OFFICERS NOW LOOKING FOR THE COMPANION OF J. H. MARTIN

Short Man Is Being Searched For and a Clue Has Been Obtained Which Is Being Followed Out of the City—Martin Hopes to Get Out on Bond Before Christmas Day—His Trial Will Not Occur Until February—Both Martins Are Good Prisoners.

The question uppermost in the mind of J. H. Martin is whether he will be privileged to spend the holidays with his family or be forced to remain in the city jail, and the answer depends on the action of the judges of the district court on the reduction of his bond.

As is well known by the reading public, Martin's set at present is $20,000, but his attorney will argue a motion in the district court for a reduction of the bond to $5,000 or $10,000.

The time for hearing the motion has not been definitely fixed, but Judge Harris has expressed his willingness to sit with Judge Howell next Wednesday to give the question consideration. If the bond is reduced it is understood that Martin will be prepared to furnish the required amount forthwith not early enough, perhaps, for his release Christmas day, but son enough to enable him to spend a part of the holiday season with his family. If the bond is not reduced, it is a certainty that he will remain in jail until the time of trial, which will be in February.

It is not expected that an information will be filed early enough for trial in the January term of his division of the district court, as the setting of cases will be within the next few days, and Judge Harris already has set his calendar for January. The information will be on file, however, early enough to have Martin's case set for trial in February. The division of the district court in which the case will be tried will depend upon the number of the case on the files of the county clerk's office. One of the judges is assigned the even numbered cases and the other the odd numbered ones. It is possible that the defendant will ask for a change of venue on the grounds that bias and prejudice of the community would make it impossible to get a jury of the right frame of mind to hear the case and pass judgment.

The disposition of the Martin case, Chief Norton and Sheriff De Vine say, does not dispose of the blackmailing cases by any means, as there is yet "the short man" to apprehend. It is a certainty that no one man committed all the acts alleged in the complaint against Martin, and it is also certain that in all the blackmailing crimes and the train robberies others were concerned. Detective Edwards says he saw three men in the battle Sunday morning, November 9, and in the railroad cases it has been held that there were three bandits. However, there were at least two.

The officers have definite clues as to Martin's associates in crime, but it is not a very easy matter to connect them with the blackmailing cases. It is said that the second man wanted is not in the city, but that his whereabouts are known by certain parties who will eventually disclose his hiding place. The officers have no information of a definite name to give in this respect, only to say that they are working hard to catch the second man as they did to get Martin. A number of clues directed toward certain short men of suspicious character have been followed, but to no avail. It is a very long road that has no turn in it, the officers state, and it is expected that before a great while a certain trail will be disclosed.

Harry Martin will have a preliminary hearing Tuesday on the charge of burglary, but it is stated that it will be brief. In fact, the prosecution has disclosed the names of only three witnesses who have been called to testify and it is possible that there will be no more. Still, there is a likelihood that the county attorney is giving all the names of his witnesses to the public. Those already summoned are Detective George Wardlaw, L. H. Leavitt and G. T. Marler.

Both the Martins are in fair spirits today and do not seem to be worried over their cases. The officers say they are good prisoners and make no trouble for them in any way.

SALE OF FAIR GROUNDS AS SEEN BY THE DIRECTORS

The announcement yesterday in the Standard in regard to the proposed sale of the Fair grounds has brought out the following statements from the directors of the fair association:

Mr. A. P. Bigelow, cashier of the Ogdens state bank, in an interview yesterday, said:

"I do not like to see the community lose the Fair grounds, with all the buildings and equipment that have been put there for the purpose of conducting fairs and stock shows. The buildings are adequate for exhibition purposes and should be held intact.

"In regard to exhibitions, the fairs and stock shows have been highly successful. The live stock show this year held three years ago, during the National Wool Growers' convention, was one of the biggest ever held and there were more animals shown than at any other show of its kind in years.

"While passing through Evanston, Wyo., last fall on an automobile trip, I noticed that they were putting up exhibition buildings and I was told by a business man of Evanston that they were going to have a fair. I heard later that the fair was a big success and it seems to me that it would not be wise for the people of Ogdens and Weber county to permit the destruction of buildings similar to those that the people of a community close by have just seen fit to erect.

"Weber county fair grounds are conveniently located and if they are sold, as has been proposed, it would be impossible to secure as good a site if at some future time the people should seek grounds for fair and exhibition purposes. I sincerely hope that some plan will be evolved so that the buildings may be kept for the purpose for which they were built."

O. B. Madison, when approached on the same subject, said, "I dislike to see the fair grounds and buildings done away with, as there may come a time when the community will have need of both. They should be maintained by all means do not, however, see how the stockholders can keep on paying for the maintenance of the property, as the grounds occupy 25 acres of valuable land which, with the buildings and improvements, is worth in the neighborhood of $30,000. The taxes and assessments for the upkeep of the property are too big to be very well borne by a few people, but if the city and county cooperate in the taking over of the property and the holding of fairs, this expense would be divided among all the people and would not be hard on any one.

"It is almost impossible for individuals to successfully conduct a fair without outside assistance. The county authorities to levy a tax for fair purposes and, with the assistance of the business men, could make it a success. A fair should be held every year as fairs are beneficial to any community. Though they have been failures from a financial point of view, they have been highly successful in the matter of exhibits. Through these exhibits, the horticulturists and farmers have been benefited and the people of the city have derived benefits through the advertising obtained by visitors from outside points.

"The city should not permit this property to be cut up. It should be purchased as a whole to be used as a park and, through the assistance of the county in holding fairs and stock shows, the renting of the grounds to other exhibitors, the grounds and buildings could be maintained with little individual expense and, as all the people would benefit by keeping the grounds, the expense should be borne by all."

In relation to the proposed sale of the fair grounds, John Pingree, cashier of the First National Bank, said:

"The expense and expense of keeping up the fair grounds and buildings has become too burdensome for the company to bear and, as there has been no revenue derived from the grounds, the directors have thought best to dispose of them. They have decided, therefore, to sell the grounds either as a whole or in small lots, whichever way is the most advantageous, though they prefer to sell the ground as a whole so it may be used again for fair purposes.

"Personally, I would much rather see the city or county purchase the grounds for park and fair purposes. All over the country cities are beginning to see the need of having parks and their land is being bought for that purpose. Ogdens needs more parks and a more favorable location than the fair grounds could not be secured for the making of a large park. The city could much better afford to keep the grounds, than can the present owners, as it would be exempt from taxation and that alone would cut off a part of the expense. The buildings are already there, if the people should want to have a fair, and the structures, by all means, should be kept for exhibition purposes."

Dr. H. M. Rowe, president of the Weber club, when approached on the subject, said:

"The fair grounds should be bought and held intact by the city and county. The city could buy it for park purposes or the county could purchase it through a vote of the people. It could then be kept up by the levying of a small tax and by having fairs. The people who have been running it have spent a lot of money for the public good and cannot afford to do so any longer. The expenses are about $1500 a year for taxes and keep when no fairs are held, and the holders are tired of being assessed.

"I am certainly in favor of the city or county buying the property. It is only a matter of a short time when the people will demand another fair and then they will want grounds for exhibition purposes. The property can be bought, I believe, for about $25,000, or maybe for less, and that is getting it very cheap, considering its location and the modern improvements that have been made.

"The grounds could be made into a beautiful park and then it would be possible to have a fair at any time. The city needs park grounds and desirable locations should be purchased before the land becomes too costly. It could be owned by the city and the county could be allowed to run the fairs, assisting in this way its maintenance. Great benefits have been derived in the past from the fairs and stock shows that have been held on the grounds. The international live stock show in 1911 resulted in bringing into this locality some of the best livestock in the world, and in improving the breed of horses, sheep and cattle all over the western country.

"I am sure that by co-operation, the city and county could purchase and maintain the grounds and buildings for the purpose for which they have been used in the past."

Let Us Fill Your List

Today bring your list here and let us help you with it. One hundred and seventy-five people will be here tomorrow to serve you, and any one of this great crowd of helpers will be able to help you with sensible suggestions. This small army of salespeople see the merchandise in the different departments—nearly every one of them has a good general idea of the stocks all over the store, and with this knowledge will be able to make suggestions which you will find helpful.

The store will not be open until 8:30 this morning and will remain open until 9:30. You will find, however, that the morning is a good time to shop. It will pay you to leave the house-work until afternoon. Come early today with your list of gifts.

SENIORS XMAS DANCE.

The Ogdens High School Seniors gave their annual holiday dance at the High School last evening in the assembly hall, a large number participating. Turners five-piece orchestra furnished a fine program of 22 dances and wild cherry punch was served. A pretty evergreen bower was arranged for the punch booth.

The hall made a typical Christmas winter scene in its effective decoration of evergreens, poinsettia, and green festoons with a touch of snow baskets of evergreen and poinsettia made a border around the room and festoons of snow-covered evergreen extended from the side ceilings to the chandelier from which a large Xmas basket was suspended. A huge ball with mistletoe was suspended from the center of the ceiling. Lattice cosy corners, covered with evergreen, were artistically arranged.

The affair was one of the most successful of its kind ever given in the new assembly hall. All details were well carried out and nothing that would add to the evening's pleasure was omitted.

MISS MALONE, VIOLINIST.

Miss Genevieve Malone, formerly of this city will give several violin solos at the Christmas services in St. Mary's cathedral of Salt Lake City tomorrow morning at Solemn High Mass, celebrated at 11 o'clock.
