L. S. Smart just sold 30,000 pounds of wool to a Boston firm, the price received being 16 1/2 cents per pound. Mr. Smart says the wool market is very good at the present time. He reports that his sheep are being moved to the spring range after feeding all winter.

What Happened To Jones, that popular drama, full of humor from beginning to end. Fourth ward, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings at 8:15.—Adv. m3

The seating capacity of the Second ward meeting house was taxed to the limit, on Sunday evening when the A. C. choir, under the able directorship of Professor George W. Thatcher, rendered a splendid musical program. There were vocal solos by Miss Emma Linnartz, Mr. Hess, Miss Mabel Allen, Mr. Don Smith and others. The choir members were unusually good.

The Thatcher Milling Co., have just installed an up to date steam roller in their mill and are now prepared to furnish to the farmers and the trade rolled barley, wheat and oats in any quantity. Rolled barley makes an ideal feed for horses, cows and hogs. By giving it a trial you will be convinced.—Adv. m3

The Wellsville basketball champs of Cache county won the game from Brigham City High school at Wellsville Friday night and Saturday night at Brigham City, the Wellsville boys were defeated. This places these teams of the northern division a tie and the deciding game will be played some time this week, probably in Logan.

Don't forget a bouquet of carnations for mother or sweetheart at Lindquist's on Friday. All colors, 45 cents per dozen.—Adv. m5

Logan is to have a carnation day at Lindquist's March 6. Mr. G. W. Lindquist has purchased 2000 carnations for distribution at his parlors on Friday. They will be of all colors and just beauties for a bouquet for mother or sweetheart. No one can well afford to miss seeing these beautiful flowers on display. They will make a veritable garden of flowers. In addition to this being carnation day, Mr. Lindquist never fails to have a big variety of cut flowers of all kinds.

An effort is being made by some of the enterprising citizens to thrash out the water question, or the improvement of the city water system. It is understood that a meeting was held last evening by the Commercial club committee and the city commissioners.

R. L. Campbell, local representative for the General Service Corporation, has filed the $1000 bond for his company with the city officials, thus complying with the terms of the franchise which was recently granted the company. Mr. Campbell has nothing new in the way of late developments in the gas business which he came to give out to the public at the present time.

FIRST AMERICAN PERFORMANCE OF GUSTAV CHARPENTIER'S JULIEN

New York, Feb. 28.—Julien, an allegorical opera composed by Gustav Charpentier had its American premiere at the Metropolitan opera house last night. The sequel of the French composer's Louise, was the most ambitious effort of the Metropolitan operatic season and was a more difficult production, said Managing Director Gatti Casazza than two Parsifals.

Enrico Caruso in the title role of the poet Julien, and Geraldine Farrar, who essayed no less than five different roles in the opera, were the leading principals. There were numerous curtain calls for the artists, indicating an enthusiastic appreciation of the beauties of Charpentier's musical creation, which was characteristic of the composer in its invention.

The part of Julien kept Caruso on the stage for more than three hours—From the opening of the first scene to the end of the opera.

JUST RIGHT FOR BACKACHE AND RHEUMATISM

Foley Kidney Pills are so thoroughly effective for backache, rheumatism, swollen, aching joints, kidney and bladder ailments that they are recommended everywhere. A. A. Children Need Protection. Because they have less resisting power, children are more susceptible to all kinds of disease germs than older persons. This is why every child should be early taught to avoid the habits which lead to infection. It is little short of a criminal risk to allow a child to work or play in a room or yard that is not clean as it can be made.

Congressmen Inspect Mines With the Union

Several Investigators Take Hand At Trammung. Five Shovelfuls Enough for Utah Representative

Calumet, Mich., Feb. 28.—Four tired congressmen stepped out of a hoisting cage at a Calumet & Hecla shaft last night after spending the greater part of the day in the copper mines, having been at one time nearly a mile under earth. They observed the conditions under which the underground workers labor. Judge Taylor of Arkansas was the only member of the congressional subcommittee who did not visit the mines.

Led by John Knox, general superintendent of the Calumet & Hecla company, the investigators descended with Hubert Laux, a striker who represents the union men, and Thomas James mine inspector of Houghton county, and two newspaper correspondents.

The committee was equally attentive to Laux and Captain Knox and the former was given full opportunity to point out the conditions about which he complained on the witness stand. Laux said, after the day's inspection was over, that conditions in the mines were much better than they were before the strike, but that the miners have no guarantee that they will continue as they are unless they have the backing of a powerful union.

Two men were encountered early in the day's trip rigging up one of the so called one man drills. Laux called the attention of the committee to the fact, remarking that it was too heavy for one man to handle.

Captain Knox replied that miners were supposed to assist each other in setting up their machines. On another occasion he pointed out three men pushing a heavy tram car, work which he said formerly was done by two men. The miners were found drifting within calling distance of each other, another condition which Laux said did not exist before the strike. Captain Knox and the mine bosses insisted that working conditions today were not appreciably different than they had been for years.

Coming upon a trammer shovelling rock into a car, Mr. Taylor thought he would like to try his hand at it, and he made the dirt fly for a minute or two.

I guess that's enough for me, the chairman said, puffing and blowing from exertion. Here Howell, you try it.

Representative Howell of Utah paused after depositing the fifth shovelful and wanted to know whether he was working on contract or company account.

On your own terms, the mine captain responded.

Then let Casey do it, the Utah representative said.

Representative Casey went at it like an old hand. I'll show you fellows that I can come back, he asserted, and the Croatian trammer looked on in silent admiration while the Pennsylvania miner congressman filled the car about three times as fast as he could have done it himself.

None of the congressmen cared to tackle the drill, although each confessed that it appeared easy enough to operate after it was rigged.

The investigators plan to go to Lake Linden to investigate the stamp mills and will resume their public hearings in Houghton.

Celebrates Ninety-Second Anniversary

as a weaver in one of the small towns in that country. One night as he was going home from work he heard some one talking in an alley. With Irish curiosity, he groped his way down the dark passage into the light. To him this was a groping and a finding the light in two ways; he found the light of the candle that enabled a rather young Mormon elder to read from the Doctrine and Covenants; and when he left that place he was a convert to the religion which has brought him thousands of miles away from his home and relations, he being the only one of his family ever to embrace the Mormon faith.

At the time he joined the church he was 19 years old. Six years later he left Ireland and went to live in Scotland. In 1850 he came to America, having a very narrow escape in a ship wreck on the way. In describing what happened the old gentleman grows very spirited. The masts were blown away, he said on his ninety-second birthday in speaking of this event and all the grub got awful mixed—especially the molasses and oatmeal. Only one man lost his life and one old lady had a black eye. But we got out alright; a steamer picked us up in about ten days. When it found us we were blown back two weeks from where we were when the storm struck us.

Traveled With Soldiers

He worked in Pennsylvania until he came to Utah in 1857. That was the year that Johnston's army crossed the plains, and the company that Andrews was with traveled with it until they reached Fort Bridger. He says they enjoyed the company of the soldiers. On one occasion he saw a soldier with a coil of rope and upon being asked what it was for the soldier replied that he thought it was to be used in hanging the Mormons. Whereupon he was told that he had better be careful or the Mormons might get hold of it and hang him. Of course, the pioneer explained when he had finished telling me, I think we were both joking.

After arriving in Salt Lake City he was employed as a weaver. That winter he said, I wove over fifteen hundred yards of cloth and got twenty-five cents for every yard. Now you can buy the stuff for half that already made.

When spring came he went to work for Brigham Young as a gardener. Brigham was a fine man, he replied on being asked his opinion. He was a regular father to us; he found work for the men where there was no work to be found. He was the man that did most of the prophesying. Once he prophesied that the day was coming when states goods could be bought cheaper here than in the states. Then after he said it he was afraid that he had said the wrong thing. But when the soldiers left they sold their things for almost nothing. I remember before that I took four sacks of flour down to Walkers store, and got a hundred dollars for them. Things were dear those days. Not less interesting than Mr. Andrews is his wife, who is his fourth companion of this life's voyage. She has buried two husbands and is 82 years of age. Like her mate, she is a young person. As he says, Yes, we are two pretty spry young chaps. In remarking how young they both felt she said: Yes, it is pretty nice for grandpa to have some young persons to take care of him now when his eyes get tired as for she reads The Deseret News to him now when his eyes are tired which they do much more readily than they did when we first subscribed for that paper forty years ago.—Deseret News.
