occasions her voice was highly complimented.

Miss Annie Pike, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Pike, surprised her friends by going off to San Francisco and marrying Mr. Charles Greenwood. To those on the inside, however, it was not much of a surprise as it was losing popularity, at least among visitors at the Lewis and Clark exposition who have seen the way pigs are cleaned and cared for at the stock show now in progress on the government peninsula.

A day or two ago a curious crowd watched the operation of washing a pig, and found the sight novel and interesting. The pig which was the object of such solicitude was a monster boar, which looked like the pictures on auction bills, and weighed more than 900 pounds. The washing act was performed by a young man who used a scrubbing brush and some washing powder. The boar was confined in a crate just large enough to hold him, and it was fortunate that this was the case, for he did not take to the scrubbing in a kindly spirit. As the young man spread washing powder on the beast's broad back, and then made a lather with the brush, the great animal snorted in disgust, and stirred nervously in his narrow cage. "Doesn't he like being washed?" a young girl who had been watching the operation asked anxiously.

"No, ma'am, you see he's a pig," the washerman answered curtly. "He's got to stand it, though, for we've been feeding him for a long while so that he could win a prize."
