Secretary.

Office 157 State St., Salt Lake City.
Dated December 2, 1907.

MR. HUGHES SAWS WOOD.

Butte Intermountain: Ever notice that Charley Hughes says nothing; just saws wood? While notables inside and outside of congress indulge in talk, the New York executive goes right ahead and does things. Since taking his seat he has effected more toward honest government and clean finance than any of his predecessors—and the nation scarcely has been aware of his existence. His commissions are going at the heart of things—without the accomplishment of brass bands!

"The committee appointed by Governor Hughes," says an Associated Press dispatch from New York today, "to recommend changes in the state banking laws, has under consideration, among other things, changes in the laws regarding trust companies which will require large reserve funds to be kept. The first plan is for all trust companies to keep on hand 25 per cent of all deposits, of no matter what character, 10 per cent to be deposited in banks and the other 15 per cent to be kept in the company's vaults. The other plan provides for a reserve fund equal to 25 per cent of all demand deposits with only a nominal reserve, perhaps only 5 per cent required on time deposits. The passage of laws embodying either of these plans, it is thought, would induce many of the trust companies to enter the clearing house or establish a similar central body of their own."

It is too soon to judge the feasibility of some of the Hughes propaganda; but the main point is that this fearless man tackles all the big problems, and in a spirit not of animosity, but of justice and moderation. New York legislation, during his term may safely be tried in other states.

PRICE COMPARISONS.

Prices thirty-three years ago for most commodities sold at the grocery stores were very much higher than now. R. E. Burdick of Cleveland has submitted in evidence to a newspaper man a bill dated May 14, 1874, for groceries furnished his family. The bill was rendered by W. P. Southworth & Co., a leading grocery house.

The bill shows that flour at that date was sold at $9 per barrel. It was not as good as the fancy patents which now sell at about $7. Flour of the quality which was considered first-class in 1874 can now be bought for less than $6.

Prices named for sugar, salt, raisins, tea, coffee, lemons, peaches, prunes and pickles are all quoted in the bill at prices 50 to 75 per cent higher than those now prevailing.

A few farm products are quoted at lower prices; eggs at 16 cents a dozen, butter, cheese, lard and ham at lower prices than now rule.

The year 1874 was the one following the worst financial panic that this country ever knew and prices were low as compared with those of 1870. Present prices follow a long series of prosperous years.

The story is an apt illustration of the fact that in discussing and comparing prices people often cover short periods of time for comparison. The price of yesterday is compared with that of today instead of a general average being taken to cover a reasonable amount of time. The government's method of estimating crops with reference to a five or ten year average might well be followed in studying price movements.—Inland Grocer.

TRUTHS.

A little over a year ago a colored man named Voss was shot down and killed in this city by one of his race, named Day. The slayer was, after the usual delays and preliminaries, brought to trial and promptly found guilty of murder in the first degree without recommendation and sentenced to death. The usual appeal followed, which was dismissed, and the invariable petition to the pardon board followed, this also resulting in failure. Then began the preparations for execution, coincidentally with the work of the sentimentalists, who are always in evidence on such occasions seeking to undo the work of the law and thwart the ends of justice. Day's crime is entitled to be classed among those which in the criminal calendar, are headed "infamous," because unprovoked and wholly without warrant, the victim having been a most exemplary man, highly respected not only by his own people but by all who knew him—educated and progressive to a considerable degree. To say that capital punishment does society no good in the long run and might profitably be dispensed with altogether may be true, but apart from the proposition; we have a law and it should be impartially enforced. However, after letting such malefactors as that brace of double murderers, Botha and Shockley, escape, it seems almost idle to inveigh against anything in the pardoning line; if they did not deserve death, nobody ever did or does.

THE ROSE.

She wears a rose within her hair,
Whose fragrance fills me with despair.
Why should a flower of faint perfume,
Recall old memories of this room,
And one who long ago did wear,
A rose entwined in her fair hair.

I may be as I breathe a prayer
Of blessing on that head so fair,
A saintly form of angelic light,
Beholds me as I sit tonight.
Dreaming of the faded years
Until mine eyes are filled with tears,
Longing for her at evening's close,
And the perfume of the withered rose.
