FIGHTING THE WEEVIL IN UTAH.

The Utah Agricultural College has issued a second bulletin on the control of the alfalfa weevil which first imported into Utah in 1907, has spread to all parts of the state where alfalfa is grown...

E. G. Titus, who is the author of the bulletin, says the principal damage is to the first crop by the feeding of the worms, and later, to the third crop, by its failure owing to the delay in getting a second crop started to grow...

"Any means of stimulating the growth of the first crop so that it will nearly or quite reach maturity before it has to be cut on account of the injury by the weevil will aid in this work," says the bulletin.

"The difference of a week or ten days in the cutting of the first crop spells success or failure. Thorough disking or spring tilling as late in the spring as possible will break up the hard soil, stir the alfalfa crowns and give the plant an opportunity for growth several days earlier than it would receive under ordinary conditions.

"We shall show how the girls are exploited and how the houses are run." "We shall give the story of many girls, as told by each girl herself, and later verified."

"We shall prove that the traffic is a man-made thing—the customer a man, the owner a man, all the profit makers men—and the girl, the victim."

"There are blackmailers in Ogden, but we trust there are no white slaves. Of all the low, sneaking, creeping things on earth, nothing approaches in villainy and degradation these procurers."

"As we often have said, the women of the underworld are less to blame than the men responsible for their downfall."

"A Salt Lake paper, in its political gossip, states that the Native Sons of Utah are to name candidates for office in the fall election of this year."

"We are of the opinion that the organization does not allow politics to enter into its affairs, but, if it does, then a mistake is being made."

"As a purely social society, the Native Sons of Utah has a place, but beyond that the organization is trespassing."

"The one severe comment on California is directed against the Native Sons of that state. There the association has become offensive to every one not a native son, and the constant selfishness exhibited has created much prejudice among strangers."

"We do not want that same narrowness to prevail in this state. Here the people are noted for their liberality and their cordial reception of all outsiders. Nothing could so injure Utah as a spirit of provincialism allowed to develop into clannishness."

"The Native Sons as a body should keep out of politics. The organization has a better and broader field in the social uplift of those eligible to membership."

"New York, May 6.—'Wearied of the same old songs' in the morning and the 'same old grub' at noon time, the 3,000 pupils of the Stuyvesant high school are agitated by a strike movement. It began when 1,200 boys assembled in the auditorium yesterday and refused to sing 'hymn 266.'"

"Constant Itch. Intolerable agony, ECZEMA! A few drops of a mild, simple, wash instant relief—all skin distress GONE!"

"D. D. D. Prescription for Eczema Sounds too good to be true?—We guarantee it. The first full size bottle free if D.D.D. cannot reach your case. For your comfort's sake, it is worth a trial. Come in and let us tell you about it. Also about D.D.D. Soap—it helps. Guiley Drug Co."

"OBJECT TO SAME GRUB AND SONGS. New York, May 6.—'Wearied of the same old songs' in the morning and the 'same old grub' at noon time, the 3,000 pupils of the Stuyvesant high school are agitated by a strike movement. "To the Sheriff or any Constable of Weber county, greeting: Make legal service and due return hereof. Witness Hon. W. H. Reeder, Jr., Judge of said court, with the seal of said court, this 14th day of January, A. D. 1913."

"To the Sheriff or any Constable of Weber county, greeting: Make legal service and due return hereof. Witness Hon. W. H. Reeder, Jr., Judge of said court, with the seal of said court, this 14th day of January, A. D. 1913."

ent in the field, thus preventing injury by these insects. Keep the first crop growing as rapidly as possible. "The thorough and rapid cleanup which follows upon turning a large flock of sheep in the field in early spring, allowing them to rapidly eat the weeds, grass and alfalfa off clean, works very satisfactory where animals are available for such purposes. The sheep should not be kept on the fields over three or four days. Early spring pasturing with horses, cattle, or hogs is not advocated."

"When the first crop shows signs of serious injury, it should be cut and removed from the field as rapidly as possible. Then go over the field with a spring tooth harrow or alfalfa cultivator, following this treatment with heavy brush dragging. If the field is heavily infested with worms, it may pay to cross drag it. This treatment, if properly carried out, should leave the field with a fine dust mulch over the surface and the alfalfa stems bare, all the leaves being torn off them."

"Several benefits accrue from this treatment. The ground is in better condition to carry a second crop and the harrowing and dragging has killed many of the larvae and tender pupae. The larvae that survive the treatment have to crawl through fine dust to reach the stems, and the few that really get to the stems find little upon which to feed. A few hours in the dust or unprotected on the stems by shade gives the hot sun an opportunity to kill many of them. It is well not to irrigate for one or two days in order to allow the sun and dry dust to get the best results. The second crop will now start quickly and grow practically unmolested by the weevil. On land treated by this simple method, the gain has been from one and one-half to three and one-half tons per acre for the full two cuttings, a result produced at an outside cost of $1.25 per acre."

"SHOULD BE NO NERVOUS PROSTRATION. The newspaper writer, who has so many suggestions to offer as to how the blackmailers in Ogden could have been caught should resign his position and hire out as a detective. It is a shame that a Sherlock Holmes should be frittering away his time in a newspaper office while a brilliant career is assured him snooping around after handits."

"In the meantime, let us proceed without nervous prostration to do all possible to place the blackhand gang behind the bars. Whatever the cost, the work of running down the blackmailers should be continued relentlessly until the holdups are captured."

"THE HISTORY OF ONE WHITE SLAVE CASE. What is the 'white slave' traffic? Collier's, in this week's issue answers that question in 'The Story of Rosalinda.' Much of the recital is a revelation to us. That a man could be guilty of marrying a young girl for the purpose of placing her in a house of infamy, would be unbelievable if the evidence were not presented in detail and by a reliable writer.

"Here are extracts from the recital of degeneracy: 'Last summer Rosalinda was a sweet and modest girl, one of New York City's Italian community. Her pretty face and gentle demeanor made her friends among the wage-earning people of her neighborhood. She was twenty years old.'

"She had a girl friend with whom she walked and saw the 'movies' and ate ice cream. Florence was a more aggressive sort of girl, and one who easily made acquaintance with men. Rosalinda admired the daring of her companion, and let her do the leading. One of their favorite walking places was Bedford street, that thoroughfare of Italian pleasures."

"One May day, as they were out for an afternoon of fun, a handsome young Italian stopped up and said: 'Anything doing, girls?'"

"Rosalinda resented his familiarity and threatened to complain to the police. The young man apologized and said he meant no harm. He had a charm of manner and continued to talk along. He told Rosalinda he owned the near-by moving picture show, at 33 Bedford street, and that he also ran a dyeing and cleaning establishment on Carmine street. In a few minutes he had pictured himself as a successful man of established position. He invited the girls to visit his theater. Rosalinda refused, and told him if he wished to know her he must visit her at the home of her mother."

"That was the way they met and separated that day. But the young philanderer was not without resources. He knew James Cunito, one of Florence's friends, and through him arranged a series of meetings with Rosalinda. He said his name was Francesco Mariano."

"The four of them, James and Florence, Mariano and Rosalinda, went around together to vaudeville shows, moving pictures, and ice cream saloons. The acquaintance ripened fast into friendship. In ten days Mariano told Rosalinda he wished to marry her. He said he wished to show her how nicely they could live, and he persuaded her to accompany him to what he said were his rooms at 36 Charles street."

"When the quartette reached the address Cunito and Florence remained downstairs. Mariano took Rosalinda one flight up into a four-room apartment. He led her into the tiny kitchen and then into a bedroom, where he hugged and kissed her. She started for the door. Mariano drew a revolver and placed it at her forehead. She screamed. No one came."

"Complexion Secrets Of An Actress" In a recently issued volume bearing the above title, the author says: "Continuous use of grease paints, rouge and the like, had ruined my complexion. My skin was colorless, wrinkled, coarse and punctured with large pores. In England I heard of the virtues of mercolized wax; my first experience with this marvelous substance convinced me it was more valuable than all cosmetics combined. Now whenever my complexion begins to go wrong I get an ounce of mercolized wax at the nearest drug store, spread on a thin layer of it before retiring, washing it off next morning. The wax, after a few such treatments, seems literally to absorb the worn-out cuticle, when a brighter, healthier, younger-looking skin appears."

"For the wrinkles and enlarged pores, I began using a solution of sazoilite, one ounce, dissolved in a half pint water with hazel. Bathing the face in this every day for a while soon relieved the condition most wonderfully."

"Rosalinda went home and told her mother. Next day she and her sister, Pompilla, went to the Bedford street moving picture theater—the one which Mariano said he owned—and told him that the mother wished to see him. That night he came to the home and admitted to the mother and the sister that he had wronged Rosalinda, and that he intended to marry her."

"The next day, May 14, 1912, Francesco Mariano married Rosalinda. "He then took her aboard the train and told her they were on the way to Chicago. When they alighted from the train at La Salle street, Chicago, they were met by Nino Sacco."

"The girl was whipped into submission and made to yield to the demands of her husband. "The next morning Sacco telephoned to Mariano to bring the girl to his room, No. 87," says Collier's. "And here the two men harried her for several hours. At last, in fear and weariness, she gave her consent, and they took her to 106 Twenty-first street and handed her over to Madam Jennie Dorno. Here she received the name of Violet Coela, a daughter of Joe. She was instructed that office would come to book her, that she must deny she 'had a man,' and that she must say she was 'old' in the business."

"So she settled to the life, and for three months was an inmate. Madam Jennie's is a fifty-cent house. Rosalinda earned an average recompense of nearly $80 a week. Over half of this went to Madam Jennie and by her was given to Sacco. The remainder went to Rosalinda, and on Monday, which is pay day, her husband called and took from her the $20 or $30 which was her share of the total $80."

"The brothers of the girl started a search for her and offered one of the gang in New York $100 for her return. This inducement restored Rosalinda to her family. Collier's closes its story with this statement: "That is the story of Rosalinda, married but not a wife, a public prostitute against her will, as innocent of her own downfall as any other modest girl. She started living quietly at home with the mother, the sister, and the two brothers. She is one of the few fortunate ones who have been rescued. There are many more who have not."

"But the life had given her the most terrible of all diseases, and she is now in a public hospital. "Mariano is in jail for a period of five years. "Sacco has just been captured after a long, hard chase. "Meanwhile this system is operating daily in every large city of the United States. "Mariano traps the girl and sells her. "Sacco buys her. "Madam Jennie Dorno exploits her. In the coming articles we show that every kind of girl is drawn in by this system—infants, mountain girls, domestics, immigrants."

"We shall publish the names of the men owners, the landladies, and the procurers. "We shall show how the girls are exploited and how the houses are run. "We shall give the story of many girls, as told by each girl herself, and later verified."

"We shall prove that the traffic is a man-made thing—the customer a man, the owner a man, all the profit makers men—and the girl, the victim."

4% PAID ON SAVINGS COMPOUNDED QUARTERLY

200 boys assembled in the auditorium yesterday and refused to sing "hymn 266." Not a voice was raised, but when the principal announced, "We will now sing 'America,'" the patriotic instinct of scores of boys was so aroused that they sang lustily, although a majority of the students still kept their lips shut tight. "We weren't going to throw down 'America,'" the strike-breaking patriots explained. Balking at the food served in the school lunch room and demanding permission to buy their lunches outside, the lads also started a hunger strike but this has not been settled.

The president's order transferring to the civil service all skilled laborers in the various navy yards of the country meets with general commendation among the unions.
