

WRENCH TAKES UP CHALLENGE

Starts Extension of First South Street as Originally Planned.

REGENTS THREATEN SUIT

FRINGE OF BACK YARDS FOR UNIVERSITY CAMPUS.

The row between the regents of the university and the Telluride Realty company, owners of the Federal Heights, over the arrangements for continuing First South through the new subdivision, has reached a crisis.

The owners of the Heights have ordered the subdivision graded and laid out according to the original scheme and yesterday afternoon teams began work on the extension of East First South street to be run through the Heights according to the specifications of the original plat for the subdivision.

Regents' Ultimatum. The action of the regents of the university was taken yesterday when the University regents at a special meeting threw down the gauntlet to the realty company in the following resolution:

"Resolved, That it is the sense of the board that if the Telluride Realty company will not accede to our suggestion of a thirty-five-foot driveway along the north side of our grounds, legal measures be taken to keep First South street open to its full width of 132 feet through the Fort Douglas grounds, and that the matter be referred to the executive committee with full power to act, and with authority, if necessary in its judgment, to employ counsel to represent the board in securing this end."

This means that the regents have decided that they will compel the owners of Federal Heights to give them a road through the tract with a thirty-five-foot span or more. A. M. Wrench, president of the company owning the Heights, has agreed to give thirty-eight feet of his property for a continuation of First South street on the dividing line of the university property and the Heights. The regents insist that he give forty-three feet while they give twenty-four feet. Mr. Wrench has announced that he could not make any more concessions.

Yesterday the regents took decisive action in the resolution quoted above.

Ready to Defend Himself. "I have come to Salt Lake to stay," said President Wrench last night. "I intend to make my home here and I wish to live in peace with my neighbors if it is possible. I will go more than half way to do that."

"From the resolution passed by the regents yesterday, it will give a double ending in the Jennings block for the members and their ladies. The celebration is in commemoration of the landing of Columbus, 1492."

TYRRELL FINED FOR CRUELTY TO ANIMALS

Abandons Horse Suffering From Glanders—Attorney Nonplussed by Expert Witness.

Josh Tyrrell, who has some horses at the old Continental hay market, was arraigned before Police Judge Diehl yesterday, charged with cruelty to animals.

Dr. John Ernst, who was called by the prosecution, testified that he had examined the horse and that it was afflicted with glanders.

Attorney James Smith, representing Tyrrell, started to vigorously cross-examine the veterinary surgeon, striving to show that the surgeon was wrong in saying that the animal was diseased.

"Describe this disease—glanders," he shouted, shaking his finger at Dr. Ernst. "It is the introduction into the horse's system of the bacillus melli," replied the doctor.

"What part of a horse is that bacillus melli?" demanded Attorney Smith. "I did not say it was a disease germ, it is a part of the anatomy of the horse," said Dr. Ernst.

"Come, come," shouted Smith. "If you didn't say it was a disease germ, you wouldn't have called it a disease germ," said the doctor.

Smith changed his line of cross-examination. Tyrrell, on being placed on the stand, said that on Friday night, on his return from a trip to Gardiner, a man gave him the horse and told him to sell it for $5, if possible. Not being able to find a purchaser for the animal, he led it out First West street, where he turned it loose. In the morning, he hunted up the animal and took it out to Polson avenue, where he again liberated it, thinking it would wander out toward Warm Springs, where it might find a feeding place.

PATHETIC DEATH OF ZAIDA BRAFFET RECALLS MOTHER'S HEROIC ACT

ZAIDA BRAFFET, Little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Braffet, dies of burns.

A mother's heroic devotion failed to save the life of little Zaida Braffet, the 4-year-old daughter of M. P. Braffet. The child died at 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning at Holy Cross hospital of burns received on Sept. 14.

On that day the little girl was playing in the yard of her home at 977 First avenue. At the time, Mrs. Braffet was confined to her bed, slowly recovering from burns received in an explosion of gas a short time before.

In her play, the child found a red lantern. Wishing to see a colored light, she filled the globe with paper and applied a match. Her childish ecstasy at this exploit was short-lived. The oil in the lamp was ignited and a sudden burst of flame caught the child's dress.

A scream of agony was the first intimation of the terrible accident that Mrs. Braffet received. With a heart torn with dreadful foreboding, the suffering mother dragged herself from bed and hurried as fast as her tottering limbs would carry her to the child's rescue.

Seizing the screaming child in her arms, she beat out the flames with her bare hands, receiving fresh burns in this heroic work.

She did not wince until the last spark was beaten out and others had arrived to assist in the efforts to save the child. But this touching display of motherly love was futile. The child lingered at Holy Cross hospital through weeks of suffering and, although everything possible was done to save her life, at last succumbed to the injuries she had received.

The funeral will take place at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon from the home of the parents, 977 First avenue.

WHAT, AGAIN! NO GASOLINE! WHY, THIS IS EXTREMELY ANNOYING

There is every reason on the part of the automobilists to fear that they will have to walk again, and every reason on the part of the pedestrian populace to rejoice that it may wend its way in peace without thought or heed of the chauffeur and his machine.

It is all because there is again a shortage of gasoline, and every reason knows when the shortage is going to end. Three weeks or so ago there was a shortage of gasoline; in fact, there was a positive famine, but the oil company put forth strenuous efforts and the conditions were once more righted, and everything went along as it had been. Very few of the owners permitted themselves to run out of the life blood of the automobile entirely, having reserves of greater or lesser capacity, and so, by carefully saving their stock they were enabled to weather the storm.

Now the situation seems to be more serious than it was on the former occasion of shortage. There is no gasoline in town, and all the company can offer is hope.

Those who have tried to run a thirty-horse-power car with hope will realize what this means.

The gasoline shortage developed an acute stage Monday, when the supply became desperately low. Yesterday

GREENWOOD ADMITS BREACH OF ETIQUETTE

Says He Drank From Catsup Bottle and Proprietor Threw Dishes at Him.

Alma Greenwood, a promoter of mining and irrigation projects, appeared in the police court yesterday afternoon to testify against John Shafer, proprietor of the Chesapeake restaurant, whom he accused of battery. Mr. Greenwood is a pretty man, weighing 220 pounds.

"I entered the Chesapeake," he said, "on the evening of Oct. 3. After ordering a steak, I partook of some tomato catsup from a bottle upon the table. It is true that I drank from the bottle, which was a slight breach of etiquette, but I assured Mr. Shafer who objected to what I had done, that I was willing to pay for the bottle. This did not cool his rage. He struck me upon the head with a bottle, and then beat me with his clenched fists, ending by throwing dishes at me."

Mr. Shafer, in testifying in his own behalf, stated that Mr. Greenwood had called him a "little cur," and had assumed what he considered a threatening attitude when he assailed the promoter. "If the man had a million dollars," he said, "he couldn't drink tomato catsup from a bottle in my place."

Mr. Greenwood announced that he would announce his decision in the case on Friday afternoon.

SUIT PROVES A ROORBACK

Portland Cement Company Must Pay Utah Fireproofing Company $1,180.

To bring a lawsuit on an unpaid bill and to not only lose but be assessed $1,180.57 to pay for the damage sustained by the defendant because of failure to deliver the goods at the time specified, was the distressing experience of the Portland Cement company.

When the Utah Fireproofing company took the contract in 1905 to lay sidewalks throughout the city it contracted with the cement people to furnish their product at stated intervals for use on the work. It appears that there was much delay in delivering the cement at the time and place required by the contract and for this reason the fireproofing company refused to pay for a portion of the material.

The cement company brought suit and the defendant filed a counter claim alleging damages through the failure of plaintiff to fulfill the contract conditions. The jury which tried the case before Judge Lewis returned its verdict yesterday morning and found that while the fireproofing company owed the cement company $1,095.30 the latter concerned over the former $2,275.87 for damages sustained by it, and the judge ordered that judgment be entered against the plaintiff and in favor of the defendant company for $1,180.57.

AMUSEMENTS

"The Alaskan" is nightly playing to big houses and the prospect is that the business will remain good for the remainder of the week. The totem pole song has made a distinct hit, and Mr. Martindell is compelled to respond to several encores at each performance. The play runs through the week.

"Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" will be the play at the Grand theatre the balance of the current week starting tonight, and Theodore Lorch will be seen in the dual role—characters which have been his best creations. "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" was Mr. Lorch's first success, and this will be his first reappearance in the roles in several seasons, but continued requests for the reproduction of the play caused Mr. Lorch to again revive the same. The engagement is for three nights with a Saturday matinee at 2:30.

Will Reed Dunroy, formerly Sunday editor of the Chicago Chronicle, has arrived in the city to become the advance agent for "The Yankee Regent," which will be at the Grand theatre next week. Mr. Dunroy takes the place of J. E. Rickards, who has gone to the south in the state to regain health and strength after a serious illness.

It looks as if the Orpheum will have a record breaking week again. Fred Ray & Co. in a "Roman Tragedy," and Farrell-Taylor trio in "That Minstrel Man" are responsible for much of the attendance.

This week's bill at the Lyric theatre still continues to draw crowded houses. Perkins, Lappin and company holding their place at the head of the list with their clever sketch, "Friendship."

PAVING TO BE RUSHED.

Macadam Must Be Completed Before Cold Weather.

The board of public works is determined that all the macadam street pavement now being laid must be completed before cold weather sets in and P. Moran has been asked to push the work as rapidly as possible. Within ten days it is expected that if street between Brigham and First avenue will be completed, and that Second avenue will also be completed at that time. The Second avenue macadam extends the whole length of the street and makes it one of the finest driveways in the city.

It is hoped, although hardly expected, that Mr. Moran can complete the work on Tenth East between Second and Fifth South streets before cold weather. When he took the contract it was the understanding that only one block was to be completed this year. The work, however, is progressing so rapidly that there is a chance of its being all completed.

LECTURE ON ROBERT E. LEE PETER RASMUSSEN LOCATED George B. Wendling Appears in First Congregational Church Tonight Under Auspices of University. Aged Rancher Suddenly Starts for Copenhagen Without Notifying His Family. For the second time since his appearance on the lecture platform Salt Lakers tonight will have an opportunity to listen to George R. Wendling, one of the country's great speakers. Mr. Wendling's subject upon the occasion of his first appearance in this city was "The Man of Galilee," and Salt Lakers will readily recall the profound impression his appearance made at that time. His topic this evening will be "Robert E. Lee, the Idol of the South." Mr. Wendling himself is a loyal son of the north, but his patriotism is so broad that it has not prevented him from laying upon the tomb of Robert E. Lee, the Christian soldier of the south, a wreath of laurel that will never fade. The lecture is in every respect worthy of Mr. Wendling's high reputation, and through every passage of its thrilling and earnest presentation vibrates with sentiments of broad patriotism and lofty ideals. Mr. Wendling arrives in the city this morning, and during the day will be the guest of the University of Utah, under whose auspices he speaks tonight. PETER RASMUSSEN LOCATED Aged Rancher Suddenly Starts for Copenhagen Without Notifying His Family. Peter Rasmussen of Granger, whose disappearance on last Saturday caused his family to think that he had met with foul play, is perfectly safe, according to information supplied yesterday by Paul L. Beemer of the Union Pacific ticket office at Second South and Main streets. Beemer says that on Saturday afternoon Mr. Rasmussen bought a ticket for Copenhagen and that evening started eastward to catch the first steamer of the Scandinavian-American line sailing for his old home in Denmark. The ticket agent remembers Rasmussen because in making out the ticket it was necessary to ask the old man his name, age and occupation. Mr. Rasmussen's wife and sons were greatly relieved to hear that he was safe, but could not understand why he did not tell them of his intention to make a journey back to the old country. Peter Rasmussen, Jr., told The Herald last evening that his father had been intercepted at Omaha. It is probable that because in making out the ticket it was necessary to ask the old man his name, age and occupation.
