Charles Lamb, a lineman, employed by the Merchants' Light and Power company in placing the luminous arc lights upon the steel poles, suffered a badly bruised hip and a sprained ankle, when the rope he was using for a safety belt became unfastened.

Lamb was employed by the Light company for several months. His home is in the east.

A VICIOUS DOG ATTACKS A MAN M. J. Ellis, who conducts a grocery at 2108 Monroe avenue, while delivering fruit to a house on Monroe avenue, between Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth streets, was attacked and severely bitten by a large dog at 10 o'clock this morning.

Ellis sent a call to the police and after waiting an hour with no response being made, proceeded after the dog with a revolver, furnished by one of the women of the neighborhood, who also joined in the chase.

The dog was finally cornered and several shots were necessary to kill him. Mr. Ellis' wound was dressed by a doctor.

SENATOR ALLEN OF NEBRASKA IN OGDEN

Former Senator William B. Allen of Madison, Neb., is the guest of Troy Hale at his home on Washington avenue, known as the Raymond place.

Senator Allen was driven over the city and up the canyon this morning by S. S. Smith, who knew the senator in Nebraska.

The former statesman, who was a leader of the Populist party but who now is a strong Democrat, is so favorably impressed with Ogden that he may decide to make this his home.

When at the height of his political career, Senator Allen held the attention of the entire country by making the longest continuous speech ever made in congress, speaking sixteen hours as part of a parliamentary move to obstruct the Republican majority in the senate.

BATTLE FOUGHT WITH TWO BANDITS

Following an attack upon him by two men, as he was crossing through the High school corner on his way to his home at Twenty-sixth street and Monroe avenue at 10:30 o'clock last night, B. F. Ballantyne, a stenographer in the First National bank, beat off his assailants and engaged in a pistol duel with them.

Ballantyne received one bullet that was stopped by a heavy note book in a breast pocket. A second bullet went through his hat. Because one of the two men fell after Ballantyne had fired, he believes that at least one of his shots took effect.

Ballantyne's apartments was the scene of an attempted burglary Tuesday night during which the owner fired two shots at the intruder. He believes one of the men who attacked him last night to be the burglar.

As a result of the report to the police, Chief of Police W. I. Norton and the city detectives have been investigating the case today.

When a visit was paid to the home of the young man, at Twenty-sixth street and Quincy avenue, where he remained during the day, Chief Norton and Detective Pincock declared they were astonished to find that the bullet fired at Ballantyne and stopped by the bank book, pierced the book but the hole in the coat bore evidence of being made from the inside.

Ballantyne was carrying a hat in his hand following the desperate struggle on the turf and the bullet hole went directly through the center of the crown. The chief declares powder marks are on the inside of the hat.

According to the story related by Ballantyne to the police at his home today, he had a "hunch" that he was to be held up, so he took a revolver with him upon finishing his work at the bank.

When the two thugs leaped upon him from the shadows, a desperate struggle ensued in which all three were rolling around on the walk and grass. Finally, Ballantyne broke away from the thugs and leaped to his feet, drawing his weapon as he did so.

The father, J. E. Ballantyne, called upon Chief Norton today and demanded that a vigilance committee be appointed to patrol the streets at night and protect citizens from the rough characters that are putting residents in fear of their lives.

A meeting of citizens is to be called some time during the week, to consider the question of law and order.

NELLIE M. CRANER STATES HER CASE

In the district court, yesterday afternoon, the plaintiff in the divorce case of Nellie M. Craner against Frank E. Craner, in reply to a counterclaim, stated that she left the defendant at Le Grande, Oregon, because of his dissipation and failure to provide a home for herself and children.

Mrs. Craner denies that she has been influenced by her mother to discontinue marital relations with the defendant, but that the action was taken of her own volition, induced by cruel treatment on the part of Mr. Craner and his failure to provide for the past four or five years, the plaintiff says, the defendant has wasted his wages in drink, to the neglect of his family, and that he has been cruel. Mrs. Craner says her husband has threatened to kill her and the children and that frequently he has used bad language.

The attorney for Mrs. Craner has given notice that on August 4, he will move the court for an order providing that the defendant advance expense money for the case and also that he be required to pay temporary alimony.

NEW ATLANTA ENTRANT GETS GRACE WHEN SHE PICKS UP "GOLDEN APPLE"

Miss Mildred Anderson, one of the "wood nymphs," exercises rhythmically in the glen at Sharon, Mass., in "Atlant's Race," and she stoops to pick up the "golden apple," just as we read about in mythology. The little hamlet of Sharon is becoming the focusing center of all eyes since the fair exponents of Lyric Rhythmic expression began to disport themselves, arrayed in ancient Grecian garb, almost daily in the shadows of the stately trees.
