JACK GRAHAM TO BE BROUGHT BACK TO THIS CITY

tomorrow will be Apostle D. O. McKay, Bishop James Taylor and Patriarch George W. Larkin.
Through investigations made by members of the Ogden police department, Jack Graham, an alleged forger, recently arrested at Portland, Ore., is under suspicion of having phished his profession among a number of Ogden merchants several weeks ago. In fact, the suspicion is so strong, that a search of his apartments in the fashionable Portland district revealed several suitcases of blank checks on business houses in all parts of the country.
Graham is considered one of the cleverest forgers in the country and has collected a sum aggregating more than $30,000 by swindling operations within a few months. Proof of this, it is alleged, was found by the Portland police when a search of his apartments in the fashionable Portland district revealed several suitcases of blank checks on business houses in all parts of the country.
In his room was found evidence that he had been in Ogden and the local police were notified of the fact and furnished with a photograph. Having previously received reports from local business men of having been victimized by a forger, Chief Norton and Detective Robert Chambers used the photograph in making an investigation. It was identified by several of the merchants as that of the man who had presented the checks to them. Samples of his handwriting were also found, and as this evidence appears to be more than any of the authorities of other cities have been able to secure, it was considered sufficient to cause Graham to be brought back to Ogden for trial.
A telegram asking that he be held was sent to the Portland authorities and an answer was received by Chief Norton today, stating that Graham would be kept in custody until the arrival of a Utah officer with requisition papers.
The cities in which Graham is said to have operated are Ogden, Salt Lake, Denver, Omaha, Council Bluffs, Des Moines, St. Louis and Chicago.

FORMAL OPENING OF GOLF AND COUNTRY CLUB GROUNDS AND CHILD DISAPPEARS AND CANNOT BE FOUND

With its splendid location, ideally laid out golf links and tennis courts, beautiful clubhouse and fine spirit of its members, the Ogden Golf and Country club is today celebrating the formal opening of its clubhouse and grounds. The auspicious event has been postponed several times on account of delay in the shipment of some of its furnishings from the east and the necessity of enlarging the clubhouse, as originally planned. The weather conditions were an ideal today as they were at the first date named for the opening in midsummer.
The grounds, a sixty-acre tract situated at the south border of the city, seem as though laid out by nature for golf links when viewed from the clubhouse, which is situated at the southernmost end. They are of rolling hills and although less than a year has been occupied in transforming them from a virtual wilderness, already show signs of becoming a solid lawn of green before another season passes. The golf course is one of nine holes and these are already well sodded. A fine roadway through the middle of the grounds to the clubhouse has been constructed and many automobiles are being driven on it daily.
The golf links are considered equal to any in the intermountain country and are also the three tennis courts, which lie at the west side of the clubhouse. On the links and courts today almost every member of the club and a number of the ladies actively participated in the two fascinating open-air sports.
While the grounds were the principal attraction during the early afternoon, the clubhouse was set to engage the attention of the ladies during the later hours of the day, at which time a reception and tea were to form a share of the entertainment.
The clubhouse, designed jointly by Leslie S. Holman and Eber Piers, members of the club, follows the modern cottage style of architecture, rambling in its nature so as to conform as much as possible to the contour of the grounds. It is mainly of concrete construction with wood roof, while the interior of the rooms is finished in enamel with a border of lattice frieze around the ceilings, giving an unusually artistic effect.
Concrete steps at the front lead through double glass doors into a spacious veranda. This is enclosed in its entirety with glass windows which can be removed in warm weather to give the same comfort as in the open air, with the added ones of the clubhouse equipment.
The veranda furniture is of fiber rush, upholstered with loose cushions of flowered cretonne. Its furnishings are also of flowered cretonne and its ample floor is covered with large swanopore rugs. The furniture consists of rocking chairs, arm chairs, small tables and other convenient accessories.
From the veranda, a complete view of the Country club grounds and links can be had, making it possible to see the play on the golf links and tennis courts to good advantage.
Turning inward, from the veranda, one steps into the spacious club room—the furnishings of which add to the charm of the cottage. This room, the floor of which is of maple, especially laid for dancing, is fitted up with Verdi copper finish reed furniture, upholstered with flowered cretonne. It consists of chair similar to those on the veranda and a chaise longue, upholstered with flowered cretonne cushions. There is also a large center table, a piano and a Victrola in the room for the use of the club members and their guests.
The west end of the clubroom is fitted up as a dining room, with four square tables and an adjacent number of chairs. From it is given a good view of the tennis courts and a portion of the golf links.
Immediately off the improvised dining room is the ladies' room. This is finished in black and white, with reed furniture and flowered Cretonne upholstery and draperies. The room is the most unique and charmingly furnished and decorated of any in the house, the scheme being the first of its kind carried out in the city. Adjoining are locker rooms and other rooms necessary for the comfort of the ladies who desire to participate in the outdoor sports.
The grill room is entered from the clubroom and is fitted with all necessary equipment for club purposes. Adjoining it is a kitchen, which is deemed necessary on account of the growing popularity of the club. Locker room and shower baths for the men are reached from the grill room or from the exterior of the building and these are also fitted up with every convenience.
The lighting system of the club room is especially unique, being of the indirect system, with attractive fixtures of reed, construction similar to that of the furniture. An immense "floor" lamp of the same construction and several "wall" reading lamps are also noticeably pleasing features of the comfortable furnishing scheme.
A large brick fireplace, with heavy brass andirons gives a cheerful and homelike air to the club room. Over the fireplace floor are laid immense brown Wilton rugs and smaller rugs of the same style are found in the smaller rooms of the clubhouse.
The decorating and furnishing of the clubhouse was superintended by Mrs. R. E. Bristol, with the assistance of Mrs. R. B. Porter and Mrs. O. B. Gilson and in every respect shows an artistic taste and knowledge well envied by the most expert of professionals in cottage furnishing.
The furniture and furnishings of the veranda, grill and kitchen, were supplied by the Ogden Furniture & Carpet company and those of the clubroom and ladies rooms, by the Boyle Furniture company.
This evening, the club members and their ladies are to enjoy a dancing party at the clubhouse, as the concluding feature of the formal opening.

BEET HARVESTING IS PROGRESSING IN THE COUNTY

Sugar beet harvesting was favorable this week and thousands of tons were delivered at the factories, or placed in piles at convenient places for loading for transportation. There is still a scarcity of cars but the sugar company is having the product piled as fast as it is dug and prepared for use.
The crop in Ogden Valley is being harvested and representatives of the sugar company say it is satisfactory. They say that the tonnage was fairly good in most instances and that the sugar content is not to be complained of. Some farmers failed because of lack of experience, but it is thought that a few years cropping in this line will make it possible for all the farmers to get good results.
