als Say Economies Will Drive Country to Prohibition

BERLIN, August 5.—(By the Associated Press.)—Germany's heart may be beating more vigorously than ever, but the feeling is not growing, and the feeling is not growing, and the feeling is not growing. The feeling is not growing, and the feeling is not growing, and the feeling is not growing.

ALCOHOLIC FORCES
The anomalous position to which the German people have been brought by the economic crisis is the fact that the country is still able to produce more than enough to supply its own needs, and to export the surplus.

SEVEN DAYS IN LI'L' OL' N. Y.

By JESSIE HENDERSON

Special Correspondent of The Standard-Examiner
Copyright, 1922, by The Standard-Examiner

NEW YORK, August 5.—What with the Brooklyn bridge sagging, the disputing over whether it is still safe for 100 years or for thirty days, the B. R. T. subway flooded by a broken water pipe, lightning knocking the covers off bungalows, the roofs of 22 story buildings, Matilde McCormick sailing for Europe, Flo Ziegfeld sailing for New York—this week has been practically one thing after another. Add a dramatic fire, a bird store on the rampage, and the society for the suppression of vice telling the court all the awful things concealed between the lines in some recent literature, and you can see the past seven days have bulged with interest.

It is truly surprising what atrocities one can yank out of apparently innocent paragraphs in a best seller which one happens to be an agent for the society intent on suppressing vice. There is a book, for instance, translated from German and said to have been written by a child of 12 years, which inexplicably shocked the vice agents. Inexplicably, however, is hardly the word. It took John S. Sumner some hours to express to the magistrate the innate dreadfulness of such ideas as "kiss" and "hug," even though the national Sunday review of the Methodist church had endorsed the volume. But the magistrate adjourned decision until he could read for himself.

Once again it has been demonstrated that a policeman's life is not an easy one. Three patrolmen became heroes at three fires which occurred within a few hours of one another. Patrolman William Haines, though only a rookie cop, got two men to hold him by the legs while he swung a woman and a boy to safety from a fire escape licked by flames. Patrolman Daniel Mandel, already a medal of honor man, later saw a woman preparing to jump from a sixth story window behind which fire was burning brightly. He shouted a warning and ran to the building next door, where he found a four-inch ledge on which he edged his way till he could grasp the woman. He swung her across the front of the building and into an open window where people were waiting to catch her. Not very much later another rookie, Patrolman Thomas Ruppel, found a woman in bed on the fourth floor of a burning house. The woman weighed 130 pounds but Ruppel fought off a bad tempered police dog and carried her down the three long flights of stairs.

Manville, Flo Ziegfeld, who, it will be remembered, spent a lot of money and most of his week cabling to his wife, Ethel Burke, that if Marilyn Miller said things about him he would probably not so—this same Flo Ziegfeld started for New York from Paris with eighteen new hats for Ethel. Even a dozen new champagne bottles were sufficient to settle most domestic disputes.

It is doubtful, however, whether Ethel's eighteen new hats or the new imported costumes for next season's Follies will give the customs people such a start as was handed them this week by Mr. and Mrs. Hignett of London, England. Hignett is European sales manager for the Troy Laundry Machinery company of Moline, Ill., and while he believes cleanliness is next to Godliness, he evidently believes likewise that cleanliness without some decorative appeal is scarcely worth while. Mr. and Mrs. Hignett accordingly made a binding entrance into our town wearing $100,000 worth of diamonds. Perhaps this doesn't sound like much when you consider the national debt of the number of rabbits born each year, but customs officials are still in dark glasses recovering from the impact of their collective eyes of a 13-1-2 carat ring worn on the Hignett left hand, a 10,000 candle power shirt stud, and a watch chain flashing with diamonds and big cobblestones. In addition to this dazzle there were Mrs. Hignett's earrings set with three carat diamonds, and her two finger rings that consorted to the tune of 5 carats apiece.

Mr. and Mrs. Hignett not only broke the customs people's eyes off, they also broke the record for high, broad and standing diamond display by entrants into the port of New York. They must likewise have broken the heart of bandits' local number 13, because what's the use of stealing jewels so big you have to hire a truck to cart 'em away.

Bandit's local number 13 is playing in hard luck, anyway, of late. It looked like a perfectly simple task for any primary class yegg to take Mrs. C. C. Babbs' $400 ring from her empty bedroom and get away with it. But Mrs. Babbs, who entered the room as the yegg was leaving, happened to be upstartsmanlike enough to carve him with her embroidery scissors. She had not cut more than three or four bits of eyelet embroidery on his features before he decided to go away from there, leaving the ring as he went.

It seems, too, that local flappers are encroaching on many fields hitherto won exclusively to male wild oats. Katherine Cleming and Anna Mullen, each aged 12, though up a cute joke on the crew of the Albatross, Katherine and Anna crawled beneath a life boat 500 miles out at sea and announced themselves as stowaways. A wireless message brought the news to the parental Flemings and Mullens, who registered annoyance, but not surprise, for the girls had mentioned a desire to see Europe and had tried once before to stow away on the same vessel. Nor can you blame them for wanting to see Europe, with the weather what it is in Gotham?

SCOUT IDEA OF FUREY ALIVE

Texas Officers Say His Death Expected Weeks Ago

FORT WORTH, Tex., Aug. 5.—Joe Furey, whose body is being shipped to Oakland, Cal., from here following his death at the state penitentiary, was one of the others in Los Angeles of the swindling at Los Angeles of J. Frank Northfleet. The trio was trailed for more than a year by Northfleet, who is a farmer.

Northfleet spent thousands of dollars in his search and finally was successful in landing the entire band behind bars. Dispatches from Los Angeles, Friday night, said that District Attorney Thomas Lee Woolwine of Los Angeles county had telegraphed the authorities here asking a positive identification of the body be made.

Furey, whose widow and son live in Glendale, a Los Angeles suburb, is alleged to have operated in Los Angeles as a member of a band of swindlers. Furey was sentenced to serve 20 years in the penitentiary for defrauding Northfleet out of $5,000 in a fake stock deal.

HIS DEATH EXPECTED.
Of Furey's band, one member died in New York in prison, committing suicide, and one is now serving a term. Authorities here scoffed at the theory that Furey may have "put one over" on the Texas officers and is not dead. Furey made several desperate attempts to escape while on the train being brought to Fort Worth for trial. Handcuffed, he leaped from the window and broke his leg. During his trial he was so weak, he had to be assisted in court by attendants.

Officers point out that he had been ill for a long time and his death was expected for several weeks before he actually was reported dead.

DIED OF CANCER.
CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—A post mortem at the Cook, Texas, prison revealed that "Big Joe" Furey died of cancer of the stomach, according to information sent to officials here of a nationally known detective agency. A month before Furey started what was believed to have been on a hunger strike, he smiled, but said nothing and complained of no illness. Even while dying Big Joe maintained that

CLAM STRIKE ABOUT BROKEN

Roads Declare They Are Getting High Type of Men for Shops

BY JOHN EDWIN NEVIN
Special Dispatch to The Standard-Examiner.
(Copyright, 1922, by The Standard-Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—The sole remaining hope of the striking shopmen winning their strike rests on other railway union organizations becoming involved. As the cards lie today the strike is broken so far as the larger systems are concerned. Some of the smaller roads which do not have their terminals in the larger cities, still are in difficulties. But the main transcontinental systems have menaced the cars and engines and engines in fair repair and are adding to their number daily.

There is a very serious dispute regarding the competency of these strike-breakers. Railway chiefs, who are in Washington to consult with their representatives here, insist that the men are doing high class work. Reports to the headquarters of the American Federation of Labor insist that the new men are incompetent and that the equipment of the various roads is getting into very bad repair.

SYMPATHY ONLY MORAL.
On the battle of the latter statement may depend the outcome of the strike. Naturally the members of the other brotherhoods sympathize with the shopmen who quit to force the roads, if possible, to maintain the prevailing rate of wages. But that sympathy has been moral instead of active. However, when the strike began, officers of the brotherhoods quietly served the various railroad executives that their men must not be asked to do any work which could be interpreted in spirit as of a strike breaking character. They were officially assured that their wishes in this respect would be observed.

Now the brotherhoods have let it be known that they will not handle equipment that is damaged or is dangerous. In that position they are entirely within their rights and will be upheld by the railroad officials. But the question of just when a piece of equipment is entirely safe and when it is not is one that furnishes plenty of opportunity for squabbling. An engineer can insist that the fuse of his engine leak; that the valves need repairing or indeed that a dozen and one other things are wrong and the engine foreman must decide whether the claim is just or not. These are degrees of damage that in ordinary times do not interfere with engines that in a situation such as exists today might be made an excuse for refusing to handle it.

CHANCE FOR CRISIS.
But if the responsible official declares that the engine is all right to pull a train and the engineer refuses to run it a crisis would be developed. Under the rules the engineer would be suspended for disobedience and then his case would come squarely up to the brotherhood which naturally would back him up. The result could be a strike on a single road.

This instance is duplicated in the case of all of the other railway unions and it is violating no secret to state that the officers of the federation here it is confidently believed that such just a situation will develop. But officials of the roads say this will not happen. They agree trains are being run, but they insist that the new men have not got into the swing of things. But they believe that each day improves the situation and that within ten days they will have the majority of the shops in their main terminals completely equipped with competent men. In fact they say a number of the old men are coming back to work.

HIGH TYPE CLAM.
Incidentally it is said by several of the railway officials that the majority of the new men are of a superior type. They are young fellows who saw service during the war. A great many of them have had previous mechanical experience. It is said by the railway chiefs, and their work has been surprisingly good. It was because the executives knew this to be so that they were so willing to reflect the suggestion of President Harding that they take the men back and restore their seniority rights.

element of deceptive cover that gained him fame and comparatively few prison sentences.
Normally weighing 200 pounds, Furey is stated to have started his make-believe hunger strike weighing 150 pounds and to have wasted away to a veritable shadow of the one-time pompous bank president, "Wall street broker" or "market king," when he died.

Loss of $5,000 by J. Frank Northfleet, wealthy Texan, in a fake wire tapping scheme caused Furey's last imprisonment.

AUTOPSY PERFORMED.
HOUSTON, Tex., Aug. 5.—"I'd hate to be as dead as Joe Furey."
That was the comment at the warden's office at Huntsville over the long-distance telephone when informed that District Attorney Woolwine was probing the possibility that Furey was not dead, but has played a trick on prison officials.
"We had an autopsy over his body," it was stated. "The prison doctor said he died of cancer of the bladder and it was Joe Furey, all right."
PREDICTED ESCAPE.
FORT WORTH, Tex., Aug. 5.—Officers here when Joe Furey was convicted and whence he went to penitentiary, recalled today that the prisoner on the eve of his departure told a close friend he would never serve the 20-year term.

"Some day you will read of my death at the penitentiary," he said, "and there will be a new grave in the penitentiary cemetery, but old Joe won't be in it—'ll be gone elsewhere."

STATE BANKS OF IDAHO STRONGER

BOISE, Idaho, Aug. 5.—Idaho's state banks have passed the low point of deflation and are now beginning to show gains in resources. It was announced by F. J. Fralock, state commissioner of finance, following the completion of the statements of the 119 state banks as of June 30, 1922.
"This is something we have not been able to say for the past two years," Mr. Fralock commented, "and it is truly a great pleasure to make this announcement."
While the resources of the 119 banks are not as large as they were a year ago, the commissioner says, general condition shows a more solid foundation. Loans and discounts have been decreased more than nine millions.

LONDON DIVORCE COURTS OVERFLOW

LONDON, August 5.—The London divorce court has just finished what is probably the last of the record-breaking lists of petitions for marriage annulments. To relieve the London judicial machinery of overburden by such cases, certain classes of divorce pleas will be transferred to Assizes courts in the provinces when the court sittings are resumed.
Petitions asking for dissolution of unhappy marriages have been so numerous since the war that judges had to be borrowed each term from other benches to reinforce the regular divorce court judiciary, in order that the lists might be cleared up before the expiration of terms. Once or twice the lord chancellor has found it necessary to spend a few hours daily between sittings of the house of lords, where he presides on the woolsack, to assist
