audience reverts the smallest alteration in his clowning, and when he wriggles like Rajah, there is a murmur of disapproval. "Never fool your audience," Hastings and Wilson do that when one, with a Sansonian display of real muscles, tosses and juggles his partner. A considerable number of spectators don't perceive that the old trick of wires is being used, and applaud vigorously; and I wouldn't like to be hated as those befuddled once hate Hastings and Wilson when the truth comes out. Well, there you are. That's the single, mid-air variety show in New York.

PRESS AGENTS' PROMISE.

"The Morals of Marcus."

At the Salt Lake theatre on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, and Saturday matinee, Charles Frohman will present the newest addition to his stellar constellation in the person of Miss Marie Doro.

The vehicle for her introduction is a play entitled "The Morals of Marcus." It is an adaptation from W. J. Locke's novel, "The Morals of Sir Marcus Ordeyne," and the stage version has been arranged by the author of the book. The play was first produced in London, where it is said to have had a considerable vogue. The first performance of the play in this country was given at the Park theatre in Boston. After a stay of six weeks, Miss Doro went immediately to New York for an extended engagement at the Criterion theatre. The road tour of the new star has just been inaugurated.

It has been said of the play that it departs from the conventional stage story in that it introduces characters which are said to be as interesting as they are original. Mr. Locke in adapting his novel to theatrical use, has utilized his own ideas and followed established theatrical principles as a stable foundation.

The story has to do with the fortunes and fate of a wisp of a girl named Carliotta. The daughter of an English mother, she had lived in a Turkish harem until one day a young Englishman persuaded her to run away with him. Arrived in England, she has been deserted and left to wander without money or food. The first act finds her weeping through the hedge fence of Sir Marcus Ordeyne's summer place, that nestles by the side of the River Thames.

Sir Marcus Ordeyne is a recluse and bookworm, much more interested in his history of Renaissance morals than in the numerous young marriageable women who have been thrust upon him. The pitiful tale told by the little Syrian refugee, however, softens his nature, and he takes her into his home and adopts her, much to the indignation of his titled friends who have many unimportant remarks to make regarding his morals.

The second act of the play shows the library of Sir Marcus' London house. Six weeks have elapsed in which Sir Marcus has striven to make of his ingenuous and soulless little ward an English woman of refinement and manners. The process is most delightful, but not without its pitfalls for the bookish baronet. Sir Marcus has begun to see the light of love.

The third act shows Carliotta's boudoir in Sir Marcus' London house. Another month has elapsed. Carliotta has improved and developed wonderfully under the tutelage of her protector. She is giving a tea party to the friends of the baronet. The Hamdi Effendi, a Turk, and stepfather to Carliotta, appears on the scene. He demands the return of Carliotta under pain of death. Sir Marcus defies him. A man, Sebastian Pasquale, whom Sir Marcus has considered a friend, now finds his opportunity to persuade Carliotta to run away with him, taking advantage of her fears for the safety of her benefactor.

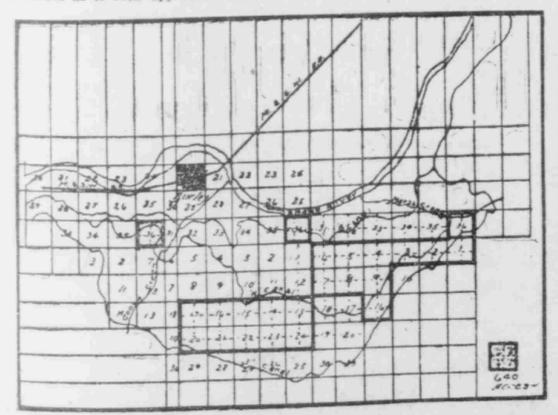

With the departure of Carliotta, Sir Marcus comes to a full realization of what she meant to him, and follows a fruitless search the world over for the woman he loves. Carliotta, in the meantime, has gradually discovered that she is a woman—a woman with a soul and a heart. And Carliotta, in the end, does the natural thing and the ending is cheerful. What that ending is, must in justice to the audience to come, be left to their observation.

"Three Weeks."

Elmer Glyn's dramatization of her own story, "Three Weeks," is announced for one week, beginning Monday.

5,000 ACRES STATE LAND NEAR BURLEY, IDAHO To Be Sold Tuesday, June 15

One of the largest sales of state lands ever held in Idaho is booked for Burley on Tuesday, June 15. The lands to be sold comprise 5,000 acres lying south and south-east of Burley, all of which are under the south side canal. The sale will offer an excellent opportunity to investors, as the lands comprise some of the very best in the state, with good, deep soil and no lava rock to interfere in obtaining wells. The following map shows the location of the lands and description below gives information as to their appraised value, terms of sale, etc.

The heavy lines shown on the above map embrace the State Lands adjacent to Burley, which are to be sold. The square in the lower corner of the illustration shows how the sections are divided into acreage tracts.

TERMS OF SALE are as follows: On all lands selling for $5.00 per acre or less, one-tenth of the purchase price and first year's interest on deferred payments, cash on day of sale, the balance in eight annual installments at 6 per cent interest; on all lands selling for more than $5.00 per acre, two-tenths of the purchase price and first year's interest on deferred payments, cash on day of sale, the balance in sixteen annual installments at 6 per cent interest. VIA OREGON SHORT LINE FROM REDUCED RATES WILL BE MADE FROM IDAHO POINTS JUNE 12, 13 AND 14; FROM IDAHO POINTS JUNE 13, 14 AND 15.

For Detailed Information Write W. T. Jack, Burley, Idaho.

rival of the Bourbon troops, who interrupt a pretty fight. Seeing that his power is gone, and that he is exposed, the governor falls on his sword. Gerard, in the name of his father, "the great Bourbon," takes possession of the province as its protector, rights the wrongs of the people, and marries the beautiful Gabrielle.

There must not be forgotten in the story the beautiful Lucette, the foster sister of the heroine, a finished coquette, who meets her match in the friend of the prince, a dare-devil Parisian named Pascal. Between these two is a lively skirmish of wits and a pretty love story intermingled with that of the principal characters.

The costumes will be that of the time, correct as to detail, picturesque and beautiful. Indeed, dashing and thrilling as the play is, there is great beauty in the scenes. There are many halfbreath escapes and dangers through which the hero takes his way with coolness and audacity, the role being perfectly suited to Mr. Stuart's easy stage manner. Miss Hall makes a lovely and sympathetic Gabrielle, and Cleveland, a pretty and vivacious Lucette. T. N. Heffron is sufficiently villainous as the governor, "The Tiger of Morvaix," and the rest of the company are well cast. The play will run the whole week.

"The Blue Mouse."

"The Blue Mouse," the comedy adapted from the German by Clyde Fitch, which has created something of a sensation all over the country, will have its initial performance at the Grand theatre tomorrow evening, where the Messrs. Shubert will play their attractions in the future.

The piece was first produced in this country at the Lyric theatre, New York, last November, and it drew so well in that city that it will remain there indefinitely, and this circumstance has prompted the Messrs. Shubert to send out a company to play the large cities outside of New York.

"The Blue Mouse" is called a farce comedy, and yet it boasts of a story. While not much is claimed for the "story," it is enough to string out three hours of laughter. The secretary to the president of the Interstate railroad, in order to expedite his promotion to a superintendency that he may better provide for his bride, introduces "The Blue Mouse," a stage dandy, to the president as his wife, and she cajoles and teases him into signing the promotion after a giddy flirtation with the frisky old fellow.

The old man's jealous wife, the secretary's real wife and the dandy's "steady" are drawn into the complications and deceptions that are necessitated by little tete-a-tetes, which are interrupted by the sudden entry of one of the other parties to the tangle of deceptions that follow the main plot. The character of "The Blue Mouse" is one entirely new to the stage. It is portrayed by Miss Elsa Ryan, a winsome little actress. She, "The Blue Mouse," is supposed to be pretty, yet rough, dresses gorgeously, and lives her life according to her own ideas, yet after all, it is said that as Miss Ryan plays the part, she makes it a lovable creature and wins the sympathy of her audiences.

The cast numbers twenty-five speaking parts and, besides Miss Ryan, it includes Geoffrey Stein, whom the Messrs. Shubert will feature next season in a play of his own authorship; Wilton Taylor, who Mr. Fitch declares, was born for the part of the giddy old president; Miss India Palmer, one of the Hoytian school of comedies; M. Carolyn Pearce, Harry Millarde, John Dunn, George MacIntyre and others.

BINGHAM HAPPENINGS.

Bingham, June 3.—Sheriff Joe Sharp has appointed C. D. Coates deputy sheriff at Bingham.

The Utah-Orex Mining company has purchased and installed a new fifteen-hundred-pound hoist.

S. J. Hays is building a new modern up-to-date cottage nearly opposite the Press-Bulletin office, which he is to occupy with his family as soon as completed.

Mike Melich, Sam Hozet and Mat Klech, Austrians, were arrested at 10 o'clock this morning by Deputy Sheriff C. D. Coates for getting into a free-for-all fight near the well-known Mike Bogdan's boarding house. The disturbance was among their own countrymen, and to the surprise of everybody nothing worse than brass knuckles were used. Not a gun was flashed, which is certainly a hopeful symptom for the Austrians at Bingham.

They were brought before Judge Frank H. Cellvetra this morning. Melich was fined $20, Hozet $20 and Klech $10, which they cheerfully paid, evidently having come prepared for the emergency.

Steve Smith, who was arrested several days ago for fighting and otherwise disturbing the peace at Lark, also was arraigned before Judge Cellvetra and fined $5 and costs, which he at once proceeded to liquidate, and went on his way rejecting to the nearest saloon.

James Pinos, bartender at the Union saloon, who was accused of discharging firearms and otherwise disturbing the peace Sunday in a free-for-all fight, in which Alex Furlong was badly stabbed, had his trial before Judge Cellvetra this afternoon. The hearing on the evidence took the case under advisement until tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

Leodore De Marko was fined $10 and costs yesterday on a charge of carrying concealed weapons.

ARE YOU A Perfect Man?

"WEAKNESS"

To produce temporary activity of the functions in cases of so-called weakness is a simple matter, but to permanently restore strength and vigor is a problem that but few physicians have solved. We never treat for temporary effects. Under our system of treatment, every bit of improvement is a part of a permanent cure. Though other physicians have, through our success in effecting permanent cures, been convinced of the fact that prematureness, loss of power, etc., are but symptoms resulting from chronic inflammation of congestion in the prostate gland, none have as yet been able to duplicate our cures. Our system of local treatment is the only effective means yet known for restoring the prostate to its normal state, which always results in full and complete return of strength and vigor. Such a cure is absolutely permanent.
