BLOODHOUND IS NOT FIERCE AT ALL
There is no substantial reason for the common belief that the bloodhound is a fierce animal, ready to tear to pieces the person whom it may be tracking. It is, on the contrary, rather noted for its gentleness, even seeming timid, unless especially trained to attack.
The origin of the breed, according to Count Le Couteux de Canteleu, an authority on the subject, is from the St. Hubert of St. Hubert's Abbey in the Ardennes. It dates from the earliest ages, and the breed certainly existed in the time of the Gauls.
As regards the name "bloodhound," the Count Le Couteux believes that when fox hunting in something like its present form was instituted it was found that the sleuthhound was not fast enough for the purpose.
The present foxhound was evolved from various materials, and about this time it became usual, in speaking of the old hound of the country, to call him the bloodhound, meaning the hound of pure blood—as might be said of a blooded horse—to distinguish him from the new hound or foxhound. There is only one breed of pure, genuine bloodhounds, and that is the English.
HUMANE CENSORS.
"Have you been reading the war news?"
"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne. "And I must say one thing for the censors. They have done everything in human power to spare our feelings by making the horrors of war as uninteresting as possible."—Washington Star
"A THINKER."
"Mrs. Clinckle thinks a great deal of her husband."
"You've got the wrong proposition. Make it 'for' instead of 'of'."
