

LEAGUE'S AIMS TOLD TO CLUB

What Is Proposed in Development Campaign Explained by Arney

Aims and purposes of the Intermountain Development league, which was recently formed in Utah and is now under organization in Ogden, were explained to members of the Exchange club of Ogden, formerly the Progressive club, at the noon luncheon today by C. E. Arney, Jr., organizer, who brought about the formation of the league in the Pacific northwest with unusual results.

"The Intermountain Development league," the speaker explained, "hopes and plans for the promotion of a better spirit of unity which will add population and wealth to a community."

"Utah probably has more resources than most any other state in the union, yet it is rated among the last in population. The growth of your community rests upon the use you make of your resources, the conversion of resources into tangible wealth."

UNIFIED ACTION. "The league does not attempt to offer a program for the solution of all the problems that hold you back, but it does try to promote that unified action which will bring results."

"Solution of your problems lie in organization and in the understanding of results which can be obtained by unified action. The league recognizes the chamber of commerce as the one organization which should be looked upon by business men to carry on community work and dinner clubs should function as auxiliaries to that organization or they lose their effectiveness."

"The importance of unified action can be explained in an instance which occurred in Utah a few days ago. A message came from Washington that plans were made to reduce the federal highway appropriation for Utah from $5,000,000 to $3,500,000. This would mean a serious curtailment of growth to the state. The league immediately went into action and today there are 30 telegrams in Washington from 30 Utah towns and cities, protesting the reduction. The voice of the 30 cities would be disregarded. The voice of one would be disregarded."

TWO OBJECTS. Two primary objects are before the league: First, to create an agency through which we can co-operate in common problems and second, make our industries here so profitable that this field will attract other manufacturers to us. We are interested primarily in payrolls and population.

"An important aim is to create the almost exclusive use of home products, for it is economic wisdom to have our home products absorbed at home. We are trying to create loyalty to the territory which contributes wealth to its people."

"An intensive campaign is to be carried on in educating the housewife to the use of home products and soon 25,000 questionnaires are to be mailed to women of the state to gain data upon the use of our own products. A community directory is to be published listing every intermountain product."

GROVER HEADS COMMITTEE. Mr. Arney announced that Fred Williams, Ogden grocer, heads the Ogden committee of 22 men who are organizing the league here and results so far obtained are reassuring.

Mayor Frank Francis and A. L. Glasmann, editor of The Standard Examiner, were called upon to give a report upon their recent trip to Washington and in the eastern states. Mr. Glasmann told of prosperity found in the middle western states and said that factories which a year ago were silent were now humming at capacity production and orders listed far ahead.
