PHILBROOK DENIED CARRYING OUT THE BODY OF QUIGLEY

The most important testimony by the state this forenoon, in the Philbrook murder trial, was that of State Chemist Herman Harms who made a chemical test for poison of certain organs taken from the body of Patrick Quigley.

Professor Harms stated that he analyzed portions of the heart, liver, kidneys, smaller intestines, brain, and a small quantity of blood and urine, in which he found a small percentage of morphine. The chemist said that there was not more than about 1-7 of a grain of morphine discovered.

The witness said that it could not be told how much of the poison might have been absorbed by the blood, but that under normal conditions it would require about 2 grains of morphine to cause death. He stated further that as high as 50 grains of morphine could be given without causing death. The person taking such a dose, though, would have to be in perfect physical condition. He considered, however, that the amount found in Quigley's body was a fairly large amount and that the quantity taken might have been an overdose or it might have been only a medicinal dose. Absorption in the case in hand, he said, might have been considerable.

The chemist said that the stomach retains more poison than any other organ of the body, but that he did not have the stomach of Quigley for examination.

Just before Mr. Harms testified, Dr. A. A. Robinson, county physician, testified that the stomach of Quigley was inadvertently cremated by the janitor.

Sheriff T. A. DeVine and City Detective Robert Burk testified to having interviewed the defendant soon after his arrest and said that he flatly denied that he was at the Dawson rooming house on the night of January 18, and that he did not know what they were talking about when they asked him if he did not carry Patrick Quigley's body from the rooming house to the place where it was found by officers the next morning.

Alfred Dawson, son of Mrs. Fannie Dawson, testified to about the same detail as given by his mother. He said, however, that on the day following the night when Quigley is alleged to have been poisoned, he talked with Frank Philbrook and his wife at the Wright Annex rooming house, Mr. Philbrook saying to him:

"Keep your mouth shut."
Mrs. Dawson Testifies.

At the close of yesterday afternoon's session, Fannie Dawson, keeper of the rooming house where Quigley is alleged to have been poisoned, was on the witness stand for cross-examination. Her testimony on direct examination was brief and it differed little from that of O'Brien, insofar as she saw the things that O'Brien saw.

The witness said that she knew nothing of O'Brien and Philbrook carrying Quigley to his room after he had fallen limp in his chair in the living room while he was drinking a glass of beer, as she was busy at something else. She did not see Quigley after he was taken from the room and did not know of his death.

Mrs. Dawson said that on the evening of January 18, Frank Philbrook, the defendant, Richard Powers, James O'Brien, Patrick Quigley, a man named Flynn, herself and members of her family spent the evening in the living room of her rooming house. Outside of the family, she said, Philbrook, Powers and Flynn came to her place first, O'Brien and Quigley coming soon after.

She said that Philbrook and Powers had three bottles of beer and that when the other men came in Philbrook served some of it. They all partook of the beer, but none were particularly affected. She said that old man Quigley was so drunk that he spilled the beer as he attempted to raise the glass to his lips. His tongue was thick and she could hardly understand what he talked about. He was seated in a chair, she said, and he drank that part of a glass of beer which he did not spill on his clothing.

"Quigley appeared to get sleepy," she said, "and when he began to topple over in his chair, the boys took him to his room. I don't know just how it was done, as I was busy at something else. Philbrook and O'Brien, I never saw the man after that, and I did not know that he had died. When the boys came back from taking him to his room, I asked them what was the matter and they said that the old man was a little full."

The witness said that the phonograph was started and they were spending a pleasant evening, as Philbrook poured and served the beer, she said, and the bottles from which it was drawn were uncorked there, and in the presence of the entire party.

Mrs. Dawson said that after the boys had been away a short time with Quigley, Philbrook offered another glass of beer, but that she refused to drink it, telling Philbrook that she did not want any of his "knockout drops."

On cross-examination, in explanation of the remark, Mrs. Dawson said:

"I don't know why I said it. It was just a saying, I guess. I did not mean anything out of the way and I never had known of 'knockout drops' being administered in my place."

Morphine in Beer.

Resuming the trial of the case this afternoon cross-examination of State Chemist Harms was continued, the attorney for the defendant, going into detail respecting the specific gravity of morphine as compared with beer and how readily it would form a solution with that beverage.

Mr. Harms stated that morphine was heavier than beer and that when placed in it would sink to the bottom. It was his opinion, however, that it would quite readily dissolve and become a part of the beer. He thought it might require a few minutes' time. The attorney for the defendant led the chemist to say that certain patent medicines contained morphine, some of them having as much as 1-2 grain in two ounces of the liquid. It is the purpose of the defense to make the point that Patrick Quigley was a user of patent medicines which would account for the recovery of 1-7 of a grain of morphine from his body.

Dr. A. A. Robinson was again called to the witness stand to testify more fully respecting his examination of Quigley's body immediately after it was taken to the morgue and at the time of the autopsy at a later date.

Dr. Robinson said that the bruises on Quigley's head and face were of minor importance and were not sufficient to cause death. He also said that he came to the conclusion that the man did not die of Bright's disease, as is hinted at by the attorney for the defendant. The doctor was on the witness stand at the time of going to press.

Unless the defendant introduces testimony, it is quite certain that all the testimony of the case will be finished this afternoon.

The jurors have been kept together night and day during the progress of the trial, sleeping at the Reed hotel and taking their meals at the Virginia. Yesterday afternoon they made an inspection of the American Can factory and the Goddard Pickle & Preserve plant on Lincoln avenue and Twentieth street.

In Judge James A. Howell's division of the district court this morning was taken up for trial the damage suit of Forrest A. Prows against J. R. Murdoch, and S. E. Jost, Charles Stratford, Willard Bingham, George Lucas, W. H. Meal, H. J. Westbrook, C. J. Call and William T. Ostill were selected as jurors.

The plaintiff alleges that on August 20, 1915, at 2566 Washington avenue, a carelessly and recklessly operated automobile collided with him and greatly injured him. The damages sought amount to $5300.

It is particularly stated in the complaint that, at the time of the accident, the plaintiff was at the curb on the east side of the avenue, fixing a motorcycle, and that the defendant suddenly and at an unreasonable and unsafe rate of speed, turned his auto across the street from the west side, striking him with great force. He claims that four ribs were broken and he was injured on other parts of his body.

HUT IN THE JUNGLES HELD 100 POUNDS OF COPPER

Acting on a report from the Western Foundry company, that a large quantity of copper wire had been stolen from the foundry, Detective Robert Chambers, Sergeant J. F. Kelliker and Chauffeur Gold Wheat made a trip into the "jungles" near the Ogden river in the vicinity of Eighteenth street and Pacific avenue this morning, and arrested Dave Terry, Clarence Botta and Theobald Hallis. The trio were living in a primitive hut on the south bank of the river and in the hut was found nearly a hundred pounds of copper wire.

When searched at the police station, Hallis and Botta appeared to be walking junk shops, numerous well-worn articles being taken from their pockets. They will be charged with petty larceny.

IMPROVEMENTS TO BE MADE AT THE UNION DEPOT

Improvements which will involve an approximate expenditure of $12,000 were started this morning on the property of the Ogden Union Railway & Depot company. The first work to be done is that of remodeling the upper part of the Union Depot building, occupied by the offices of the Southern Pacific, Union Pacific and Union depot companies. This is being done under the direction of Superintendent R. A. Pierce and the direct supervision of Construction Superintendent James Thurston of the O. U. R. & D. company and will be completed in about fifteen days.

The remodeling plans will involve the throwing of rooms 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, the larger portion of room 6 and the west end of the present hallway, into one spacious room, to be occupied by the entire clerical force of the Southern Pacific. A new office will be arranged for Assistant Superintendent H. L. Bell, who now occupies room 5, by partitioning the south end of room 15, adjoining the office of Superintendent T. F. Rowlands.

The Southern Pacific dispatchers' department will be moved from room 1 to room 10, in the southwest corner of the office building. This arrangement is expected to increase the efficiency of the office employes by the economizing of time and space.

The headquarters of Trainmaster A. W. McDuffie and Chief Clerk Garvey of the districts 8 and 9 of the Wyoming division of the Union Pacific, will be moved from rooms 4 and 5 to rooms 6 and 7 and the office of Superintendent R. A. Pierce of the O. U. R. & D. company will be moved to room 10.

In utilizing the north end of the hallway for a part of the new Southern Pacific clerical room, a floor will be built over the present stairway and the landing will be extended south about 20 feet. The entire second floor of the building is also to be renovated, this work to include repapering the walls and the laying of new linoleum on the floors. It is anticipated that this work will cost about $2500.

In the near future, work will be started on repairing the big ice-houses in the freight yards and the enlarging of the water system.

Before the improvements are completed, a new 6-foot fence will be built around the yards, extending from Twenty-eighth to Twenty-second streets.

GREAT IMPETUS TO PROHIBITION

South Dakota Votes 14 Cities and Towns From Wet to Dry.

Sioux Falls, S. D., April 19.—The cause of prohibition in South Dakota gained great impetus as a result of yesterday's municipal elections, according to latest returns received today, fourteen cities and towns going from the wet to the dry column while no dry towns voted back the saloons and the majorities for license were cut down in all towns remaining in the wet column.

Pierre, the capital of the state, voted dry, as did Hot Springs, the famous Black Hills resort. Aberdeen, second largest city in the state stays in the dry column while Sioux Falls retained licenses by the majority of 550, less by 2 per cent than last year.

Something new in the design of a telephone has been recently patented by which those making use of the instrument are relieved of some of the fatigue of a prolonged conversation. At the same time there is a reduced risk of inhaling any disease germs which may have lodged in the transmitter, whose upturned cup offers a favorable lodging place for these death-dealing midgets. The new arrangement dispenses entirely with the familiar receiver with its long handle and substitutes merely the earpiece secured on the end of a rod. When out of use the receiver and transmitter hang with their openings down, so that they do not act as dust and germ traps.

SERBIAN PROVERBS
King Nicholas and those of his people who agree in his surrender (for apparently all of them do not) may find comfort in some of the Montenegrin and Serbian proverbs: "Knock a pot against a stone or a stone against a pot, woe to the pot either way." "It is better to be beaten soundly than killed." "One can escape from slavery, but not from the grave." "Better turn back half way than go on to a bad end." On the other hand, the Serbian patriot may answer: "Better the grave than slavery." It is better to die in honor than to live in shame."—London Chronicle.
