

SHEEP TICK IS MAKING TROUBLE

Predicted Pest Makes Its Appearance in Many Utah Flocks.

SHEEPMEN WILL MEET

NEARLY A MILLION LAMBS WILL BE SHIPPED EAST.

Sheep tick, an insect pest which plays havoc with the general health of a flock, has made its appearance in Utah after two years' absence of the scourge. Numerous reports of herds thus afflicted have reached the state board of sheep commissioners from the various summer range sections of the state. Steps to catch the epidemic in its incipient stage are being taken and special instructions have been forwarded to the inspectors throughout the state and also the flock masters, advising dipping with special medicinal preparations.

Of these, the sheep commissioners favor the use of coal tar creosote, which has been pronounced by the department of agriculture at Washington as the best germicidal preparation known.

The sheep tick is a small insect which burrows beneath the skin and causes a form of disease which ruins the wool and makes the flesh unfit for use. As a rule it deserts the sheep after the shearing season, leaving numerous eggs in the flesh. These hatch and become full grown ticks during the fall season, when they are wiped out by summer dipping procedure. The present outbreak is reported from the Bear Lake region and from the Verinal district. Instructions to dip their sheep prior to leaving the summer ranges and in addition to the regular fall dipping, have been forwarded to all members of the Utah Wool Growers' association. It is thought the insect will be overcome before the winter season sets in.

Will Hold Meeting.

The state board of sheep commissioners will hold its regular meeting next Wednesday, when the commissioners will meet and confer with the officials of the Wool Growers' association in regard to the shipping season which is now opening.

Nearly a million Utah bred lambs, the product of the spring and summer seasons, will be shipped to eastern markets at prices most advantageous to the sheepmen. The details and routine of the season will be discussed.

and methods suggested for the more economical handling of these shipments. Already the inspectors from the United States bureau of animal industry and those of the state board are working overtime inspecting the prospective mutton consignments. Practically every flockmaster picks out about 40 per cent of his flock annually for mutton shipments. This entails strenuous activity at this season of the year and has a lively effect on the livestock business handled by the railroads.

BUREAU ANXIOUS TO BEGIN SUIT

Extra Clerks Are at Work Getting Evidence Ready for Hearing.

Word that the interstate commerce commission will meet in Salt Lake September 22, instead of one month later, was received with pleasure by the Salt Lake Commercial club traffic bureau yesterday.

The bureau has received no official notification of the change other than the change in date in yesterday's Herald-Republican, and it may be several days before the notification from the commission reaches the bureau by mail.

The last official communication from the interstate commerce commission received by the local traffic bureau was dated August 13, and this letter said that on the return of the commissioners from their vacations, the dates for the western hearings would be set. According to this letter, the commission intended to go to Spokane first. From there hearings would be held in other cities of the northwest, and then the commission would go to San Francisco, Reno and Phoenix, finishing in Salt Lake.

The fact that Salt Lake was really the hub of the western country so far as the traffic bureau is concerned, was presented properly to the commission, and the decision to hold the hearing at Salt Lake first was the apparent result.

The local traffic bureau has prepared volumes of evidence in the case, covering every phase of the situation. It is probable that more than one hearing in the case will be held, for the reason that the traffic bureau will require that certain books of the railroads be produced before the commission which will not be available until the commission issues a formal order that they be produced.

Answers to the complaint filed with the interstate commerce commission are being received by the traffic bureau, and the Missouri Pacific being received yesterday.
