IF IT'S HERE IT'S RIGHT

THE HERALD'S SPORTING PAGE LETTER FROM AN OLD SPORT TO HIS SON AT COLLEGE

In Which He Shows That Copy-Book Maxims Are Relics of the Dark Ages, When the Batting Average of Literary Genius Consisted of Sacrifice Hits. And Tells How Baseball and Football Prevent Educational Institutions From Being Mere Fop Factories.

(Washington Times.) Dear Son, Get rational there, kid; you handed me that bunch of dope about the athletic committee having to boost you through your class room exams as though it was something to be ashamed of.

exams of the athletic board or they wouldn't care a tinker's dam whether you was eligible for the team or not. This state of affairs might not meet with the approval of some of the sticks you butt into during your society gambols with your old dad.

genius consisted entirely of sacrifice hits. These old sour mugs couldn't score up enough dough on this dope that they wrote to buy them a free lunch on the installment plan, and they were not strong enough with the fans in their day to win them a hot writing copy for the "Hints to Housekeepers" column in the local sheet.

This copybook philosophy is like the new Pennsylvania state capital, it's beautiful in construction, but there's blamed little honesty in its make-up.

The guy who hammers away at the opposing rush line in spite of three cracked ribs, a couple of shaded lamps and a twisted spine, is not very blamed apt to stay put when he gets slammed back for a loss in the business game.

little niche I had it polished up all ready for use. But I've never yet been up against the guy who would let me get further than five, and I usually found that it was the referee who coasted the ten before I came to.

when you butt into wrath in its active form, after you get out of the hospital you'll decide that a swift kick in the slats has it skinned to a frazzle. These old ossified pedagogues of the knowledge factories who perpetuate this dope of the dark ages to shove into the rising generations are largely responsible for the bunch of mollycoddlers turned out in these institutions.

The only thing a soft answer will do with wrath is to cause the guy packing the wrath to pick you up for an easy mark and get busy with his maulers.

OGDEN TRIMMED BY SALT LAKERS

Starts Out Like Ball Game, but the Finish Is Something Fierce.

A few of Salt Lake's faithful fans and quite a number of Junction City enthusiasts were down at Walker's field yesterday afternoon to see the Salt Lake and Ogden teams fight it out on the diamond.
