HYLAND WINS ON KNOCKOUT IN THE FORTY-FIRST ROUND

Arena, San Francisco, June 26.—"Fighting Dick" Hyland knocked out Leach Cross of New York in the forty-first round of a scheduled forty-five round battle at the Colma arena this afternoon.

This was Cross' initial battle in California soil, and was the first time he had fought at over ten rounds. He started in as chipper as a lark. For the first ten rounds he was the acme of coolness; he chewed gum constantly and ever and anon indulged in witty repartee with seconds and spectators.

In the fortieth round, Cross took the count of nine on three separate occasions, the gong saving him from sure defeat. Hyland, although weakened considerably from the extraordinary efforts on his part, finally put in a last punch, sent Cross through the ropes and into the laps of the newspaper men in the forty-first and final round.

The fight was the most poorly attended of any battle given in this city. A heavy mist fell during the entire forty-one rounds of fighting, and both spectators and fighters were chilled through.

Among the well known fighters introduced from the ring were Young Corbett, Billy Papke, Johnny Frayne and several lesser lights. The crowd yelled for Stanley Ketchel, but he failed to respond.

At the end of the fifth round both men were fresh as no considerable damage had been done by either. Honors were slightly in favor of Cross. The latter's foot-work was good and his blows were delivered with a calculation to do damage.

During the next five rounds honors were about even with Cross using straight rights and lefts and Hyland occasionally landing hard swings. Hyland planted two hard lefts in Cross' stomach, but the easterner by fast and clever foot-work managed to avoid many of his opponent's leads.

At the end of the fifteenth round saw Receipt That Cures Weak Men---Free Send Name and Address Today--You Can Have It Free and be Strong and Vigorous.

I have in my possession a prescription for nervous debility, lack of vigor, weakened manhood, failing memory and lame back, brought on by excesses, unnatural drains or the follies of youth, that has cured so many worn and nervous men right in their own homes--without any additional help or medicine--that I think every man who wishes to regain his manly power and virility, quickly and quietly, should have a copy.

Cross worried and Hyland decidedly in the lead for the first time during the fight. In the twelfth, after a savage assault in which Hyland took considerable punishment, Cross went to the floor for three seconds under a straight right. Hyland's face was badly damaged, but he was landing damaging punches at every opportunity.

After three featureless rounds in which scarcely a blow was landed, by either man, Cross, in the nineteenth feigned grogginess but without fooling his opponent. Both men came up for the twentieth round strong apparently, but the fight started just before the close of the round Hyland brought blood from Cross' mouth by a left to the jaw.

In the twenty-first an uppercut to the jaw sent Cross to the floor, but only for an instant. Round after round Cross kept backing away trying to land on an uncovered spot. Hyland, always foxy, never gave the opening Cross was looking for.

In the twenty-third Hyland swung two punches to the jaw. In the next round Cross, still going away, dazed the Californian with a right chop to the jaw. Round twenty-five was a rapid exchange of vicious blows with Cross somewhat distressed at the end.

In the twenty-sixth Cross was floored by a left to the jaw and took the count of nine. He appeared half beaten and was punished unmercifully before the gong saved him. Coming up weakened in the next round he rallied after a succession of hard lefts and a fierce encounter occurred from which Hyland emerged with blood streaming from his mouth.

Hyland tried for a knockout in the twenty-eighth. Both men were tired and well directed punches from either would have done the trick. Both fought savagely in the twenty-ninth, at the end of which Hyland put a right to the kidneys, staggering Cross. Both men showed down in the next round, with Cross continuously breaking ground. Hyland forced the fighting in the thirty-first. Cross sagged against the ropes, spitting blood and almost beaten. He took the count of nine again in the thirty-second.

The gong saved him. Cross revived slightly before the thirty-third round but Hyland again hammered him repeatedly on head and face. In the next round Hyland continued to chase Cross around the ring trying for a knockout. Cross rallied and fought gamely, making honors even for the round. In the thirty-sixth Cross, for the third time took the count of nine. He was all but beaten.

The thirty-seventh round opened with both fighting viciously. Cross exhibition of gameness elicited cheer after cheer. Cross was made a target for terrific punishment at Hyland's hands.

In the thirty-eighth Hyland tried again and again to knock him out. At the end of the thirty-ninth Hyland began to tire from his efforts to put out his opponent.

In the fortieth round Hyland pushed his clinging opponent away and Cross surprised the spectators by swinging two hard lefts to the jaw. In the forty-first Cross came up fighting, was sent tottering to the ropes with a hard right to the jaw, dropped to the floor and remained for the count of nine. He again staggered to the center of the ring and Hyland finding the jaw apparently an invulnerable point, suddenly changed his tactics and sent a brisk right into Cross' stomach. He dropped to the mat almost lifeless and was counted out.

JOHNSON DID NOT TRY TO KNOCK OUT O'BRIEN

been the same Johnson would have done so. Johnson did not train a minute to meet O'Brien. Possibly he did not have to, under the terms on which the match might have been made.

Johnson is a great deal taller than Terry's case, and it was a right-hand tap on the jaw that put Terry to sleep the first time in his ring career.

poor condition, hog fat and twenty pounds at least overweight, caused some to think that it was this lack of condition which tied Johnson up, but there was abundant evidence that even as he was, he was not trying to go his best pace, for the work he did was nothing like that which he could and did do on other occasions in this city.
