This work has proved quite an expense, but the citizens have responded enthusia astically and the entire city is taking a pride in its appearance.

The Ladies' Aid society of the church had not been idle, but for the entire winter had been laying aside money for new steps. These have just been completed, according to plans drawn by City Engineer A. F. Parker. There is a substantial coping reaching out from the pilasters in the front and wide steps in between with a six-inch raise and a one-foot tread. Narrower steps with a steeper pitch were necessary on the east side. The tower now adds the appearance of dignity and massiveness to the entire church and is an ornament which not only improves the appearance of Twenty-fourth street, but which is a credit to the notire city.

There was not room inside the burial ground for more than fifteen or twenty besides the mourners and the two officiating clergymen. Others stood in the road outside and looked over the high stone wall.

In his sermon, Dr. Talbott took for his text the clause from Isalah: "We all do fade as a leaf." The preacher carried to take the leaves of the Isalah: "We all do fade as a leaf." The preacher carried the leaves of the forest and the lives of men. He said that as the leaf faded surely and quickly so this life from the mother's arms to the bier was sure and short. The leaf, he said, was useful and the tree was better because the leaf had lived, so the lives of men should be useful and the world better because of them. In concluding, Dr. Talbott spoke of the leveling effect of the text.

"There are distinctions in leaves," he said. "Some of them are irregular in shape and ill-proportioned. Some are of no distinct or attractive hue. On the contrary, there are others which in form and hue seam to have taxed the skill of the leates of the leaves of the leaves of the leaves of the high stone was notified of the vicious assault, the youth dropped to the sidewalk with a cry of palm.
