

Will Fine Clothes Draw Women's Vote?

Senator Atlee Pomerene May Float Into Presidency on Billowy Promises of Silks and Satins at Bargain Rates

By CAROLYN VANCE Special Correspondent of The Standard-Examiner

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Will the women of the country elect a man to the presidency in 1924 who promises to make their clothes cost one billion dollars a year less? The Democrats think it is quite possible but the Republicans do not believe they will allow themselves to be fooled.

The man, it is hinted, who is to do the promising, standing upon a platform of fine feathers for fine birds, is Atlee Pomerene. To become a candidate for the presidency in 1924, he must be re-elected to the senate in the present campaign. In his efforts to do this, he is appealing to the bargain instinct in women, telling them that the repeal of the "outrageous" Fordney-McCumber tariff law will enable them to have more and prettier clothes for less money.

Mr. Pomerene's campaign speeches are so fiercely focused on the Ohio campaign. It is a preliminary tussle, the women political leaders believe, for the presidency in 1924.

G. O. P. ALARMED Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton, the Republican leader, has hastened to the danger to her cause. She has rushed out to Ohio to urge women not to allow themselves to be hoodwinked into thinking that all they need to do in order to trail around in spiffy fineries forever after, is to vote for Senator Pomerene.

She is just completing an extensive speaking campaign in behalf of Pomerene. "The women of the country will spend one billion dollars more this coming year for their clothes, from lace to hair nets under the Fordney-McCumber tariff law than they would if the Underwood-Simmons law had remained on the statute books."

BILLOWY PROMISES This statement by Senator Pomerene in some of his campaign speeches is expected to make such a profound impression on women that its influence will extend into 1924. The theory is that clothes may not make a man, but they make a president. If Pomerene should succeed in his ultimate ambition, it would be the first time a man has floated into the presidency on billowy promises to present women with silks and satins of silks and satins.

The National Women's party has also become mixed up in the hectic Ohio campaign. The Democratic members of the party have complained that Alice Paul was unfair because she wrote a letter of endorsement for Representative Foss who is opposing Pomerene and did not give a similar one to the latter.

Meantime, like small boys whistling to keep up their courage in the dark, politicians make a raucous racket telling why they believe that women are really not going to upset things so badly November 7.

BRAVADO FADES This bravado is typical of politicians the country over as the pertinent events come nearer. It was clearly exhibited at the luncheon given during the past week in Baltimore by the Maryland Women's federation.

The Republican state ticket was invited. And it came, to the last man, not with bells on, perhaps, but with buttonholes. The postures on the label were profoundly symbolic of the change that had come over the political world. The candidates tried to appear nonchalant before the 300 pair of more or less friendly feminine eyes, but they did not succeed very well.

Some of the ladies did their best to calm the men, but somehow, their agitated feathers refused to lie down. They were told then that the women were not really desirous of a "women's bill" in congress, that it probably would be years and years before there would be any women at all in the senate and that it would be a long, long, time before a third of the house was feminine, if ever.

WILLING TO SERVE The mistress of ceremonies, Miss Grace Spofford disclaimed any high flying political ambitions on the part of women. She says women are very humble in their desires to serve. They are only anxious to help men to the heights, wanting neither the plumes nor the laurels of the state books. In their humbleness, she said, they are very much like the young man who aspires to the life of the stage. He put an advertisement in the paper, reading as follows:

"Wanted: Small part in a play, either as a dead body or as shouts outside."

MARTHA SOCIETY SUCCESSFUL CHARITY BALL AIDS WORTHY TASKS

Within the shadow of the Wasatch mountains stands the Martha society nursery, a tribute to the memory of Mrs. Martha Cannon, founder of the society. Shortly after organization, Mrs. Cannon and her associates, anxious to carry on the splendid work started by their leader, continued to carry out the activities outlined by her. These have been accompanied by many other remarkable achievements. A brief history of the society is here-with given.

The society was organized on February 29, 1908, for charitable and social purposes. Mrs. Martha Cannon being chosen president at the first meeting. At that time the name given was the Ogden Charity society, but later intervened and within a week Mrs. Cannon died. A special meeting was called and the name of the organization was changed to the Martha society in reverence to the departed and benevolent leader.

Incorporation papers were taken out on September 27, 1908. The society was organized to help the needy, those in distress and want. Many difficult problems confronted the members at first and the most trying one was the lack of funds to carry on the work successfully but the inspiration of the departed leader and the determination of the members to set a goal and reach it were the factors that has placed the Martha society in the enviable position that it holds today. A campaign was inaugurated to raise funds. The first annual Martha society charity ball was given and sufficient funds were raised from the meeting to place a nursery where mothers who had to work for a livelihood might leave their children during the day.

PERMANENT HOME BOUGHT. A suitable location was secured and the nursery opened to the public in June, 1913. The enrollment was small in the beginning, but steadily increased as time went on. Many mothers desired to leave their children at the home overnight, and the demand for a night nursery was apparent. Inadequate housing conditions confronted the society, and steps were taken to secure a permanent home. In December, 1913, the present home on Washington avenue and Elizabeth street was purchased at a cost of $11,000, the fund making the purchase being subscribed by the members of the society. The house was remodeled at a cost of $3,000, this amount being subscribed by the merchants of the city. The home is maintained by voluntary subscription from representative citizens, city and county officials and dues and contributions from members. In May, 1915, the Utah legislature appropriated $1,000; May, 1917, $2,000, and May, 1919, $4,000. Many alterations and improvements have been added, sleeping porches, and dormitories built and the grounds improved.

REGISTRATION TOTALS. The capacity of the nursery is 65 children. During 1920 122 children registered at the nursery, these coming from 52 different families. Of children with mothers only, there were 43. Of children with fathers only, there were 17. Children in care of guardians, other than parents, 17. Total, 122.

The average cost of maintaining a child at the nursery, exclusive of improvements, plant, and a day. Members of the society volunteer their services in the administration of the house affairs, thereby making it possible to save large sums of money on supplies, household goods, etc. Medical and surgical services are given gratis by all physicians and surgeons in the city. The dentists of the city have also donated their services free. Druggists contribute freely, and the hospital rates are reduced to the home.

VARIED ASSISTANCE. The investigating committee receives all applications, consults referees, investigates cases, and arranges for an examination by physician, and medical tests preliminary to entrance. Social services work among the parents of the children is also done by this committee. The child welfare committee looks after the physical care of the child while at the nursery, to try and insure a healthy future for the child. The children are weighed frequently, and the greatest care is exercised in regard to health conditions. The diet problem has been solved with the children as plenty of fresh milk, butter, eggs, cereals, cooked vegetables, and fruit are served in abundance. Small portions of digestible meats keep them in normal healthy form.

A kindergarten has been established at the home for the younger children while the older ones attend the public school. A competent Sunday school teacher is in attendance, supervised play is also a feature of the home training. A matron, and a number of trusted employees of excellent moral character are employed. Miss Harriet Leet, the national welfare worker, spent a few days in Ogden recently, and visits the home. She complimented the society on the excellent condition of the children, and on the home.

The Martha society is composed of 25 active members, 35 sustaining members, and six honorary members, all influential and substantial citizens of Ogden. The presiding officers for the present year are: Mrs. William Wattis, president; Mrs. Ad Kuhn, first vice president; Mrs. Thomas D. Dee, second vice president; Mrs. E. F. Bratz, treasurer, and Mrs. A. P. Bigelow, secretary.
