JURY IN TARRING CASE HAS NOT YET REACHED A VERDICT

MOB LEADERS SCORCHED FOR TARRING GIRL

Prosecutor McCannless Calls Upon the Jury to Vindicate the Good Names of the State of Kansas—Jury is Still Discussing Question.

Lincoln Center, Kan., Nov. 22.—With but two more closing arguments to be delivered, it looks tonight as though the "tar party" case will be in the hands of the jury by tomorrow noon.

All the testimony is now completed and the attorneys for the defense regard the judge's instruction as highly favorable to their clients. Prosecutor McCannless says he is satisfied with them, however.

In his speech to the jury McCannless scorched the tar party members and spoke as follows:

"During my practice I have sent men to the penitentiary for felonies, but I have never had a case that could equal the one at the bar in enormity of cowardice and brutality. I regret indeed that our laws are so lame, our legislators so lax that we find it necessary after an offense of this nature has been perpetrated in our midst that we must be content to send the offenders to jail or heap upon them an insignificant fine. Certainly an offense of this nature will never be committed again and be subjected to a similar punishment. And yet our legislature, our people, our students of political economy, doubtless never dreamed that a law of this nature would be found necessary to put into effect.

"Tar and feathers! A relic of an ancient times! Tarring a girl, think of it! One of our own girls, one of our own citizens, right here in the center of civilization. I have heard of such things taking place in barbaric times, but I never believed it. I have heard that they would sometimes take a man and tar him and then ride him on a rail. But did you ever hear of a bunch of men tarring a helpless girl? One who cannot defend herself. It is simply awful. Why, Robin Hood and his gang of desperadoes would start at such a thing. They who made their living by forage, by highway robbery, would blush to do such a thing as this band of desperadoes did on the night of the 7th of August, 1911.

"It has been intimated through the conduct of this trial that Miss Chamberlain is not a girl of good reputation and character. This I would challenge most strenuously if it were necessary, if her reputation were an issue. I care not who Miss Chamberlain is, nor what she is. That matters not. She may be the vilest character on top of the earth, yet she is just as much entitled to the protection of our laws as if she were an angel.

"No matter how grievously she has broken the moral or legal laws her punishment is not a coat of tar. If she did that which is improper, let her be brought before this same tribunal that is trying these defendants. There she would get her just punishment if she deserved it. But where in the name of God, and all reason, did these men, who on this awful night so desecrated our laws, customs and ethics, get their all-important right to judge her without trial, take her ruthlessly and forcibly out of the conveyance in which she was riding and thus chasten her? Why, even a dog deserves better treatment than was given Mary Chamberlain that night.

"Gentlemen, this girl is our sister; this girl is one of the daughters of Kansas. This girl calls for the protection of our laws and our state. It is your duty to give it to her. You can if you will. Will you, in your verdict today, blot from the spangled banner the star that glitters to the name of Kansas and leave the stripe behind, a fit emblem of her degradation, or will you, by the word 'guilty,' continue to make it one of the brightest stars that shines upon the broad field of our national flag?

"Mary Chamberlain was tried, condemned and punished before a worse than Pontius Pilate. I hope by your verdict you will triumphantly punish her unjust treatment. I will leave the case in your hands."

Lincoln Center, Nov. 23.—The jury in the tar party case had not reached a verdict at a late hour. Instructions were given by the judge that special ballots stay with the jury after an intermission, until the verdict was reached.

INDIRECT BENEFIT DERIVED FROM SUGAR BEET CULTURE

Truman G. Palmer, secretary of the American Beet Sugar Association in a letter to Senator Reed Smoot, dated July 17, 1911, has many good things to say of the sugar beet industry and the indirect benefits derived from that source:

"A recent magazine article which dealt in glittering generalities was put out under the caption, 'The United States feeding the world.' One of the statements made was that when we shipped our cotton to Europe we sent with it the food products to feed the starving workmen who made it into fabrics and laces.

"One phase of our all too prevalent vulgar boastfulness would be cured if we but realized that Europe, without Russia (the granary of Europe), occupying but 45 per cent of our surface area, tills double the number of acres of wheat, rye, barley, oats, and potatoes that we till, and from that double area devoted to these five crops their farmers harvest four times the number of bushels that our farmers harvest; that of these five crops Europe produce more bushels per capita for their 300,000,000 people than we do for our 90,000,000 people, and that during the past 30 years Europe has increased her acreage yield of these five crops 75 per cent, while we have increased ours but 8 per cent.

"Although my study of the beet-sugar industry extends over a period of 15 years, during 9 of which I have been secretary of the American Beet Sugar Association, it was not until I began making study trips in Europe that the full value of the industry in its inter-related connection with general agriculture dawned upon me and since then I have devoted a large portion of my time to a study of this particular feature of the industry.

"Anybody will admit that it would be desirable to produce at home the $180,000,000 worth of sugar we annually import from foreign countries and our island possessions, and turn this vast sum into the pockets of our own instead of foreign farmers and laborers. That in itself would be a consideration of great economic value to the Nation, but it would be small indeed compared to the indirect benefits to be derived if we produced this sugar from beets, the cultivation of which in Germany, in rotation with wheat, rye, barley, oats, and potatoes, has resulted in their farmers securing from the land which they devoted to these five crops an excess from a like area devoted to the same crops and if from our total area devoted to these five crops our farmer secured as great a yield as do the German farmers our farmers would be richer by $1,400,000,000 a year.

"If our farmers were made to know that by proper rotation the culture of 40 acres of sugar beets would increase their yield of all other crops on 160 acres from 20 to 80 per cent, you could not build factories fast enough to care for the beets they would furnish. Gradually they will find it all out for themselves, but it is a slow process.

"Five years ago a beet-sugar factory was erected at Chaska, Minn., where it since has been operated each year, and as evidence of the time it takes to disprove erroneous impressions and absorb the truths which Napoleon publicly proclaimed a century ago, and which since have been proclaimed by practically every European agricultural economist of note, I quote a local notice which recently appeared in the Wabasha (Minn.) Herald. This notice says:

"One of the best crops of wheat raised in this vicinity this year was that of George Hauswedel. The wheat was a fine stand of good quality and well filled out. There were 14 acres, and the result in thrashing was an average of 32 bushels to the acre. This causes a surprise to many farmers, since the field was planted to sugar beets last year, and the impression prevails that a crop of the latter will so exhaust the soil as to yield a poor crop of grain the next year. Mr. Hauswedel, however, has demonstrated the fallacy of this supposition. We understand that the soil was given no special treatment, and no particular effort was made toward securing an exceptional result.

"You see that with a factory operating in their midst for five years the erroneous impression still prevails

A. C. PEOPLE AT UTAH HOME ECONOMIC ASSOCIATION

Professor Ellen A. Huntington of the Utah Agricultural College, as chairman of the Utah Home Economics' Association announces that the association will meet in Salt Lake City at the Hotel Utah on November 28th and 29th to consider questions relative to the introduction of home economics into the grades of the state and to discuss the question of school lunches and the co-relation of art with home economics work. There will also be taken up at this meeting the Ellen H. Richards' Memorial Fund which is under the direction in Utah of Mrs. Leah D. Widtsoe.

It is proposed at this meeting to take steps towards the securing of Utah's share of the one hundred thousand dollars which it is proposed to raise to memorialize the work of Mrs.

Richards, who is, according to Mrs. Widtsoe, one of the famous educators of the world.

Matters of detail, in addition to those mentioned, will be considered. There will be a report of the secretary and treasurer and a two minute report from each member of the association covering practical phases of home economics work as it has come under the observation of the members. Some of the Logan residents, most of whom are graduates of the Agricultural College of Utah, represented on the program are: Miss Lizzie O. McKay of the class of 1910, Mrs. Hazel L. Dunford of the class of 1908, Miss Susannah Perry of the class of 1902 and Miss Leah Ivins of the class of 1911.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTION INVOLVING THE SUM OF $20,000

Spande Furniture Company Purchases the Three Story Brick Building of C. W. & M. Co.

The biggest real estate transaction in the recent history of Logan city was consummated Thursday evening when the Spande Furniture company purchased the three story brick structure on Center street now occupied in part, by the Consolidated Wagon & Machine company, from that firm. The consideration is reliably reported as being $20,000.

This beautiful block will at once be vacated by the former owners, the stock being transferred to their building adjoining, and the work of remodeling preparatory to opening up a strictly ideal furniture store will begin the building which is already equipped with an electric elevator, fire proof vault, etc., will make commodious quarters for the Spande people, and all four floors of the building will be in use.

The sale included the building which has base measurement of 38x90 ft, a eight of way both east and west and a vacant section in the rear which has a measurement of 20x60 feet.

The Spande Furniture company will enter their new store February 1, 1912.

TONIGHT AT TABERNACLE

The U. A. C. Lyceum course presents Miss Nora Eliason, soloist, pupil of Gmyrgelmo, Caruso and Isidore Lickstone of New York, and Miss Sarah Huntsman, reader, pupil of Prof. S. H. HOWELL GOES TO WASHINGTON

Congressman Joseph Howell and family, including Luther Howell and wife, left Thursday morning for Washington, D. C., where they will spend the winter.

Immediately upon reaching the capitol the family will enter their beautiful new home on Vermont Avenue.

William Stewart and Miss Mabel Richards of Logan were united in marriage in this city Wednesday, the ceremony being performed by Mayor Thomas H. Blackburn. Mr. and Mrs. Stewart departed immediately after the ceremony for their home in Logan.—Box Elder News.

NOTED LECTURER IS COMING HERE

An attraction that will meet with all expectations of the people of Logan is that of Chas. H. Hampton, the convict lecturer who will be at the Princess on Thursday and Friday. On account of the great demand from theatre managers who realize the importance of this class of attraction, he will be here only two nights. The people want something that applies to our every-day life, and reports from other places which have booked this attraction indicate that this will fill the bill.

Mr. Hampton has the only set of pictures shown to the public today which depict the actual every-day life of both men and women convicts and he takes his audience through every department of this great prison where more than 1600 unfortunate men and women are paying the penalty of their transgression. The rules and regulations, the whipping post, dungeon cells and other punishments are shown. The lecture will be given in addition to the regular picture show.

Every man, woman and child in this community should see this, and especially our boys.
