Horoscope

Sunday, November 22, 1914.
(Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

This is a day of contradictory influences, according to astrology. While Neptune, Saturn and Uranus are all adverse, Venus and the Sun are in benefic aspect. Mars changes from evil to good.

The best aspect of the day is for earnest, enthusiastic minds that seek to solve big problems. The Sun gives domination, power, vigor and foresight. Rulers and all who have the destinies of nations in their keeping should benefit.

It is a fairly good day for women, who should be fortunate in their love affairs. Marriages and engagements are subject to a good ruling.

The aspect is a fortunate one for seeking friends who may be valuable in the everyday affairs of life. Sociability, the entertainment of friends and the meeting of strangers are all likely to bring luck.

Neptune presages danger from schemers. Fraud and misrepresentation are believed to flourish under this rule. It is predicted that crimes that have to do with money will multiply during the winter.

Uranus is in a place held to be most unfortunate for those who should use good judgment. Important decisions should be delayed until a more auspicious time.

Under this configuration diseases of the stomach and digestive apparatus are supposed to increase. The aspect operates to increase the activity of the mind, making it restless, rebellious and impatient at limitations.

Troubles in naval affairs are prophesied persistently to the astrologers. The planets do not give any assurance of speedy ending of war. There is prophecy of a winter campaign more terrible than any that has ever been endured. The seas declare that the crossing of the Alps by Napoleon's army produced less suffering than will be endured during the coming winter.

Persons whose birthdate it is advised to avoid too much diversion. With attention to business, men may have a prosperous year. Those who are employed will benefit. The young will become engaged or will marry. Children born on this day may have dispositions that are mercurial and difficult to deal with, but they will have bright minds and should succeed in life.

Monday, November 23, 1914.

According to the reading of the stars, this is rather an unimportant day. Jupiter is in benefic aspect, but Saturn is adverse, and it is wise to exercise caution.

The rule is fairly good for bankers, merchants, and lawyers, who should find the day's activities important chiefly because they lead to broadened fields of industry.

There is a good sign for buying staples, being especially fortunate, as commerce is to open in many directions now unexpected.

The Panama Canal is subject to a rule that will cause anxiety. It is said, for new problems will be presented by conditions that follow the war. This prophecy does not refer to any complication that can be foreseen by statesmen and diplomats, but to something quite unexpected.

The exposition in San Francisco has a guidance of the planets which promises much good luck.

While Saturn is unfriendly, it is wise to avoid dark places and unknown routes of travel. Accidents are believed to be common while the planet is in evil aspect.

This is not a lucky day for starting any new enterprise. It will fail to put off any important venture in business.

Diplomatic blunders are foretold for Greece. The King of Sweden is subject to a sinister sway, which is read to indicate loss of health and prestige.

Japan is subject to a government of the planets which is believed by astrologers to be exceedingly interesting to the United States.

Neptune in Leo will continue to trouble France. It is said by foreign astrologers, but Paris is safe and the future of the country is brilliant.

The President of the United States is warned against the possibility of blunders on the part of a trusted diplomat, whom he will send on a secret mission.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a successful year. Both men and women will prosper financially. Young persons will have romance.

Children born on this day should prosper all through life. They will enjoy work as well as play. Both should like outdoor sports and have great physical strength.

A WORD OF THE HIGH COLLAR.

The most amusing touch about the high collar that the American woman is taking up is the fact that she has decided to leave a deep V-shaped wedge of her chest exposed beneath it. She saunters in the street in the coldest weather with her coat cut down almost to the top of her corset showing a flicker of bare skin between, and her neck enveloped in a fur stock that is warm enough to do duty in the Russian trenches.

The new blouses also have high-boned collars and the coats reach to the ears. Some have the directive collars that rise high and turn back on themselves in a straight line; others have the Consulate collar which goes straight across the back of the neck, also high and turned over and made of some brightly colored stiff silk thickly encrusted with gold or silver arabesques.

The smartest outside collar is of fur of a very small pattern, without a trace of a down's ruff in that it rises to the chin and does not bind the neck under the chin. It fastens at the left front with a rosette of velvet ribbon, or with braid buttons and loops.

High black velvet dog collars are again in style with house blouses that are cut in a deep surplice opening in front. Clever women use these on the street under a coat so there will not be a bare expanse of neck between the chin and the coat collar. The usual rolling collar of starched white muslin that extends in a surplice effect to the bust has had its day.

THE GUEST TOWEL.

Among the newest designs for small guest towels is one of a fine damask of a very small pattern, without a trace of a down's ruff in that it rises to the chin and does not bind the neck under the chin. It fastens at the left front with a rosette of velvet ribbon, or with braid buttons and loops.

APPLES WITH THE MEAT COURSE.

Apples in many forms are delicious with meat. Apple sauce is the accepted accompaniment of roast pork, and small apples baked with nutmeg, without skins, are also delicious with pork or with veal.

Apples fried in half-inch slices with bacon are a tempting entree served alone, or a fitting accompaniment for many meat dishes.

Apple sauce can be served in tiny shells of pastry with roast poultry and apple fritters can be served with poultry or game. When making apple sauce to serve with meat the red skin of the apple boiled with the sauce, which should be pressed through a strainer to make it perfectly smooth when done, will give it a delightful color.

MAKES THEM SHARP.

If you have a pair of scissors that need sharpening, just take a bottle with a small neck such as a vanilla extract bottle and try to cut the neck off. After you have tried quite a little while, try your scissors and you will be surprised to see how sharp they are.

CURLED UP CORNERS.

When rug corners curl up lay the rug "face" down and pour boiling water on the corners so affected, letting them lie until cold.

ALUM MENDS DISHES.

There is nothing better for mending broken dishes or a lamp that is loose in the collar than alum melted and used while hot.

DELICIOUS CHRISTMAS CONFECTION.

As a tasty delight for the home confectioner to make there is nothing more sumptuous than creme de luxe. The recipe sounds simple enough, but it requires care in the making. It is well worth the trouble, however.

One cup of dry sugar must be put into a dry frying pan, one cup of milk, two cups of sugar, and one heaping tablespoon of butter must be put into a porcelain kettle.

Place the two pans on the fire simultaneously. Stir the sugar in the dry pan constantly to prevent burning or lumping. When it has become a rich brown pour it into the mixture in the other pan, which by this time should be boiling. Allow the two to boil together for two or three minutes. Try in cold water, and when it makes a soft ball it is sufficiently cooked.

Remove and stir it gently round and round. Be careful not to let air in by stirring strenuously, as it will sugar. Chop together one cup of shelled pecans, one cup of bleached almonds, one cup of candied cherries, one cup of maroon glace, and one cup of dates.

When the candy begins to stiffen pour in fruit and stir briskly for a few minutes. Pour into a buttered pan to cool.

No more delightful confection than this could be given or received for Christmas, especially when it is put

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. MRS. KATE S. HILLIARD ADDRESSES LEAGUE ON MILITARISM

"Militarism" was the subject of an address delivered by Kate S. Hilliard of Ogden before the Liberal League, a non-sectarian organization in Salt Lake and the viewpoint was that of a Socialist, as follows:

"Economic necessity or commercialism has been the underlying cause for every war which has been waged since civilization began. Historians, teachers, writers, the church, and all the powers that be, have with great care either ignored this fact or treated it as being of little significance. It is a fact to be concealed or obscured from the common people and it is not for the interest of those in control to recognize or acknowledge the truth. It is often true that the people whom it most nearly concerns refuse to see the truth and will follow the leaders into a false security. The fact that the wars of our country were fought for the economic interests of the capitalists is not generally known. Our histories tell us that the revolution was brought about to free the people from the tyranny of England. So it was, but history does not say to which class the people who sought freedom belonged.

For there are, and will be until Socialism triumphs, two classes, the capitalist class and the working class, whose interests constantly clash. England wanted the colonies to remain an agricultural people, producing raw products for her manufacturing interests. No land was allowed to be sold except to the English in fact. England exploited the colonists and it was the property-owning class that rebelled. The war was fought, the common people doing the fighting, as usual, and after the war they found themselves exploited worse by their own property class than they were by England. The sentiment that the spirit of '76 was the only reason for the revolution is a false reason for the obscure from the minds of the people the economic reason. This is true of the civil war also. The abolition sentiment was strong in the hearts of many, but abolition of slavery would still be on the lips and the tongues of the men and men like William Lloyd Garrison and Harriet Beecher Stowe, if the economic interests of the northern and southern capitalists had not clashed. Abolition of slavery came after the war was over. The South needed more territory, her land was worn out, her slaves increasing, and she could see a possibility of larger markets. The North with free labor could not compete successfully with the South and the war broke out, the working class again fighting for those who wanted commercial supremacy. If you remember, the men who furnished food for the armies stayed home and grew rich on the economic need of the fighters.

"We have advanced considerably since the revolution, the civil war, and the Spanish-American war, which, by the way, was fought for the interests of the sugar king, and today the fact that the present war is being waged by the different nations for the control of the world's markets, is not obscured by any sentiment.

Judge Gary of the United States Steel Corporation let loose some plain talk the other day as to the causes of the European war. Said he: 'I venture the opinion that the struggle for commercial supremacy was the underlying cause of the war, or at least it had a decided influence upon its precipitation and that the question at issue largely related to dollars and cents.

"Of course, these dollars and cents are not to find their way into the pockets of the working class. Far otherwise and to the contrary. It is well known now that Germany has long been preparing for the war and the other nations have been watching Germany and each other as a cat does a mouse, ready to pounce at the first provocation or excuse. Germany was in the same predicament as our own Southern states, hemmed in on all sides, her population increasing, and her land occupied. She had no way to extend her industries and her people were dissatisfied with the heavy tax of militarism inflicted upon them. The spirit of anti-militarism was spreading and becoming a menace to all the capitalists in Europe, and they became class conscious. Hence the war.

"Since the war, we hear the cry of patriotism. Why should the working class be patriotic to any country? What has the working class in common with the capitalist class? The economic condition is practically the same in every country for the working man. It matters not whether he works under the flag of Germany, England, or of the United States. The cry to the people to be loyal to their flag is a cry to tempt that has been hinged into their ears from childhood up. The following excerpt from Iervé's 'Anti-Patriotism,' a pamphlet, you should all read, as it applies to every country, even to the United States:

"At an age when the critical faculties are not yet awakened within us, we have heard at the family table, tales of horrible villainies committed by Germans to the English, and deeds of glory achieved by the French. The German youngsters are at the same time being filled with stories of all sorts of crimes perpetrated by the French, the English, or the Russians. We are taught that France is the land of the brave, the home of generosity and chivalry, and the refuge of liberty. They are saying the same things of their countries to the children in England, Germany, Russia, Japan, and in our innocence, we believe all. For Christmas presents, our fathers and even our mothers give us tin soldiers, guns, drums, bugles and trumpets. And when this beautiful education has made of us patriots in the bud, the school—secular as well as parochial—puts the final patriotic touches on us. Do you recall those little school manuals in which the history of nations is doctored so as to present the French fatherland in its greatest glory? The German children are put through exactly similar courses, only these confine their praises strictly to Germany. Do you recollect those textbooks of history which, on each page, cynically presented some scene of carnage, or the likeness of some warrior? Beware each picture or commentary, each line of which drips with hatred to foreigners, with national contempt, and the worship of the saber. In order that the patriot may be perfect, in order that the virus may strike through to the bone, it only remains to rig him out with the pomps of war."

"It is time this false teaching of patriotism should be relegated to the past and we, as Socialists, denounce it in unmeasured terms. Paine's declaration 'The world is my country, expresses the true sentiment, and his answer to Franklin when he said, 'Where freedom is, is my country,' is typical of the man who was a hundred years ahead of his time and was consequently ostracized and forgotten by an ignorant and religiously intolerant people. His answer was 'Where freedom is not is my country.' Today it is impossible to find a country where the working class is free to dictate the conditions under which they shall work. In every country we find the wage slave. So truly the world is the working man's country, his country where freedom does not exist. Under these conditions it is not a farce to talk to him of patriotism to the country which he happens to have been born? 'My country, right or wrong, but still my country,' has no place in the heart or mind of the working class, and this late call of patriotism should find little or no response.

The heroic defense of Belgium by her people is not heroic when we know that the working class of Belgium is in the same economic slavery as the German working class. No matter whether they are under the rule of the kaiser or the rule of King George, their condition will remain the same. What would it have mattered to the economic standing of the Belgian working class if the German army had been allowed to march through their kingdom? What a farce the fortresses of Belgium have proven! If it were not so tragic in its consequences, it would be laughable. The fortresses of Belgium were built by the Krupps, designed by them to protect her from invasion. The Krupps are Germans. Then the Krupps knowing the strength of their own work, build machines of destruction that the German kaiser can use and which are powerful enough to knock the fortresses over like a card.

house built by children. England, Russia and France, impelled by the same reason that impels Germany to invade Belgium, jump in to protect Belgium and in the long run poor misguided Belgium will be lost in the shuffle. This false patriotism is being overworked. Even now the papers and magazines are filled with the anger the United States is in and there are calls to increase our army and navy to protect us from the kaiser or other monarchs who would make a monarchy of the United States. What a farce. No matter which side is victorious, no matter if the United States is invaded, the cause of humanity will go right along. No worse conditions could exist than do exist in this country. Witness Colorado, West Virginia and California. It takes too long to mention them all.

"There is a censorship of the press today. Do you suppose we get the truth from abroad? Hardly! It has been scattered broadcast that the patriotic love of country has made the Socialists in Europe forget the anti-patriotism they taught and believed in and they have willingly and gladly taken up arms against their fellow working men to fight for the king and his country. I don't believe it. Under strong governmental or economic pressure, they may have been forced to, but of their own free will, never.

"Do you suppose there is not internal strife in these warring nations? Is it not possible that there are men watching and working for a chance to make possible the commonwealth in which we believe? Our faith and love for the cause in which we believe our knowledge of the economic conditions tell us this is not only possible but probable. The cruelties of the German army have been dwelt upon and given credence, and some are foolish enough to imagine they are more brutal or cruel than the other nations. War is war, and war is hell in every country. The brutalities are perpetrated by every army and it is with poor grace that any nation accuses another—it is a case of the pot calling the kettle black, and is foolish in the extreme. It is a waste of energy and detracts from the real issue which is to us to eliminate from our minds and the minds of those whom we can reach this false idea of patriotism. The old war is the first one in which sentiment and principle have been relegated to the rear. It's chief advantage will be to lay bare the aims and designs of the capitalist class and to open the eyes of the workers to the game and possibly to make them as conscious of the class to which they belong as are the capitalists. When we are called upon to defend the liberties of the people, it will be the liberties we demand, not the liberties the capitalist class bestows upon us. Herve said to the advocate general and the jury and court before which he was tried, sentenced and condemned to imprisonment for his anti-militarism. 'The nation for you, is a kindly mother; for us a step-mother, a shrew, who detests us. Patriotism is for you a sentiment, natural and profitable for us it is a fool's trap.'"

"Is that not true of this country as well? So long as the working class submit to be economic serfs, just so long will they be dictated to by the capitalist class. To be controlled and dominated by corporations, unjust courts, and the paraphernalia of our so-called representatives of the people is quite as bad for the working class in the United States as to be controlled and dominated by kings and their lackeys. An idea is the strongest thing in existence. Keep to one idea long enough and it will
