RAG CHEWING.

The Herald's approval of a council resolution to ask for bids on all city advertising seems to have stirred up a more or less esteemed contemporary.

Besides it should be conceded without debate that The Herald is an authority, having been the beneficiary of the spoils system for two years and knows whereof it speaks when it declares the council can save the taxpayers thousands of dollars by asking for bids.

Discussing this subject, the more or less esteemed contemporary suggests that we are "jealous of the strides it is making." Worse, it says uncomplimentary things about The Herald.

Recalling this, we shall try to be cheerful and hope for the best. The sun shines occasionally still; summer is coming, the lake season is not far away, the sky is just as blue as it ever was and the glad wild song of the birds is left to comfort the despondent.

The Herald expects to go right on publishing the best newspaper in the west every day; it expects to be prompt in delivery to its subscribers and efficient in its service to advertisers.

Of the president's speech at Jamestown the London Daily Mail says: "The president emphasized a great many maxims which we in this country are accustomed to take for granted."

A millionaire automobile scroacher has been sent to jail for twenty days. That—the jail—ought to hold him for quite a while.

ALL WIND BLOWS GOOD.

The political cabal that recently succeeded, after some years of burrowing effort, in forcing W. J. Kerr from the presidency of the Agricultural college of Utah, will be interested—and perhaps a trifle exasperated—to know that Professor Kerr was tossed, not from the frying pan into the fire, but from the frying pan into the feather bed, as it were.

It may also interest the Utah cabal—and disgust it as well—to know that partisan politics is not in the curriculum of the Oregon institution. The place was not sought by Professor Kerr. The trustees of the college, learning that he would be at liberty at the close of the present term at the Agricultural college of Utah, offered him an immensely better position, even aside from the question of salary, and he has accepted it.

Thus is furnished another illustration of the ill wind that blows good. Professor Kerr is really under obligations to the Callister-Spry-Hull-"Fussy" Anderson machine that ousted him. The machine did not succeed until after it had done a prodigious amount of discreditable work, but its success, in the light of later developments, was only a victory for Professor Kerr. At the time of his removal The Herald expressed regret that a man of his ability and experience should be deposed because he refused to curry favor with the political gang that happened to be in control of the state's affairs.

NEW HERALD SERIES.

Tomorrow morning in The Sunday Herald will be published the first of a new and intensely interesting series of stories under the general title "The Exploits of a Physician-Detective." The author of the series is Dr. George F. Butler, a well known writer on medical and other topics.

The Herald is glad to secure the series, for it fully maintains the high standard of magazine excellence long since established by this paper. The Sunday Herald has come to be recognized in this territory as the leading exponent of all that is good in newspaper stories. This is evidenced by the fact that new Sunday features prepared by the best experts of the country are always offered to The Sunday Herald before they are offered to any other paper in this section of the country.

In appreciation of the many recognitions of its high standing The Sunday Herald's standard is to be maintained, and raised whenever that is possible. In addition to the new series tomorrow The Sunday Herald will contain its usual excellent material, comprising the best comic section, the best miscellany, the most complete news and sporting service.

The fact that The Herald carries more advertising from Salt Lake business men than any other newspaper here may explain why The Herald is "jealous of the strides" its competitor is making. Salt Lake advertisers are pretty good judges of Salt Lake newspapers.

Poor Joe Mulhatton is dead, but there are others. Witness the story from Ohio about the snake that tied a man to a tree and held him there while another snake lashed him unmercifully with its tail.

Colonel Henry Watterson says he is for neither Bryan nor Roosevelt in 1908. Wonder if the colonel would favor the nomination of the editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal?

On discovering that her husband was an infamous traitor to the cause a Russian woman revolutionist killed herself. It really seems a pity that she did not first kill her husband.

J. Pierpont Morgan doesn't care much about circulation. This is apparent from the fact that a book he is printing is to cost $2,000 per copy.

An order for 2,000,000 rifles was recently placed by China. That ought to help some toward keeping the peace of the Orient.

Mr. McTernay will now have a good excuse for refusing to contribute to the "American" campaign fund at the next election.

Plenty of Smiths are showing up to contest the will of "Silent Jim." And there are probably more Smiths a-coming.

It appears the hold-ups were so thoughtless as to give the police no notice of their intentions.

BOTHERED BY COLOR.

(New York Sun.) Knicker—Does your wife burn a light for you when you are detained? Bookie—Yes, but I never can tell if it is red or green.

SOCIETY

Mrs. William C. Jennings and Mrs. Morris L. Ritchie entertained yesterday afternoon at a neighborhood tea at the Jennings home on Second street. The affair was especially to welcome Mrs. D. Elliott Kelly and Mrs. George M. Bacon to the neighborhood, both having recently moved to that part of town.
