

KAISER'S FAMILY HAS WON ITS POSITION THROUGH MERIT

The German emperor is perchance the most talked of person in the world today. It is not by chance that he has arrived at the present position of world importance. His family, the House of Hohenzollern, have patiently and with much talent, denial and sacrifice, pushed up from the middle class of Europe to that of Europe's greatest continental family.

The story of the rise and development of the House of Hohenzollern is the theme Sunday night in First Presbyterian church.

Hugh W. Dougall, the well-known baritone soloist of Salt Lake City, will render six solos at the Sunday services.

GERMANS CONFIDENT OF WINNING THE WAR

Thomas Rhees, one of the city's well known young men, has returned home from a mission for the Mormon church to Germany. He was called, with other missionaries, to leave Germany on account of the war, but was one of the last to cross the border.

Your Margin of Health is very small, indeed, when the appetite is poor, the digestion bad, the liver lazy and bowels clogged—but don't remain that way; take HOSTETTER'S Stomach Bitters today and let it help Nature restore these organs to their proper functions. Be sure to Get Hostetter's

In view of this fact he brought home a large fund of interesting reminiscences.

When war was declared, Mr. Rhees was at Hanover and though the declaration did not come until about the first of August, he said the German people seemed to think it was in the air about a week prior to that time.

The present reports, he stated, that Germany was exhausting her reserve forces were false and at Hanover, when he left on September 21, there seemed to be as many men as ever. As far as he could tell none but regular troops had been used as yet and the physical requirements for army service were as rigid as ever.

The conduct of the German people throughout the trying war times, he said, was excellent and everywhere there was the greatest optimism regarding the war and its outcome. Mr. Rhees had a special comment to make in regard to the reported Russian victories in East Prussia. He said that they were mainly reports and just reports and that if anything the Germans had given the Russians more pepper than they had anticipated and not allowed them to make any decided advance into the Fatherland at all.

The confidence the German people have in their army and Kaiser, Mr. Rhees said, was splendid and he said a common phrase among them was that "one German was worth twenty Russians." This expressed the sentiment toward the Russian campaign in the east.

From Hanover Mr. Rhees went to England, where he spent a few days. He returned to Ogdens via New York City. He states that he is real glad to get back home and was struck with amazement at the wonderful advance in commercial and building activity during his absence.

HEAD COACH HINKEY FORMER YALE STAR

New Haven, Nov. 21.—Frank Hinkey, head coach here this season, is a veteran of the days when football was really something fierce. In those Homeric days the slugger was the rule rather than the exception. Hinkey, known as the "Silent Captain," graduated in 1895, and was at the head of the team in 1893 and 1894.

Hinkey was remarkable for his small size. He weighed 137 pounds when he came here and never tipped the scales at more than 150. Yet he was enrolled on four all-American teams and was undoubtedly the best end ever produced by Yale, not barring even the redoubtable Som Sherrill.

He led the Yale team in 1894, when the game was played that broke relations between the Elis and Harvard. Throughout his college career it is said that there was never a yard made around his end.

From the very first he was one of Yale's most spectacular players. In his freshman year the season was not two weeks old before it was no longer a question of whether the frail looking freshman should play end rush, but of which of the two veterans of Billy Rhodes' team should play the other end.

COTTON CROP IS THE BIGGEST EVER GROWN

Washington, Nov. 21.—Possibilities of this year's cotton crop equalling or even exceeding the greatest crop heretofore grown were indicated today by the census bureau's fifth ginning report of the season, which showed the quantity of cotton ginned prior to November 14, was 11,624,708 bales, the heaviest on record. In the last seven years the average of the entire crop ginned to the end of the same period was 75 per cent. On that basis the present crop would seem to be between 15,500,000 and 16,000,000 bales.

The ginning for the period from November 1 to 14 established a record of 1,795,626 bales, exceeding last year by 152,000 bales and 1911 by 453,000 bales. For the season this year's ginnings exceed the record by 311,000 bales.

In Alabama, Arkansas, Florida and Oklahoma new records for ginnings to November 14 were established.

LADY THE SPY IS EXECUTED

Faces Firing Squad in Old Tower of London With Unshielded Eyes.

(Correspondence of The Associated Press.)

London, Nov. 13.—At 7 o'clock on the foggy morning of November 6, Carl Hans Lody, the German naval lieutenant, whom the people of London had come to know as "Lady the spy," sat in a chair in a court yard of the old Tower of London, and faced a firing squad selected to put him to death. He had been convicted by court martial of communicating with the German authorities to the detriment of England, and in view of the agitation raised throughout the British isles on the question of alien enemies, no penalty but death seemed to meet the situation.

This is the usual fate of all spies caught in war time, but as the court-martial was held in London, as remote in many respects from the scene of fighting as New York, some doubt was expressed at first whether the extreme penalty would be inflicted. It was said even that certain members of the cabinet favored life imprisonment. But so the gossip runs, Lord Kitchener, quick to see the necessity for extreme action with the spy menace so rampant, insisted upon the death penalty.

Dies With Eyes Unshielded.

At any rate, Lody is dead. Ten seconds after he sat in the chair in the tower court yard, eyes unshielded at his own request, he toppled forward lifeless with seven bullets through his breast. Half an hour later an undertaker's wagon came and the body was taken away for burial in a pauper's grave.

The scene of the execution—the first in the tower since the middle of the eighteenth century—is but a few rods from the spot where Anne Boleyn, Lady Jane Grey and other English celebrities died by the axe many years ago.

All the retainers and employes in the tower's cluster of old structures soon heard of the execution—in fact many of them were awakened by the volley—and visitors who came to the tower that day were told of it in whispers. Lody had died game, they said. Throughout the night he had prayed with a British army chaplain. To the last he refused to tell for what person in Germany he was acting.

Reports Were Important.

Nor was it disclosed at the court-martial just what reports Lody had sent to Germany. When certain documents were discussed reporters were barred from the room. That they were important, however, is generally admitted. Those who have read some of the reports pay high tribute to Lody's clearness of expression and the acuteness of his observation. Taken as a whole, it is said that his data forms one of the most remarkable exhibits ever brought to the attention of Scotland Yard.

Lody was about 35 years old, but looked younger. Though a native of Berlin, he had traveled widely, and he spoke English with almost an American accent. This, together with the fact that he looked like an American, was doubtless the main reason he was sent to England as a spy.

He had spent much time here before, but on the last occasion he came in August, shortly after hostilities were declared with Germany. Clever as he was the intelligence office of the war department soon got wind of his actions, and he was watched. It was during this shadowing that he insisted that he was Charles A. Inglis, an American. In this role he even went to the police and complained that he was being followed. This, for a time, threw off his pursuers, but the espionage was later revealed and in October he was arrested. English counsel defended him. The court martial was short. The prisoner's span of life after sentence was pronounced was even shorter.

He was taken secretly to the tower and not until four days after his execution was the news officially made public.

Whether relatives will make any attempt to claim the body is not

GERMANS EXPECT GREAT VICTORY

The London papers have been devoting long accounts of his death in one sense strangely out of proportion, since thousands die each week on the continent. But Lody was a spy, and there was a dash of the picturesque about him, and he died in the Tower, which appealed to the British imagination. No Englishman laments his death, but all the newspapers pay him the tribute of dying bravely like a philosopher. He had accepted the risk and he paid the penalty.

GENERAL STRIKE IS THREATENED

Stockholm, Sweden, Nov. 21.—A grave conflict threatens at Gothenburg between officers of the Swedish Mercantile Marine service and the Swedish ship owners.

The officers demand increased war insurance, and this the owners have declined. Today the matter came to an issue, and no commercial snips left Gothenburg. The attitude of the Gothenburg officers is strongly supported in other districts and a general strike of mercantile officers is threatened.

GERMANS EXPECT GREAT VICTORY

General Von Hindenburg's Ingenious Strategy Depended Upon to Outdo Gigantic Russian Army.

Berlin, Nov. 21, by wireless to Sayville, Long Island.—"Germany has great expectations concerning the outcome near Lodz," says an official announcement handed to the press today. "It is generally taken for granted that the gigantic Russian army, in spite of its great numerical superiority, is seriously threatened by General Von Hindenburg's ingenious strategy and his spirited offensive movement. The retreat of the Russians is made difficult by the fact that the Germans destroyed all railroads, bridges and highways. A Russian defeat here may decide the entire campaign in the east, as the Russians are without trained reserves and ack arms, ammunition and officers."
