

BEAUTIFUL MUSIC EXQUISITELY RENDERED. CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, FRIDAY, JUNE 20TH, 8 P. M.

THE SCHUMANN QUINTETTE.

BETTER COME EARLY IF YOU WANT A SEAT. PRICE ADMISSION 50c.

GREEK WANTED HIS MONEY BACK

Upon complaint of Gust Pepares, a Greek merchant on Twenty-fifth street, James Douglas, a local representative of an eastern tailoring firm, was arrested yesterday on the charge of obtaining money under false pretenses.

Douglas claims that he has had some trouble with his house but is still expecting the suits. When he told the judge that he had no regular business establishment or bond, the judge asked what protection his customers had who put up deposits.

DEATHS AND FUNERALS

BABBY—Services for Mrs. Jesse Babby, 25 years of age, the wife of Frank Babby, who died in Salt Lake yesterday, were held this afternoon at the Kirkendall chapel with Rev. H. D. Zimmerman officiating.

RIDDLE—The funeral of Albert A. Riddle will be held at 4:00 Sunday afternoon from the family residence, 953 Twenty-first street. Rev. G. A. Rasaweller will conduct the services.

TAYLOR—Funeral services for Mary Taylor were held at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the Third ward meeting house, with Bishop's Counsellor Elias King presiding.

Advertisement for Sewed Soles 65¢, Ogden Shoe Repairing Factory.

Advertisement for Monterey 2:09 1/4, L. F. Campbell, North Ogden, Utah.

W. A. M'KEEVER TO LECTURE IN OGDEN

"As a rule agricultural bulletins are not fascinating specimens of literature—except to a farmer—but the idea of trying for a better breed of children struck me as more interesting than the raising of better hops or poultry."

Mr. McKeever is to appear on the Chautauqua platform at Glenwood this season. Prof. McKeever is a product of the Middle West. Born of pioneer folk, hustling for a broad education, specializing in philosophy he began his teaching in the Kansas Agricultural College at Manhattan.

His bulletins have been widely used by all classes of people; a superintendent of a large railroad company ordered 10,000 copies for distribution to employees.

When the professor starts in to propound his idea he drops the language of the scholar and talks in plain, forceful English. Someone described him once as "a fresh breeze from Kansas." His theories are as breezy as his language.

- "The New Home Economics." "The New Play Movement." "The New Civic Righteousness." "The New Social Uplift." "The New Moral Code."

DESCENDANT OF BARBARA FRITCHIE

Flag day is of more than passing interest to more than one of Ogden's citizens. A relative of one of the heroines of the Stars and Stripes has recently come to Ogden to make his home.

Barbara Fritchie was the oldest daughter of Catherine and Nicholas Hauer, relatives of the ancestors of young Hauer of Ogden.

Through the kindness of Mr. Harry R. Cramer of Ogden, The Standard has received a copy of the Frederick Daily News containing an account of the elaborate ceremonies at the Fritchie interment, Frederick, Md., by the way is Mr. Cramer's old home.

The services were in charge of the Barbara Fritchie Memorial association. The exercises were held at the Mt. Olivet cemetery, to which place a procession moved through the streets of Frederick with the mortal remains of the departed.

Among the other speakers was Mrs. Caroline Elbert Winebrenner, a niece of Barbara Fritchie, who gave some of the historical facts relating to her aunt and the incident relating to the waving of the flag in defiance to the passing Confederate troops.

Mr. Taylor was the official stenographer of the convention and he will be a busy man for a number of days transcribing the minutes and discussions of the convention, to be sent to the printers. The entire proceedings, together with the speeches made, will be published in pamphlet form.

Bloomer girls here today—Canton team will have supporters—Canton, N. C., Daily.

The True Story of the Flag Waving. Mrs. Caroline M. Winebrenner (nee Ebert), a niece of Barbara Fritchie, made affidavit to the fact of her aunt's flag waving defiance to the passing Confederate troops on that memorable September day.

pursuing the Confederates, and which passed the aged heroine's house a few days after the flag incident. He also vividly recalls the enthusiasm of the boys in blue as they were told the thrilling story.

Mr. James L. Parsons, a prominent contractor of Washington, who was among the army in gray that passed the Fritchie home, has recently related some recollections to friends at Frederick. The News, referring to his reminiscences, states: "Mr. Parsons marched by Barbara Fritchie's home on the day the aged heroine defied the Confederate troops, and all through the lines the troops were talking about the episode. He remembers how soldiers pointed out the house, and the incident was reported to have occurred on the morning of that day."

In the Atlanta Constitution of April 7, 1910, appeared the following statement from a Confederate veteran, under the caption of "Veteran Tells True Story of Barbara Fritchie: 'The poem is, indeed, a classic, and is read with pride by every one who comes to know it.'"

As will be seen, Captain Meyers gives affirmative evidence of the flag act—the raison d'être of his statement apparently being his desire to exclude General Jackson as a party to the incident. It should here be emphasized that Barbara Fritchie's relatives have never claimed that Stonewall Jackson figured in the matter.

As will be seen, Captain Meyers states that that officer passed through Frederick by a different route. But in the various repetitions of the flag story, one version indicating Jackson as the premier anti-ethnic character in that notable drama was rife for quite a time.

"If I remember rightly," said Mrs. Southworth, "Barbara was at the time more than ninety years old. The town was about equally divided between sympathizers with the Southern cause and those who upheld the Union."

Southworth, who thus refers to it and to its subsequent use by Whittier. "I remember rightly," said Mrs. Southworth, "Barbara was at the time more than ninety years old. The town was about equally divided between sympathizers with the Southern cause and those who upheld the Union."

Southworth, who thus refers to it and to its subsequent use by Whittier. "I remember rightly," said Mrs. Southworth, "Barbara was at the time more than ninety years old. The town was about equally divided between sympathizers with the Southern cause and those who upheld the Union."

Southworth, who thus refers to it and to its subsequent use by Whittier. "I remember rightly," said Mrs. Southworth, "Barbara was at the time more than ninety years old. The town was about equally divided between sympathizers with the Southern cause and those who upheld the Union."

Southworth, who thus refers to it and to its subsequent use by Whittier. "I remember rightly," said Mrs. Southworth, "Barbara was at the time more than ninety years old. The town was about equally divided between sympathizers with the Southern cause and those who upheld the Union."

Southworth, who thus refers to it and to its subsequent use by Whittier. "I remember rightly," said Mrs. Southworth, "Barbara was at the time more than ninety years old. The town was about equally divided between sympathizers with the Southern cause and those who upheld the Union."

Southworth, who thus refers to it and to its subsequent use by Whittier. "I remember rightly," said Mrs. Southworth, "Barbara was at the time more than ninety years old. The town was about equally divided between sympathizers with the Southern cause and those who upheld the Union."

Southworth, who thus refers to it and to its subsequent use by Whittier. "I remember rightly," said Mrs. Southworth, "Barbara was at the time more than ninety years old. The town was about equally divided between sympathizers with the Southern cause and those who upheld the Union."

Southworth, who thus refers to it and to its subsequent use by Whittier. "I remember rightly," said Mrs. Southworth, "Barbara was at the time more than ninety years old. The town was about equally divided between sympathizers with the Southern cause and those who upheld the Union."

Southworth, who thus refers to it and to its subsequent use by Whittier. "I remember rightly," said Mrs. Southworth, "Barbara was at the time more than ninety years old. The town was about equally divided between sympathizers with the Southern cause and those who upheld the Union."

Southworth, who thus refers to it and to its subsequent use by Whittier. "I remember rightly," said Mrs. Southworth, "Barbara was at the time more than ninety years old. The town was about equally divided between sympathizers with the Southern cause and those who upheld the Union."

Southworth, who thus refers to it and to its subsequent use by Whittier. "I remember rightly," said Mrs. Southworth, "Barbara was at the time more than ninety years old. The town was about equally divided between sympathizers with the Southern cause and those who upheld the Union."

Southworth, who thus refers to it and to its subsequent use by Whittier. "I remember rightly," said Mrs. Southworth, "Barbara was at the time more than ninety years old. The town was about equally divided between sympathizers with the Southern cause and those who upheld the Union."

SPECIAL SALE on White Serge Suits, Coats, Dresses and Skirts. HALF-PRICE (see window display) Don't Forget That our Credit System is for your benefit. The Fourth of July will soon be here, and everybody wants to be well-dressed for the occasion.

The NATIONAL - A STORE WITH THE LIBERAL CREDIT SYSTEM. CHANGES IN THE TIME TABLES. Salt Lake, June 14.—Starting tomorrow, the Oregon Short Line will establish for the season train service between Salt Lake and Yellowstone park.

Ogden Retail Merchants Annual Outing AT LAGOON TUESDAY, JUNE 17TH ALL KINDS OF AMUSEMENTS 25c For the Trip In Admission to the Grounds. A Good Time Assured to all Attendants ONLY OGDEN MADE GOODS WILL BE SOLD ON GROUNDS Ogden Retail Merchants' Association