

Any number of prominent Salt Lake residents viewed the chamber before the doors closed at midnight. W. J. Halloran filed about among the visitors, shaking hands here and there and looking out for the real estate board's end of the affair. C. O. Harris, Orion Hewlett and J. S. McDonald were in evidence, making guests at home and managing the general details of the opening. Horace Easton, secretary of the State Fair association, bobbed up at the register book now and then with a representative from his country and helped move the big crowd. Fisher and Harris dropped in from the Commercial club to congratulate every one concerned in the successful consummation of the formal opening of the chamber and the exhibit.
