

Austro-Italian Tension Extreme

Rome Awaiting Ultimatum From Vienna Which May Sever All Friendly Ties

London, April 19.—Whether the negotiations between Rome and Vienna concerning Italy's demands for territorial concessions have been broken off remains for the moment an official secret, but it appears to be universally agreed that the tension is approaching the breaking point. It is suggested here that the Italian foreign office is awaiting an ultimatum from Vienna on the subject of Italy's military preparations along the frontier as a pretext to sever the remaining ties barring an outbreak of hostilities.

The alertness with which every move, diplomatic or otherwise, made by Italy is now followed in London, indicates the high importance attached here to efforts to bring Italy to the fighting line. One of the main reasons advanced for this desire to include Italy in the partnership of the allies is that in no other way is it possible to close effectually the door through which supplies still are reaching the Teutonic allies in considerable amount.

American Guns Confiscated

A case in point is the confiscation by the Swiss authorities, announced in Geneva today of a carload of machine guns of American manufacture which was on the way to Germany from Genoa. Shipments of iron, copper, antimony and sulphate have been reaching Germany with a fair degree of regularity.

It is asserted today that a sudden embargo has been placed on Como on a train load of these supplies and that Italy and Rumania have taken joint action in refusing to allow food stuffs for the civilian population of Austria Hungary to traverse their territories.

Although there has been much fighting in both the eastern and western fields, operations on a big scale are still awaiting improvement in the weather on one side and adequate supplies on the other. Indications are however, in both the Carpathians and Poland that the greatest battle yet to be fought is imminent and that the coming clash in the Carpathians will coincide with a great German advance from the direction of Cracow.

Activities in the Dardanelles are taken to presage an important movement any day now against the Turkish positions on the straits.

Long Distance is Used in Swindle

Max Weil is Called on Telephone From Kansas City to Guarantee Draft for "Friend"

Salt Lake, April 19.—An alleged swindler who gave the name of Murray Kohn at the Sexton hotel in Kansas City one day last week is "credited" with being the first to use the long distance telephone to aid in swindling operations. Max Weil of Salt Lake, of the Well Jewelry company, was on the local end of the telephone and finds himself out $7.05 toll charges and in the position of "co-victim" with the Sexton hotel.

Mr. Weil was called to the telephone in his apartment at the Bransford. Long distance operator informed him that Kansas City wished connection with his telephone—charges collect. Inquiry brought forth the information that a man who gave his name as Murray Kohn of Silberman, Kohn & Wallenstein of New York wished to speak to Mr. Weil. Mr. Weil and Mr. Kohn have been friends for many years and Mr. Weil readily agreed to pay the charges.

Gets Busy on Telegraph

The voice at the other end of the telephone stated that its owner was "in trouble" and wished to cash a draft for $35 at the Sexton hotel. Would Mr. Weil guarantee the draft? He would. On second thought, however, after the receiver had been hung up, Mr. Weil telegraphed the hotel to withhold cashing the check pending further information.

Another telegram was sent to New York, the answer to which brought the information that Mr. Kohn of Silberman, Kohn & Wallenstein was in New York and not in Kansas City.

A second telegram to the Sexton hotel told them not to cash the draft. But the draft had been cashed and "Mr. Murray Kohn" was $35 in pocket; the Sexton was $35 out of till and Mr. Weil was $7.05 out of pocket for the telephone call.

Refuses Payment

The draft arrived at the Merchants Bank in Salt Lake Saturday and was taken to Mr. Weil. Mr. Weil refused payment, stating the circumstances. Just who is responsible for the $35 remains to be settled. In the meantime the American Hotel Protective association has spread the alarm among police departments to be on the lookout for the man who gave the name of Murray Kohn and endorsed the draft with the name "Murray Kohn."

YOUR BOYS AND GIRLS

If the busy mother will wash the baby's jackets or the children's sweaters in the usual way and then put them in a clean pan and set them in a warm place to dry, they will be like new. Turn them often and shake a little as they dry and they will be found as soft and fluffy as when purchased and not pulled out of shape as when hung on the line to dry.

Muslins and cotton goods can be rendered almost fireproof if an ounce of alum or sal ammoniac is put in the last water in which they are rinsed or in the starch when they are stiffened. This is a particularly wise precaution to take with children's clothes, for even if the clothes do manage to take fire, which is highly improbable, they will burn without flames.

For a child's birthday party bake little cakes in gem pans. When ready for icing make a small hole in the top of each cake and slip in a tiny dollop, the penny variety will do. Then ice as desired. The icing will hold the dollop in place and each little girl will be delighted with a dolly cake.

Dispels Anxiety About Turtle Bay

U. S. Visitor Reports Finding No Japanese Activity Except in Salvaging

Washington, April 19.—Commander Noble Irwin of the cruiser New Orleans reported to the navy department today that he had investigated the Japanese naval activity in Turtle Bay, Lower California, and found no indications other than salvage work on the stranded cruiser, Asama.

The commander's report was sent by wireless to Admiral Howard, commanding the Pacific fleet, who telegraphed it to Secretary Daniels, as follows:

"The Asama still aground in San Bartolome bay. Only other vessel present one repair ship and two colliers. No indications of other than salvage work."

Secretary Daniels had called upon Admiral Howard for a special report in view of the press dispatches telling of the assembling of a squadron of foreign warships in Turtle Bay, of a large camp established by the Japanese ashore and of mines laid in the harbor.

The Asama has been aground in the secluded Mexican haven since December, and the reports indicated that the presence of other ships aiding in getting her afloat was being made the excuse for the establishment of a permanent base of operations.

The Japanese embassy issued a statement declaring the operations were solely for salvage purposes, and denying that there was any intention of establishing a naval base, and later General Cantu, military governor of Lower California, telegraphed the Villa authorities that the Japanese activities were limited to salvaging the Asama.

Yesterday Admiral Howard sent orders by wireless to the New Orleans, which had left San Diego, California, Friday for Mazatlan, Mexico, directing Commander Irwin to stop at Turtle Bay exchange the usual visits of courtesy, and report upon what was going on there.

Some Hints For Mothers

This damp weather in early spring is hard on the child and the mother should see to it that the little one is kept as dry as possible. That does not mean that the child must not go out of doors at all, as it is best to accustom him from his first year to go outdoors in all sorts of weather. But it does mean that the proper sort of clothing should be worn.

Protect the child's feet with good, sensible shoes and stockings and rubbers, and then if he comes in with damp shoes all that is necessary is to remove the shoes and stockings, dry the little feet and let him play about until he is nice and warm in case he was at all chilled when out of doors.

Fresh air is necessary but that does not mean that the child should sit in a direct draft. Of course, out of doors there are no drafts, and he is not nearly so likely to take cold there as he would be if sleeping or sitting in the house with the wind blowing from an open door or window directly upon him. The child can always be shielded from the direct draft, and it is often wise to place a screen about the bed if the windows are so situated that they cannot be opened without the wind blowing directly on the child.

Do not take your child on the street cars such weather as is generally typical of this time of year, because the cars are crowded and ill smelling. This is almost necessary, as so many people object to pure air in a car, and it seems impossible to get such air and not oblige some one to sit in a draft. It would never enter into the heads of the street car men to open the ventilators above and windows open below make it unpleasant for nervous and ill persons. Therefore keep the baby at home until the cars can be better ventilated.

Do not worry over diseases that the child may "catch," but do not subject it to any unnecessary contact with children who may have catching diseases.

Europe One Century Ago

While the spring campaign in Europe's great war is opening up, says a statement issued by the National Geographic society today, "and the question is pending as to whether or not the coming summer will end hostilities as those of Napoleonic wars were ended in the year of which this is the centennial, it is interesting to go back a hundred years for a glimpse of the process by which the map of the continent was remade at that time.

"In March, 1814, Great Britain, Austria, Russia and Prussia entered into a treaty binding them to stand together until peace was concluded. A little less than three months later France, with Napoleon beaten, entering into a secret agreement with these powers giving them the disposition of all countries which the little corporal's fall had liberated from French control.

"The allies decided to hold a congress at Vienna for the distribution of the spoils of the war. As soon as they met there Great Britain, Austria, Russia and Prussia decided that they would first settle all controversies themselves and then call in France and Spain to ratify what they had done. France was represented by Talleyrand, and he declared that France would never give its assent to such a course of procedure. Sweden and Portugal were finally added as members of the congress, and it was not long until bones of contention were thrown into the arena of debate upon which the four allies could reach no agreement among themselves. One of these was the question of the disposition of Saxony and Poland. Russia insisted that she should have the whole of Poland as the price of its contribution to the war. England, through its leading firmly opposed the pretensions of Alexander.

"The diplomatic war continued for a number of months with England standing by France, her late enemy, against Russia, her recent ally. Finally with Russia showing no signs of yielding, France, Austria and Great Britain entered into a secret treaty of defense, the purpose of which was to force Russia to terms. The allies probably would thus have fought among themselves at that time, just as the allies did after the Balkan war a few years ago, had not Napoleon reappeared on the scene of action as their common enemy again.

"The outcome of the bickerings in the congress resulted in Austria and Prussia retaining most of their Polish dominions, with the remainder going to Russia under an agreement that it should be a separate kingdom, ruled by the czar of Russia, according to its own constitution. Switzerland was given a constitution; Italy retained Lombardy and Venetia; and Holland kept Belgium, Luxemburg and Limburg. Sweden, losing Finland to Russia, secured Norway as compensation.

"England made a proposal that the slave trade of Europe should be abolished which resulted in a declaration of abolition, leaving each country free to fix its own date of abolition.

"It was the purpose of the English representatives to secure a solemn guarantee from the members of the congress to make collective war on any nation that might undertake to disturb the agreement of partition. This plan partook something of the nature of an international court such as is today recommended by many peace advocates. But the return of Napoleon forced the adjournment of the congress, almost before it had parted out the territory at issue, and wholly before it could take up and adjust those matters which may have more fully made for permanent peace."

TOILET HINT

The most useful article in the entire manure set is the orange stick. This can be obtained for a trifle at any drug store. With this the nails can be cleaned each time the hands are washed and the skin which adheres to the nails carefully pushed back. This may also be done with a dry towel. It will prevent the skin from cracking around the roots of the nails and forming hang nails. This method practiced daily will greatly improve the hands.

Trawler Sent Down; All Hands Crowned

British Admiralty Calls It Murder and Says a Record is Being Kept

London, April 19.—The official press bureau states that the admiralty tonight confirms the report that the trawler Vanilla was torpedoed and sunk, with all hands, by a German submarine on Sunday.

The press bureau describes the occurrence as a useless killing of fisher folk and declares the action of the Germans to be murder.

The admiralty announces that the trawler Fermo tried to rescue the crew of the Vanilla, but was fired upon by the submarine and driven off.

The admiralty comments on the disaster as follows:

"This killing of fisher folk for no military reason should not escape attention.

"It is the second murder of this character within a week. A careful record is being kept of these events."

The first report of the sinking of the Vanilla was brought by Captain Hill, skipper of the trawler Fermo. Captain Hill said he was within 300 yards of the Vanilla when she was struck. He says he made an effort to pick up the Vanilla's crew, but shots from the German forced him to run for his own safety.
