

TROLLEY STRIKE CAUSES ROTTS

Attempts to Operate Street Cars in Philadelphia Are Re-sisted by Sympathizers.

NON-UNION MEN DESERT STRIKING CARMEN WIN A TEMPORARY VICTORY.

Philadelphia, June 2.—The attempt of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit company to run its cars with non-union men resulted tonight in a number of serious riots. It was the first effort to operate the lines at night, and after several futile efforts to get the cars through the mobs they were sent back to the barns. At least 100 men were more or less seriously injured in the rioting.

In the Kensington district, where many mobs are located, the scene was a mob of men, women and children pulled the motornen and conductors from their cars and beat them severely. In many instances cars were set on fire. The police were powerless to control the strike sympathizers. When they charged a mob it separated, only to form again in the vicinity of another car. Several policemen were injured.

In West Philadelphia dynamite caps were placed on the tracks and crowds stoned the non-union workmen when they attempted to bring out cars, forcing them to return to the barn. In the downtown section conductors and men were pulled from their cars and their clothes were torn off by mobs of strike sympathizers. In some cases the terrified men had to be taken to private houses and guarded by police to save them from harm.

In Kensington there were five big riots, and all evening Kensington avenue, the main thoroughfare of the district, was filled with a howling mob. The imported cars proved a disappointment to the company, many of them deserting their cars at the first sign of trouble, and leaving them standing in the street at the mercy of the mob. Several applied to the strikers for aid to return to New York, saying that they had been brought here under misapprehension.

During the Kensington riots Policeman Levy was shot in the head and is said to be dying. In the same section five cars were piled in the street after being partially demolished with paving stones, and were then set on fire.

In West Philadelphia some strike sympathizers hauled the trolleys from the wire and cut the rope. Several arrests were made, but in many instances the policemen were unable to get their prisoners to the station house on account of the crowds.

The strikers were allowed to remain open, but they were not patronized to any great extent by the striking trolley men, they having been cautioned by their leaders to remain away.

During the day the company claimed to have operated a few more cars than on previous days of the strike. Chairman Pratt of the union carmen advised that some additional cars had been run, but insisted the strikers were more of the old men. None of the strikers who had gone on strike were seen, he said.

The Central Labor Union has determined to take advantage of the political features involved and tonight decided to issue a call upon all its members and sympathizers to celebrate next Saturday, which is primary election day here, as "White Ribbon day." The white ribbon is the emblem chosen by the striking car men. Their sympathizers are asked by the Central Labor union to wear this emblem on election day and to vote for D. Clarence Gibbons for district attorney, and President Murphy of the union forces for the treasury in opposition to the slated Republican nominees.

Why Many Women Suffer From Constipation

The Natural Remedy.

The delicate and intricate character of the female organ makes them most susceptible to irregularity, and it is most important that each one should be kept in a normal manner. When womanhood is perfecting the functions peculiar to her sex there is a decided tendency to sluggishness of the bowels. Nature then requires a gentle assistant. Not powerful and expensive remedies which are so drastic as to damage the tender lining of the bowels and do more harm than good, but a pure and harmless laxative, such as HUNYADI JANOS, Waterbury's famous Natural Laxative, is a lumbrical taken on arising will move the bowels gently but certainly in a natural manner. One bottle contains many doses and costs but a trifle.

At drug stores—but look out for unscrupulous druggists, who will substitute some you ask for HUNYADI JANOS.

DETECTIVE MAKES WILD RUN TO ROUND UP MARTIN'S BROWSING NAG

"My horse has just been stolen. Send some officers out at once to catch the thief." This message was received over the phone at police headquarters shortly before midnight by a man giving his name as Charles Martin, 568 South Ninth East street. In excited voice Martin assured the desk sergeant that the thieves were still in the neighborhood and that by hurrying the officers might overtake them.

Without loss of time Lieutenant Shannon and Detective Howells went out in a buggy, driving the horse at breakneck speed. On reaching the barn at the rear of the house they met their first surprise. A man, armed with rifle, was parading back and forth after the fashion of a soldier doing sentry duty.

"Give up your hands," he shouted, while his weapon shook in his own trembling hands.

"We're officers," replied the pair from headquarters. "Lower that rifle, please."

"Oh, excuse me," came the response in a quavering voice. "I didn't know it. I thought you was horse thieves. My name is Martin. I was the one that telephoned My horse had been stolen, he shouted.

After this polite exchange of salutations Martin recovered his courage and the officers proceeded to business.

"Are you sure it was stolen?" they asked. Martin was positive; he told them the exact hour when the horse was missed and that he thought—just thought—he had seen a pair of suspicious looking strangers leaving the premises. They had no horse, however. The officers insisted upon a description of the missing animal. Martin gave it. That cleared the seeming mystery.

"I guess your horse wasn't stolen," they assured him. "You just had a dream."

And they left the frightened man not more than a half block from the barn. There they found a quiet, gentle appearing animal grazing with satisfaction on the lawn of Martin's neighbor. The animal raised its head as if objecting to the intrusion of strangers. The officers had observed the horse on their way to the barn and it tallied with the description given by Martin.

"Is that your nag?" they asked, and Martin replied in the affirmative.

"Then take it. That horse was just a bit hungry and wandered off to eat up your neighbor's grass," they told him in not the gentlest of terms, and left for headquarters.

ed cliffs and the silk crepons—a sort of crape de chine. One marked departure seen on a new gown lately was a pointed girdle that extended slightly below the waist.

A novelty is a little bunch of fruit worn in front of the jacket and matching the fruit worn on the hat.

Often the pockets of the new pongee suits have the monogram of the wearer embroidered in a contrasting color.

The prevailing long lines call into being a great many panels, and these are variously finished at the edges.

Most of the embroidered designs are large and sprawling, and are done in the same color as the material.

The correct silhouette is attained where all the lines of the frock suggest ease and looseness without fluffiness.

DEATH TAKES FAITHFUL COMPANION OF BISHOP

"General" Stephen Lavin Dies at Holy Cross Hospital After Long Illness.

"General" Stephen Lavin, for thirty-eight years the body servant and constant companion of Bishop Laurence Scanlan, died at 2 o'clock this morning at the Holy Cross hospital. The beloved old "general" was known to all Catholics in this region. His devotion to Bishop Scanlan through all of his years of hardship as a missionary priest, through the early mining camps in Nevada made for him a warm place in the hearts of all of the bishop's followers.

"General" Lavin was born in Ireland about seventy years ago. He became acquainted with Bishop Scanlan forty years ago, in California, and had been with him continuously ever since. For several years the old man had been ill, and his death was not unexpected. There are no near relatives living.

The hair should be parted in the center or on the side. The following masses should be fastened down and then the hat should be put on.

A dress of which is very pretty, trimmed with large pearl buttons or with checkered or solid color bands, or lace or embroidery insertion could be used.

The majority of the coats are three-quarter length, but if a shorter coat is more becoming it may be adopted, provided it does not disturb the line.

The Normandy cap, enlarged and made more important by the Paris milliner, will fashion some of the best summer hats, in batiste, net, tulle or embroidery.

A new silk hat for men has a very little bell and is made of the top material of the wide cloth band, but has no bow.

The correct color for the material, so far as shoes, stockings, gloves, belts, bags and parasols. The latter are of a lovely shade of bronze or natural color.

A little piece of real lace introduced upon the high-necked evening bodice is characteristic of the coming mode.

The smart cutaway styles will evidently continue through the summer. Taffeta silk is back again after many months of enforced retirement.

There will be many stone-gray hats worn this spring by elderly men. Colors are very beautiful, with a profusion of rich and delicate shadings.

The Director tie, made of crochet lace, is a pretty finish to the dressy blouse. Some of the separate gimpes are tied down with ribbons to the waistline.

The new jacket is somewhat of the Louis XVI style, but it is much smarter. Vital contrasts do not exist, except when black and colors are put together.

Poppies and ears of corn and barley are all great favorites on the new hats. Among the new shell hairpins one of the favorite styles is a broad triple loop.

Designers are now doing their best to get away from the familiar jumper effect. The latest collar is of chiffon, the color of the bodice, surmounting a white yoke.

Chemistries of fine batiste are worked laborately in soutache with sleeves to match. Nothing fixed, nothing that has a premeditated look, is permitted about the hat.

Among the tailored suits the coats are not quite as long as they were last winter. Some of the tilted hats are trimmed only on the lower side, which is usually the right.

OVER THE FENCE Neighbor Says Something.

The front yard fence is a famous council place on pleasant days. Maybe to chat with some one along the street or friendly gossip with next door neighbor. Sometimes it is only small talk, but other times neighbor has something really good to offer.

An old resident of Baird, Tex., got some mighty good advice this way once. He says:

"Drinking coffee left me nearly dead with dyspepsia, kidney disease and bowel trouble, with constant pains in my stomach, back and side, and so weak I could scarcely walk."

"One day I was chatting with one of my neighbors about my trouble and told her I believed coffee hurt me. Neighbor said she knew lots of people to whom coffee was poison, and she pleaded with me to quit it and give Postum a trial. I did not take her advice right away, but tried a change of climate which did not do me any good. Then I dropped coffee and took up Postum."

"My improvement began immediately and I got better every day I used Postum."

"My bowels became regular and in two weeks all my pains were gone. Now I am well and strong and can eat anything I want to without distress. All of this is due to my having quit coffee, and to the use of Postum regularly."

"My son who was troubled with indigestion thought that if Postum helped me, so it might help him. It did, too, and he is now well and strong again."

"We like Postum as well as we ever liked the coffee and use it altogether in my family in place of coffee and all keep well." "There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

AS TO SAUSAGES. (Marshallfield (Wis.) News.)

William Wenzel, a butcher, is sometimes as funny as an almanac. The other day when he was busy doing up telephone orders a woman stepped in, and, looking around the shop, asked him what he had in sausage. Wenzel can't keep a secret, and he told her "meat." "You don't seem to quite understand me," said the woman; "what I mean is what you have got and which is the best." "Oh," said Wenzel, "I have all kinds. To my notion the wurst is the best."

REVERSED. "I understand that you said some of my jokes were as old as the hills?" interrupted the struggling humorist in crestfallen tones.

"My dear sir, you have been misinformed," laughed the busy editor. "What I said was that some of the hills were as old as your jokes."

HOW THINGS GET STARTED.

(Indianapolis News.) "As state health commissioner, going from place to place over the state inspecting sanitary conditions, I often run against ludicrous interpretations of the most minor steps taken because of my personal ideas of hygiene and sanitation," said Dr. J. N. Hurty, secretary of the state board of health and state health commissioner. "These interpretations find their way into the newspapers in the smaller towns, and I frequently find myself put to it to go to considerable trouble to explain away false impressions."

"Not long ago I was called to a county not far from Indianapolis to look into the sanitary conditions in a village where smallpox had broken out. On arriving at the county seat, shortly before noon, I made a survey of the hotels of the place, and decided that I couldn't put up with the insanitary conditions about them, so I went to a grocery store and bought three fresh eggs, a box of factory sealed biscuits and some bananas. While in the grocery store I broke the eggs and swallowed them raw. The bananas and biscuits I placed in a baggy I had called and ate them while on the way to the infected village."

"On my return to the county seat late in the afternoon I was handed a copy of an afternoon newspaper published in the town, and found to my surprise that 'Dr. Hurty ate raw eggs as a preventive against smallpox.' A reporter had been told by the grocer that I ate the eggs in the store, and proceeded to misinform the readers of his paper that by 'sucking raw eggs one could go into a smallpox infected district with no danger of catching the disease.' That is the way a lot of beliefs are generated, which the state board of health is spending thousands of dollars to dissipate."

"FARMER" TILLMAN.

(Philadelphia Times.) Senator Benjamin Ryan Tillman of South Carolina left the asparagus beds in good shape when he departed from his farm for Washington to see how the tariff was getting along. It isn't generally known that the senator is one of the largest raisers of asparagus in the country.

This, however, is the fact. "Pitchfork Ben" may not like the idea of northern politicians telling him how to run the south, but he does like the northern markets for asparagus and ships a lot of it to the north.

The senator has studied the subject of asparagus closely and knows all about it. Moreover, Mrs. Tillman, who is a woman of superior capacity, herself gives attention to the asparagus business, and it has become a great success on the Tillman plantation.

Senator Tillman has a farm of 5,000 acres in the west central part of South Carolina, and is one of the wealthiest men in that part of the state.
