HOW HUERTA PUT MADERO TO DEATH

truth to him, telling him that the resignation had already been presented and accepted by congress. This is a felony of Lascruain, said Madero. The agreement was that the resignation should not be presented until I was aboard the Cuba.

"In those moments we knew by the conduct of official that Huerta had just been designated as provisional president by congress. This has been the second trap in to which I have fallen," Madero finally said to me. "I am now convinced that I shall not leave Mexico alive. They will conduct me to prison the same night, and on the trip they will shoot me or else they will assassinate me right here, as soon as we are alone."

"Ernesto Madero begged me to remain with him, telling me that if they succeeded in surviving the night that probably the diplomatic corps would be capable of saving them. I decided to accompany them for how could I leave the heart to take my hat and leave them, being persuaded that I would be dead as soon as I was in the street. Ernesto finally left us, Madero, Pino Suarez and I remaining in those gloomy rooms.

"At 1 o'clock in the morning he invited me to rest, indicating to me that he was very sleepy, and without the least hesitation, this man who had just been deposed from the presidency commenced to prepare two beds with chairs, one for himself and the other for me.

"He had finished his labor, when an official sent by Gen. Huerta arrived, he having ordered him to tell us that the train arranged to conduct the prisoners out of the country was conveniently ready, but on account of circumstances which he would explain later it had been impossible to dispatch it. The same official invited me to retire and wait. And as, previously, something had been said in regard to the train being ready to leave at 5 o'clock in the morning, I asked the official if this was in the program, but he replied that he did not know anything.

"As soon as I saw Madero sleep I went to keep company with Pino Suarez, first giving a glance at Madero, who slept like a child. At this moment the guards entered and turned out the lights. From the upper crevices of the windows some rays of light penetrated, but they did not molest us. We were so closely guarded that any phrase which passed between Pino Suarez and myself had to be spoken in a very low voice.

"At 9:30 in the morning breakfast was served to us. Pino Suarez did not wish to take the coffee, fearing that it might be poisoned but Madero and I took it. Then Madero gave the boy who had served the coffee, and told him to bring us the morning papers. We did not permit this, fearing that he might find out about Gustavo's death. Madero became resigned lying down on his bed of chairs, where he slept for 20 minutes.

"About 10 o'clock he said he was prepared for everything that might happen, but he indicated to me that I should approach the diplomat. In order to save him, which I promised to do with pleasure. He also asked me if his wife had also made any petition personally to Huerta.

"About 10 o'clock in the morning the wife of Pino Suarez arrived, accompanied by a gentleman, and I then took leave of them.

"The balance of that day, February 20, and the two following days we worked to save Madero. I asked Huerta why he had not given his consent in this respect, to which he replied that he did not dare send Madero to Vera Cruz until he could have confidence in the military authorities of that place. I, in turn, indicated to him that he might be sent to Tampico, where I could have the Cuba sent. He further showed himself irresolute. Almost all the foreign ministers saw Huerta personally that day, and interceded for the life of Madero.

"On the morning of the 22nd the ministers thought the lives of Madero and Pino Suarez to be out of danger, although we had heard the rumor that they schemed to place Madero in an insane asylum. At night all the ministers approached the American embassy to celebrate the anniversary of the birth of Washington. Huerta and all the ministers in his cabinet were present and they all appeared very calm.

"On the morning of the following day, Sunday, I was very urgently called to the telephone. It was Mrs. Madero, who was very excited on account of the news she had received that her husband had been wounded. I answered that this could not be true, but a little later I read in the morning paper the news of the death of Madero and Pino Suarez at 11:15 the previous night on being taken to the penitentiary.

"Ambassador Wilson finally tried to obtain permission for Mrs. Madero to see the body of her husband. We then believed that the balance of the family was in danger, and I hastily proposed to take them from the country. I personally sent in a secret manner to Vera Cruz Francisco Madero, father of the assassinated president, and his brother Ernesto, and they embarked on the Cuba.

"I later conducted the mother, widow and sister of the president to the Cuba, leaving Vera Cruz on February 25.

"Mr. Marquez Sterling has belonged to the diplomatic corps of the republic of Cuba several years, and has occupied the post of minister in Argentina, Peru and Brazil. During the administration of President Palma, he was counsellor of the department of state. He presented his resignation as minister of Mexico after the murder of Madero and Suarez.

"In the account of the events leading to the murder of Madero and Suarez, Mr. Marquez Sterling mentions the excitement of the prisoner-president, when he discovered that Don Pedro Lascruain had turned over the written resignation of Madero into Huerta's hands.

"What happened was told by Lascruain himself. As soon as Gen. Huerta heard that Pedro Lascruain had Madero's resignation in his possession, he asked to see him and begged him with great insistence to give him the valuable paper. Don Pedro Lascruain was odorous, so the cunning old Indian, knowing that Lascruain was a devout Catholic, fished out the holy medallion hanging by a chain to his neck. 'See this medallion,' said Huerta. 'It is the most precious thing I possess; it was given to me by my mother when I was a little boy. I promise you on all that is holy and sacred to me, I swear on the white head of my sainted mother, the memory of this holy image, that if you give me the president's resignation, I shall guarantee his life, and as he finished the sentence he kissed the holy medallion.

"Don Pedro Lascruain, convinced, handed him the paper with the resignation of Madero and Suarez. The next day Gen. Huerta was visited by the Belgian, Spanish and Japanese ministers, who asked him to guarantee the life of the ex-president and vice president. Huerta answered: 'Gentlemen, will you guarantee to me that if I permit Madero and Suarez to go out of Mexico, that they will not start another revolution against my government in the United States?'

"The three diplomats declared that they could not give such promises. 'Then,' he exclaimed, 'gentlemen, how can I be made responsible for their lives?' The diplomats left the general without answering.

"As the price of blood, the general and the citizens demanded the heads of Madero and Suarez; the most insistent of all was Don Rodolfo Reyes, who called for victims to avenge the death of his father in front of the National palace. Adolfo Basso's life was also sacrificed with that of Gustavo Madero's. The Huerta cabinet went into power like a black hand cabinet, after the assassination of its enemies. This infamous list should be remembered by all who are interested in the reconstruction of Mexico, and who speak of amnesty.

"SMOOTHING IT OUT. A young Parisian, noted for his grace and readiness as a second in many duels, had been asked by a friend to accompany him to the mayor's office and affix his signature as a witness to the matrimonial ceremony.

"He consented, but when the scene was reached awkwardly forgot himself. Just as the mayor was ready for the last formalities he broke out to the astonishment of all parties, with the remark: 'Gentlemen, can not this unhappy affair be arranged? Is there no way of preventing this sad occurrence?'

"DRAMATIC CRITICISM. 'How is that new play of Scribblers?' 'Dead slow. I took my old maid aunt to see it, and it didn't even get a blush out of her.'

"ROTATION. 'Are you going to have a garden this year?' 'No,' replied Mr. Growcher. 'It isn't my turn to make a garden. I'm going to keep chickens this year and let my neighbor make the garden.'
