REVIEW HISTORY OF SUGAR FIRM
SCHOOL FINANCE FIGURES LISTEDFinances of Oregon-Utah Sugar Company Scrutinized at Federal Hearing
Assistant Superintendent of Public Instruction Compiles Report

SALT LAKE, Oct. 29.—The Oregon-Utah Sugar company's financial history was examined at length and exhaustively yesterday in the cross-examination of C. C. Beebe by D. N. Straup, counsel for the Utah-Idaho Sugar company, in the hearing of the federal trade commission convened to determine if there was a conspiracy to restrain trade in the sugar market.

Mr. Beebe, former treasurer of the Oregon-Utah company, was on the stand throughout the morning and afternoon, and his testimony was frequently the subject of vigorous cross-examination by Judge Straup and Henry Ward Beebe, special attorney for the trade commission, who is conducting the case for the government.

MAKE PROTEST
Special protest was made by the government against questions asked of Mr. Beebe concerning the financial statements and standing of the late S. A. Whitney, all former Salt Lake bankers, who were subscribers to the bonds of the Oregon-Utah company. The questions, Judge Straup insisted, were not asked to embarrass the witness or cast aspersions on the men named, but to show the strength or lack of strength behind the company at the time its assets were taken over by the Utah-Idaho.

The witness expressed ignorance of the exact financial status of the men named, and declined to answer questions regarding his personal business since the time he relinquished his interest in the Oregon-Utah, asserting firmly and often that the witness concerned the federal trade commission.

At the conclusion of the cross-examination Mr. Beebe expressed the thought that there was bitterness between Judge Straup and the witness, which Judge Straup denied and the witness set to rights by saying, "I'm not bitter towards any of them. I love you all." He likewise answered Judge Straup's suggestion of bitterness towards Bishop C. W. Nibley by a like amiable assertion.

REGARDING SALE
Judge Straup brought out that the sale of the assets of the Oregon-Utah to the Utah-Idaho was made on motion by the board of directors, endorsed by a stockholder's meeting presided over by George E. Sanders, Mr. Beebe, over the objections of the counsel for the defense, explained this by stating that the stockholders were forced out of the business and were compelled to sell their individual stock holdings for $50 a share, part of the proposition being their support of the endorsement of the sale at the stockholders' meeting.

The witness likewise stated on redirect examination by Mr. Beebe that Bishop Nibley all told had put $10,000 into the company, that the subscriptions of the above named and other underwriters of the bond issue were protected and guaranteed, and that Bishop Nibley bought out Calvin Bullock, a Denver securities dealer, who handled the issue.

Judge Straup read into the record as Mr. Beebe had done on the direct examination, considerable portions of previous testimony given by former witnesses, and likewise referred in detail to many of the heavy load, more or less, of the exhibits connected with the Oregon-Utah transactions.

Counsel asked the witness what value his stock had after the assets of the Oregon-Utah had been sold to the Utah-Idaho to which the answer was, "None. That was what worried me."

Rehabilitation to Be Conference Topic

SALT LAKE, Oct. 29.—Industrial rehabilitation of soldiers will be one of the subjects to be brought up at the conference in Salt Lake, November 8, which has been called by the federal board of vocational education, according to Francis W. Kirkham, in charge of local arrangements.

Kirkham is state director of vocational education, and at the conference will be representatives from the vocational education department of those states west of the Mississippi who were unable to attend a similar conference held a few days ago in Washington. The program at the Washington and the Salt Lake conferences is practically the same.

The big feature of the conference will be the laying of plans for putting into effect immediately the industrial rehabilitation act passed this year by the national congress. This act is intended to provide cooperation between state and national forces to give vocational training to persons in industrial life who have sustained injuries or other disabilities, similar to the training provided by the war department for men disabled in the military service of the nation. The federal industrial act, however, is not limited to persons who are injured while in the industrial service of the nation, but it also extends to include persons who are disabled by disease or other factors from earning a competent living.

It is an important feature of the act that it is a means of earning their own living or improving their social status by special training along industrial lines.

SALT LAKE, Oct. 29.—While Brian, age 24, and Roy Green, age 22, negroes employed at the Garfield smelter, were arrested yesterday on a charge of registering illegally, Deputy Sheriff Lee Williams swore to the complaints.

The men were taken before the city court yesterday and held at $500. Harry Joseph and Ben Harmon furnished the necessary bonds. Sheriff John S. Corless has announced that three more warrants for similar offenses will be served. It is alleged that they had registered illegally at the Garfield smelter, and had been induced to register at the smelter by the company.

COST OF WIVES GROWS IN BURMA

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—The cost of wives has increased in the far-off Chin Hills of Burma where they are obtained on the "dollar down" plan. Men naturally incline to demand lower and easier terms from their prospective fathers-in-law, who are compensated for the loss of their daughters' labor by a report by Reverend J. Herbert Cope, representative of the Baptist Foreign Mission Society at Haka.

This year a lively discussion grew out of the report, the selling of daughters ceased, the report continued, "The custom has grown into an abuse. Men are demanding more and more for their daughters, and the result is that many of the daughters are sold to another man. We have been trying to get them to reduce the charges."

Efforts to induce the natives to follow the customs of white men are being made in educational institutions opened in these districts as a result of the New World Movement of Northern Baptists, Dr. Cope said.

IT WAS REAL WHISKEY!
SPECIAL POLICEMAN
HIRED TO GUARD IT!

No Chance Taken on Losing Rich Prop in "What Happened to Jones" Picture

A special policeman at the Paramount Artcraft studio in California had a real job during the filming of "What Happened to Jones," Margaret Loomis' latest Paramount Artcraft picture which Manager Skinner will show at the Alhambra theatre today only. The job consisted in guarding two quarts of aged whiskey used as props in the picture which is an uproarious farce of bootlegging and reform in a dry town.

Although many bottles are used as props, two at least, those used directly by the star, had to be the real thing in order to make the filming seem true to life. The precious fluid was borrowed from a famous figure in film circles with the express provision that it was to be returned intact. Director James Cruze took no chance but employed a special policeman to guard the precious spirits. Not even the wax on the seal was disturbed.

A cast of unusual excitement supports Margaret in the picture, and a leading woman, while other players include J. Maurice Foster, Frank Johnson, William Leighton, Caroline Ramond and Richard Cummings.

Elmer Harris prepared the scenario. James Cruze was the director.

DUTCH CLING TO OLD CEREMONY

(By International News Service.)
THE HAGUE, Oct. 10.—(Correspondence)—The Dutch people cling to the pagentry that surrounds the movement of their queen on state occasions though sturdy democrats in their business life. The opening of the Dutch parliament exemplified this.

This parliament opening is a quaint old ceremony. The queen rides in a gilded carriage through the streets of the Hague to the old Knights Hall in Parliament Square and, with her crown on her head and her gold-embroidered Prince consort at her side, sits on her throne for once each year.

At this ceremony the Dutch cabinet ministers are compelled by tradition to wear gaily uniforms resembling an old time minstrel man in an admiral's hat. For some reason this tradition decreed that the ministers on this solemn occasion must wear long white duck trousers which contrast strangely with their tremendous black, gold and orange hats shaped like an inverted gravy dish.

After this one day of pomp the ministers and members of parliament put on their working clothes and get down to business while the queen, who prides herself on being a typical Dutch woman with domestic tastes, lays her crown aside for another year.

This year's ceremony had one note at discord with its ancient pomp. Through the crowds who watched the parade marched a number of discontented minor government employees of the post and telegraph department carrying placards asking when this parliament was going to raise their pay.

The Bank of England, the strongest treasure house in the world, usually holds within it $100,000,000 worth of gold and notes.

'TRUMPET ISLAND' AT ORPHEUM ON SUNDAY

Strange disturbances occurred in the minds of two beings through a chance meeting of their eyes. Richard Boddell and Eve de Merincourt did not meet. They were strangers, belonging to two different worlds. Again their eyes met through a window, but still they were strangers.

In the story of "Trumpet Island," written by Gouverneur Morris and edited and embellished by Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph Chester to provide fitting material for a spectacular Vitaphone special production, thrilling sensations abound. The elements of suspense are sustained through extraordinary plays of circumstances. The roles are enacted by an all star cast under the direction of Tom Terries, and the result is a picture drama which will not be forgotten by anyone who witnesses it.

"Trumpet Island" will be shown at the Orpheum theatre beginning Sunday.
