

COMEBACK HARD MANDOT FINDS

Impossible for Boxer to Retire and Then Make Good Showing on Return

It takes a long time and some rough going to prove to some of the pug that it is next to impossible to stage a comeback after one has retired from squared circle activities. Joe Mandot, of New Orleans, at one time one of the best lightweights in the land, recently tried a comeback in the four-round affairs on the Pacific coast. Mandot had several scraps with the so-called seventh raters, and in none of them did he show anything near like the form he displayed when he was a regular scrapper.

Mandot is now convinced that it is impossible for a boxer to retire and then comeback. He was out of the game only about a year and a half when he essayed his return, and during his absence from the ring he took excellent care of himself.

The New Orleans lad declares he would never have believed the difficulty of returning to the ring, had he not experienced it himself. In his first bout he made an excellent showing in the first round, but in the second he began to tire, while in the third and fourth he was forced on the defensive when his legs became weary and his arms so tired he could no longer put pep into his punches.

Joe Mandot had a remarkable career in the ring. Although not as well known in the east as he was in the west and southwest, the New Orleans "Baker Boy" made the Oregon coast performer, until he suffered a kayo at the hands of Leach, cross Benny Leonard also put Mandot away for the ten second doze, and after that he never showed the form which made him famous.

Mandot boxed with Cross and had Leach badly outpointed. In the tenth round Mandot grew careless and Cross put over a punch that started Joe on the downward path. His bout with Bud Anderson was almost a parallel case. Being fast and clever and a fairly good puncher—although not a damaging one—he made the Oregon coast look ridiculous. But Bud kept right after Mandot and got him in the twelfth round. Mandot was an apprentice to a New Orleans baker when his boxing ability was discovered and he was placed in training. He recently announced he is through for all time.

CANADA'S BARLEY FED
HOGS FOUND SUPERIOR

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask., June 27.—Canada "finishes" its corn and hogs on barley while the United States "finishes" them on corn. The case of corn vs. barley tried at the Wisconsin experiment station has interested farmers in this part of Canada—the prairie country along the Canadian National Railway's transcontinental line—because this is a mixed farming country where much barley is raised for livestock and little corn is grown. A drove of barley-fed cattle fattened at the Wisconsin experiment station sold at $13.59 a hundred weight and a drove of corn-fed cattle at $13.25, the same packing house buying both lots. The average daily gain on barley it was given out, was 2.45 pounds; on corn 2.03 pounds. To make 100 pounds of beef on barley it costs $24.01, on corn $27.40.

Canadian farmers contend that hogs "finished" on barley produce bacon and hams superior to those from corn fed hogs. With barley-fattened steers, they have won many championships at the International Stock Show at Chicago. They point out, also, that the labor required to produce an acre of corn would be sufficient to produce several acres of barley.

LIMPS, YET STARS EVERY DAY

BY DEAN SNYDER
About how Doc Wheeler "Doc" Johnson is his underpinning. But for all that the doctor is going better on one leg than any other American League first baseman—excepting the great George Sisler.

Early this spring Johnson sprung a "charley horse" in his good leg—the other never having been a 100 per cent leg since he was a boy.

Doc was forced to lay off. Those were trying days for "Iris Speaker's" Indians. He had no measure, steady, with Harris away kicking up his heels in the outlaw ranks at Franklin, Pa.

For a while the Indians' pennant hopes depended upon the limping legs of the southerner.

The Chattanooga product forced Spoke to let him hobble back on the job and for good measure, heeler set the pace in the American league lanes as his chief hitter for a few weeks.

Stars as Cripple.
He is still limping back and forth from the bench to the field, but when he is working he forgets it or rather overcomes it by his natural grit.

On going down to first he is as fleet as if his underpinning was faultless.

"I got a bad ankle, now, too," said Doc the other day, "but you'd never know it, would you?" And you wouldn't unless you watched him hobble back and forth from the dugout to his position.

The same day Doc made this remark he stole home from third on Rip Collins, one of Miller Huggins' pitchers, just to show that he was "risky."

"And say, don't forget that I'm a veteran, too. Where do they get that stuff that I'm a sort of a liability in the big national ranks?"

per. He proved this in the recent series with the Yankees when he came home spikes first to take his right leg into the professional ranks a year ahead of him and is now with the Brooklyn Nationals.

It would be a rather queer quirk in circumstance if the Superbas and the Indians should be haggling over the world championship honors this fall.

O. A. A. STARS WILL GO EAST

Athletes Will Enter Olympic Trials to Be Held at Boston

Despite the fact that Creed Haymond, all-American intercollegiate 100 and 220 yard champion in 1919, tore a ligament in the final of the century race at Pasadena last Saturday he will be allowed to enter the trials at Harvard Stadium July 17, according to word received today from Robert W. Weaver, in charge of the selecting of the western team for the eastern finals.

Alma Richards qualified Saturday in the high jump and in the 55 pound weight throw. Richards is holder of the Olympic high jump record, at 6 feet, 4 inches, and was all-around champion of America in 1915. He was one of the stars in the meet Saturday.

Clinton Larson, the six high jumper, did not enter the western trials, due to the fact that he is attending school. He has been granted special permission by the O. A. A. officials to compete in the finals at Harvard, and is sure to make the team. Larson is holder of the world's record in this event, having a mark of 5 feet, 7 and 7/8 inches.

The meet at Pasadena Saturday was witnessed by more than 20,000 people, one western record being shattered and one world record broken.

In the 100 yard event, the second event in the program, four men of national reputation were entered. The men were: Charlie Paddock, University of Southern California; "Slim" Williams of Spokane; Creed Haymond of the Ogden Athletic association; and Morris Kirksey of the Olympic club. At the crack of the gun Kirksey took the lead with Paddock second, Haymond third and Williams fourth. The 90 yard mark Kirksey bunched for honors, when Haymond tore a ligament. He did not compete in the final.

With more than two weeks with which to prepare for the finals Haymond should be in the best of shape when the dashes are staged at Harvard.

While only one representative took points at Pasadena, Ogden will have four representatives in the final slip, that is the reason for the rejoicing throughout the athletic belt of the city today.

When "Death Valley" Jim Scott packed up his grip and went to the coast a lot of folks said he was slipping. Joe Jenkins used to catch Big Jim and declares he has all the stuff he had when he was rated as the best pitcher in American league. Jenkins says:

"I cannot see any difference between the Scott of today and the Scott of the time when he was in the White Sox. I notice, however, that he is as unlucky as ever. The White Sox seldom made many runs for him, and the San Francisco Seals seem to find it harder to score when he is pitching than they do when their other twirlers are working."

CLARK GRIFFITH.
Foxy Griff, manager of the Nats, says he doesn't dare go on the road without Nick Altrock. Griff says:

"Say, I want to tell you all something. If I ever came to New York or went to Cleveland without Altrock I'd be mobbed. Why, one day last year I went to Cleveland and left Nick at home. Those Cleveland fans nearly took my hide off. If words would have skinned me alive I'd have been picked clean. I'm telling you, I was roasted in all the papers and hooted on the field. I don't know if the bird get hurt, either. People simply demand the stars."

COACH WARNER.
Looking ahead on the football situation, the University of Pittsburgh seems to have a good break coming. But Glen Warner, miracle coach, warns the school not to expect too much. He says:

"The material looks good, but it is too early to make loud claims of a great team. We'll wait until the boys have been in camp a few weeks and see how good they look. Football is a game played by eleven men as a unit. Sometimes, where material looks good individually, weak spots develop when they combine, and these weak spots often come in unexpected places."

LIONEL KREMER.
The first check to be contributed to the "Fletcher" fund by New York fans was from Lionel Kremer. Kremer added this note to his check:

"Please spend my check for something suitable for Fletcher, even if it's only another plug of tobacco, or gum, or whatever it is he
