CHINESE HAVE DAY OF THANKS

The moon feast is one of the most popular and widely spread of all the Chinese pagan festivals. It has many of the characteristics of the ancient moon-worship ceremonies of Syria and Phoenicia, and it comes as near to being a thanksgiving festival as any heathen feast could ever expect to be, celebrating the ingathering of the harvest. To the masses of the Chinese, however, there appears to be but a faint idea of genuine thanksgiving connected with this moon feast. It is simply the remnant of an ancient institution, coming down from the remotest antiquity as a meaningless act of nature worship. It is possible that in the beginning, among the early Chinese people, the moon festival may have been less pagan and more characterized by feelings of thankful rejoicing than it is at present. However that may be, no wiser choice could have been made by the missionaries in China toward establishing a genuine national Thanksgiving feast than the selection of the day of the popular moon feast.

The moon feast was first proclaimed a thanksgiving festival in 1906 at Wuchang, where the large church was filled with a well-ordered crowd of Chinese, celebrating for the first time the newly appointed thanksgiving day. The sacred building was beautifully adorned with offerings of staple articles of Chinese diet, like beans, rice, millet and other grains, not to speak of pomegranates, pears, apples, wine, salt and flour.

Wuchang is a great city of nearly a million inhabitants, situated far up the Yangtse-Kiang, in the heart of China. Its central position, among the teeming myriads of heathen Chinese, renders it a good point for the spread of helpful and uplifting ideas and truths, and in view of the readiness of the Chinese at home to adopt the best things presented to them for their own good, it is expected that the old moon feast will be gradually adopted, in its newly baptized form, as the national thanksgiving day among the 2,000,000 or 3,000,000 of Chinese at present under the influence of Christianity, and in this way also gradually become the national thanksgiving day among the votaries of Buddhism, Confucianism, and Taoism, in the course of their emancipation from the grosser features of these time-honored religions.

WEALTH WAITS THE GARNERING

To every man there will come his daily bread in answer to his daily prayer, though it come from the milling of wheat or be the salmon caught at the falls of the Spokane, without let or hindrance from any power of earth. If there is food in plenty in one region, as by the fall of an avalanche down a mountain, it will certainly seek consumption in another region. And this the American boy and girl owe to the good Providence and to the brave men who made this country one and have kept it one.

It is too much the blindness of our time to speak as if such a simple business as daily food came to us as a matter of course. There is, indeed, a careless habit in which Americans often speak.

Fourth of July orators and street-corner braggarts alike talk of the natural products of this country almost in the tone of the emigrants who expect to pick up a doubleton upon the sidewalk. One is tempted to ask such braggarts why the country did not produce such wealth 100 years or 200 years ago.

Why was Dakota then a desert? Why were the hills of Alabama only a hiding place for a few thousand Creek Indians? Why did they not forge the iron under their feet? Why did not the Iroquois in western New York pick from their trees the peaches and the pears such as have been growing there this autumn?

The answer is this: All the wealth of America comes to her from the work of her men and women. The victory which yields it is their victory. It is the victory of spirit conquering matter. It comes in the daily miracle of daily life, where children of God, led by God, taught by God, alive in his life and fellow workers with him, carry out his designs and subdue the earth.

It is neither sensible nor grateful to speak of teeming granaries, of increasing trade, of new mines, of oil, of iron or of gas as if these things were wealth in themselves.

They are only wealth when man strikes the rock and its waters flow. And this man must be not the savage man who cares only for his own personal appetite. It must be man, the child of God, seeking a future better than today, determined to bring in a nobler age than that which he lives in.—Edward Everett Hale.

Fables of Dickens. Charles Dickens invariably wrote in blue ink on blue paper, as he held the impression that the color of ink and paper greatly facilitated the flow of his ideas. Another idiosyncrasy of his was the writing of day and month full, as, January twenty-sixth.

The Glad Old Days. Ah, for the age of Colonial holiday, Oh, for the time when Thanksgiving was young! Don't you rejoice for the old way and jolly way, Tinkle of tankard and spouting of bung? Didn't the welkin resound with a jolly gay, Didn't the freight vanquish the snow?

Don't you feel sore for the bright days of yore? Regard for the truth must elicit a NO. Those, to be sure, were the days of festivity, Days when they dared to put brandy in mince; Eating, however, was but one activity— Wolves were at door and the Indians, Prince:

Man's First and Last Things. One of the first things a child wants to do is to get its hands on a lead pencil and make some zigzag marks on a sheet of paper, which it hesitatingly tells its happy mother is a letter to daddy. About the last thing an old man thinks of doing is to get an old stump of a lead pencil and tremblingly make notes for his lawyer, indicating to whom he wants to will his property.

Depends on Point of View. We can see in the puddle either the mud or the reflection of the blue sky; just as we choose.—Lucy Fitch Perkins.

Somehow the time didn't make for long. Thanksgiving dinner went off with a whoop— For as Pa carved the bird a commotion was heard. And showers of arrows came down in the soup. Those were the times when they hadn't a runabout Rolling them swiftly from theater to club; Movies were six, and there wasn't much fun about Dodging the bear cat while hunting for grub. A murderous blunderbus, weighing a ton about. Went with them always on purpose to slay Each Iriquois with manners annoyin'— In short, we prefer to be thankful today.

Share Your Blessings. That is not true gratitude which does not seek to share its gifts with others. "Rejoice in the Lord always," says the Bible. Thanksgiving is a good day to begin this habit.
