

IRON COUNTY RECORD.

A SANE INTERESTING FOURTH.

Citizens Not Driven Distracted by the Boom of Cannon.

Everybody out in Gala Attire to View the Parade—Morning Services Excellent.

The Fourth of July was celebrated in Cedar in a most sane and interesting manner. The booming of cannons and giant fire crackers were eliminated, and everything went off without a hitch. The citizens were out in full force to view the parade, which were an innovation to Cedar, and which have not been equaled in Cedar.

At 9:30 Main street was thronged with happy people out to see the much heralded parade. They anticipated something out of the ordinary and were not disappointed. Those having the affair in charge had spared neither money nor pains to make it a success, and the citizens who responded to the call to take part were full of life and vim, each determined to do his part.

The parade started from the residence of T. J. Jones, and went east to Main, south to 1st South, east to 1st east and north to 1st North, west to 1st West, south to Center and east to the tabernacle, where the services were held.

The floats which composed the parade were unique, and represented many of the early historical events of our country. The first float after the orb...

...the orb... was the "Mayflower" loaded with pilgrims, going in search of a country where they could worship God according to their conscience. Next came a bunch of veterans of the French and Indian war. And in line were seen representations of the "Boston Tea Party", the immortal signers of the Declaration of Independence, Minute men in Camp, Betsy Ross and the American flag, our government and the first 13 states with Uncle Sam and Columbia. Then followed a float gotten up by the drug stores of the town which was suggestive of the result of the recent election held in Cedar. It was a water wagon nicely decorated with stars and stripes and banners inscribed with "Palace and Cedar City Drug Stores. United we stand." And last, but by no means least, came our few faithful soldiers.

The services at the tabernacle were all that could be desired. The numbers rendered were all patriotic and were listened to with close attention. "The Flag Without a Stain" sung by Mrs. Ada Wood Webster made the hearts of the hearers thrill with patriotism. The trombone solo by Virgil Tollestrup was excellent and near its close the familiar refrain of "The Star Spangled Banner" brought every man, woman and child to their feet in honor to the national air.

In the afternoon the children's parade was the first event. There were scores of them taking part, each with some decorated vehicle. The committee had offered a prize to the best decorated doll carriage and the little ones were out in full force to compete for it. They marched with a precision worthy of mention, and their happy little faces in the line will long be remembered.

After the parade the children were given the customary dance in the Ward Hall, where they enjoyed themselves for a couple of hours and then repaired to the City Park to witness the sports.

The main event was the baseball game between the "fats" and "leane" of the town. It was a game of three innings and was won by the "leane" by a score of 16 to 10. The "fats" no doubt would have won, but were too frisky at the start. They hopped and two-stepped around, smashed here and there, until they were completely worn out. They seemed to think the game was theirs and that they would have a walk-away. But their effort to attract the attention of the pretty girls was their undoing. On the other hand the "leane" were decorous, and went into the game with the idea of playing a scientific game (?) in order that the people might see something out of the ordinary. They noticed not the young girls as did the "fats," consequently were not smirking and strutting around and wasting their strength, but got down to business, won the game and were presented with a beautiful loving cup, which had been purchased for 10 cents and was made of highly polished tin.

The stars of each team were Bp. Lunt, third baseman for the "fats" and Mayor Woodbury, first baseman for the "leane". Their brilliant playing was all that saved the people from developing a severe attack of ennui. Neither could catch a ball, and were just as apt to pick up a clod as the ball. The other players were not quite as good at the business but "awful" close.

There were other entertaining sports which satisfied everybody. The dance in the Ward Hall in the evening was one of the sanest and most enjoyable Fourth of July celebrations ever held in Cedar City.

...the orb... was the "Mayflower" loaded with pilgrims, going in search of a country where they could worship God according to their conscience. Next came a bunch of veterans of the French and Indian war. And in line were seen representations of the "Boston Tea Party", the immortal signers of the Declaration of Independence, Minute men in Camp, Betsy Ross and the American flag, our government and the first 13 states with Uncle Sam and Columbia. And last, but by no means least, came our few faithful soldiers.

A Toast.
Mrs. E. C. Watson.
Who are they? I see you smile as I this question parry,
And in your heart of hearts you say,
"Our Tom, Dick and Harry.
Now as I look into the future, I do not see our sons
Registered as heroes for being behind the guns;
So look with me, and you will see, adown the streams of time,
Commanders imparting tactics in soldiery most sublime.
The infantry is singing songs with titles such as these:
"Love thy neighbor," "Good will to men," "In all the earth be peace."
Others are telling stories of past wars, (now severely spurned);
How the guns and swords into plows and hooks are turned,
Farther along the lines I hear, in that military school,
Captain's orders to be armed only with the golden rule.
Salute your officers who are these ranks commanding,
For "peace in all the world doth reign, surpassing understanding."
Ah! you know my future heroes, I see it on your faces,
As with your mind's eye you view them marshalled in their places.
To each loyal citizen, joy exquisite is presented,
As he sees his home town so nobly represented—
By those distinguished soldiers, old glory waving o'er them,
Liberty upon their brows, everlasting peace before them.
Mounted upon a pedestal, high above all others,
Our country's future heroes,—they are our nation's Mothers.

A Fourth of July Toast.
E. C. Cox.
All hail, glorious Fourth! we all greet thee once more,

With pleasure and pride, as our fathers of yore,
And offer our tribute of honor and praise
To those true-hearted heroes of long ago days,
Who struggled and bled in the conquest of right,
And our great Constitution in which we delight.
For it guarantees freedom to both small and great
To worship as conscience alone may dictate.
All honor and praise to those patriot bands,
Who refused to comply with a tyrant's demands,
And battled for justice and right of their cause,
And won independence and world-wide applause,
For which all true patriots, both low born and high.
Extol their brave acts on each Fourth of July.

Their chieftains and rulers were statesmen indeed,
Unhampered by scheming devices and greed.
No barter of honor in striving for self,
No slaughter of others to benefit self.
But men with a conscience, aye, men with a soul
Who sacrificed self for the good of the whole;
Men minus all crafty, political tricks,
Such men were the statesmen of old Seventy-six.
So today we have...

to raise
In glad celebration, orations, and praise,
And wreath a fresh laurel for each patriot head
Of those loyal heroes who conquered and bled.
We salute their old starry flag with delight,
The banner of freedom, the standard of right,
That floated o'er many a battle stained plain,
And led them to victory again and again.
"Tis a beautiful flag and its perfect design
Suggest the grand truth of its mission divine.
It's the hope of our land: it's the pride of our sea;
It's the signal of progress wherever it be.
It hovers in peace o'er the merchant deck:
It waves from the mast of the shot-torn wreck,
And though its broad stripes have been tattered and torn
It has nerved the courage of the "hope forlorn."
Wherever it waves, there's the home of the free;
Wherever it floats there is sweet liberty,
And millions today will unitedly stand
Rehearsing its praises throughout our broad land.
Then here's to our flag, we all love it today,
And our sons and our daughters will love it for aye,
For throughout our Union there is not a state yet,
More true to the flag than our own Desert.
Hurrah for our flag! 'tis the flag we desire.
May its fame and renown still grow broader and higher;
May its bright stars and stripes be forever unfurled,
For an ensign of justice and peace to the world.

Then up with "Old Glory" and wave it full high,
And cheer for our flag, and our Fourth of July.

THOSE INDEBTED TO ME will please arrange for settlement between now and August 20th. After that date an attorney will attend to my collections. DR. J. C. ROBISON.
