MARIE HEALEY BLAME SWITCH GIVEN HEARING FOR TRAIN CRASH

WOMEN ACCUSED OF SLAYING HUSBAND HELD UNDER $10,000 BAIL
ELY, Nev., May 25.—Mrs. Marie M. Healey, charged with the murder of her husband, James C. Healey, on May 17, had her preliminary hearing yesterday. Evidence was introduced on behalf of the state by District Attorney Edwards, showing the cause of death. This testimony was followed with testimony to the effect that Mrs. Healey had stated that someone came through the window, and that she had thought it was Healey, who threw acid on her, and she then shot him.

According to testimony introduced by the district attorney, all windows in the house were securely barred. After all witnesses had been cross-examined by Attorney George A. Whitley, who represented the defendant, he waived his right to put in any testimony for the defendant.

In default of $10,000 bail, Mrs. Healey has been committed to jail. The case will go for trial before a jury early in June.

Pioneer Utah Woman Buried in Salt Lake LEAVES WEALTH IN CAN; SOMEONE BEATS HIM TO IT

SALT LAKE, May 25.—Mrs. Catherine Woods, widow of J. D. Woods, was buried this morning in the Mt. Olivet cemetery, following impressive services at the Cathedral of the Medelina at which Monsignor P. M. Cushman of Ogden delivered the funeral oration. Active pall bearers were John W. Hart, M. B. Johnson, John C. Lynch, W. J. Halloran, Honorary pall bearers were Governor Simon Bamberg, President Heber J. Grant, John Derr, W. R. Hutchinson, W. D. Cornick and Leopold Baumgarten.

The body was viewed by friends yesterday at the family residence, 305 East South Temple street.

Mrs. Woods' sons, Hugh Woods of Ogden, and Frank C. Hagenbarth of Chicago, and his daughter, Mrs. W. J. Kennedy of South Bend, Ind., arrived in Salt Lake yesterday.

Mrs. Woods was a pioneer of four states and her life was filled with romance. Her father was Anton Veit, a judge in Vienna, and early in her life he had selected for her a husband, an elderly Pole. Catherine opposed the scheme and after a family row and threats on the father's part to send her to a convent, it was arranged that she should accompany her uncle and a large party on a year's trip to America, during which time she was to think things over. Her uncle was one of an embassy under the leadership of Count Tium of Austria, who came to the United States in connection with affairs of Maximilian, who had been executed in Mexico. Some of the party were interested in mining in Colorado and her uncle with others went to Denver in 1859 to investigate. While in Denver Catherine met Frank J. Hagenbarth, Sr., a fellow countryman. He was 21 and she was 18. They promptly fell in love and were married.

Settle in Salt Lake.
In 1866 the young couple came overland and after an adventurous trip landed in Salt Lake, but not until the party had encountered Indians, who stole part of the company's horses.

Shortly after arriving here Mr. Hagenbarth formed a partnership with Henry Wagener's brewery in Emigration canyon. In 1867 the couple decided to go to Virginia City, Mont. Reports were coming in of rich gold strikes on the Salmon river in Idaho, and in 1868 they drove overland, Mrs. Hagenbarth riding a mule to Leesburg, near Salmon City, and later to Loon creek, near Thunder mountain, where the Lost Packer mine is located.

There in 1870 Mr. Hagenbarth died, leaving his wife with an infant daughter and a son two years old. Through the winter's snow the young widow, with pack and saddle horses traveled for days, camping out in the mountains and sleeping on the snow. From Salmon City to Salt Lake she traveled by wagon and was harassed by Indians during the entire journey. It was not long until her scanty resources were exhausted. An expert needlemaker, she supported herself and children. But she was ambitious and had a good business instinct and after some heartbreaking experiences in 1873 she arranged for the purchase of $1300 worth of supplies and furniture on credit, mostly from the Z. C. M. I.

Idaho Hotel.
In 1879 she went to Challis, Idaho, which was booming as a lead-silver camp. A hotel which she opened was a success and she had $15,000 in the bank in three years. In Challis she married J. D. Wood, a friend of her first husband. He was in the mining business. This his wife considered uncertain and she insisted that what money she had should go into cattle or sheep and a ranch.

Accordingly Mr. Wood bought a ranch and his wife was always the main spirit in the venture. Many farms were evident, for later when the mines were all closed the ranch had grown to be one of the largest in the intermountain country and numbered its cattle by the thousands and its sheep by the tens of thousands.

For years Mrs. Wood was the life of the ranch work. She cooked for shearsmen, no storm was too severe to keep her in. She loved the work and to the time of her death was keen and bright in all that pertained to the work. Her suggestions were always timely and wise.

Mrs. Wood found time for many trips abroad. She numbered among her friends many of the great, as well as from the humble, walks of life. She belonged to a pioneer race of builders, which made the great west possible.

Meeting the Demand

Meeting the demand for more efficient telephone service is just as difficult as meeting the demand on any other public concern--whether it be an over-crowded grocery store, a popular ticket window, a bargain counter or anything else where supply is running short.

Conditions are unusual throughout the entire manufacturing, mercantile and domestic world. Deficiencies in telephone service which have been quite obvious for some time are directly due to these abnormal conditions.

Materials are scarce--manufacturers are not able to meet the demand--telephone supplies cannot be had--the war diverted all activities in other directions, and they are just beginning to come back. Until the normal level is struck, there is bound to be shortage of supplies and this means unavoidable deficiencies.

The telephone service is probably no better or no worse than the general average of the business and domestic routine.

The telephone management is in a vigorous campaign to get its service back to the old standard of speed and accuracy. Patience and co-operation on the part of the public will greatly aid in bringing about mutual satisfaction.
