Theatres

AT THE OGDEN
 Thousands of fun-lovers literally mobbed the Ogdren theatre last night, packed the house to capacity, the foyer, the stairways and out to the street, to welcome Doug Fairbanks and his company of merry-makers in "The Habit of Happiness" and an equally good grouch-spelling Keystone comedy, "Secrets of the Beauty Parlor." Fairbanks personally proves himself to be in reality all that the screen depicts. He is natural and sincerely human. In this great "scream" he plays the part of a doctor of humor—the laughmaker and expert in curing the dyspeptic grouch.

The "Beauty Parlor" also is a sure cure for blues. The stars include a perfectly baldheaded woman and a baldheaded man, who are engaged, each trying to conceal the baldness from the other. The traitorous hairdresser betrays them. The "business" between the many fun-compelling climaxes is superbly finished. At a high society reception a little poodle-dog drinks all of a big bowlful of punch and swells to the size of six dogs. How this is done is a mystery, evoking fits of merriment.

"We are fighting, too," says the manager of this playhouse, "to give the public the best hits of the year." Last night's program was a distinct triumph, to be repeated today and tomorrow.

OKLAHOMA GIFT IS ACCEPTED

Statue of Sequoyah, Inventor of Cherokee Alphabet, Unveiled at Statuary Hall.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—A statue of Sequoyah, inventor of the Cherokee alphabet, was unveiled today at Oklahoma's first contribution to statuary hall at the capitol.

The entire Oklahoma congressional delegation participated in the ceremonies. Governor R. L. Williams made the presentation address and Speaker Clark made the speech of acceptance. Miss Ahnawake Hastings, daughter of Representative Hastings, unveiled the statue.

Sequoyah, whose English name was George Guess, was the son of a white trader and a full-blooded Cherokee woman. His life among the Indians made him familiar with the Cherokee tongue and in 1821 he devised an alphabet of 85 characters. His accomplishment was unique, since he never learned to read or write English.

STOVES AND LUMBER ARE TAKEN FROM OGDEN

All ranges of a certain make in Ogdren have been requisitioned by the United States government for use at Fort Douglas, Ogdren hardware companies handling this line being informed that their entire stock must be shipped at once to Salt Lake, supplementing the stock already on hand there. Anticipation has been expressed by hardware men that, in order to secure a sufficient supply of ranges for the big concentration camp and also the prison barracks, requisitions would also be made for other types of cooking ranges.

Another unexpected requisition made on Ogdren men came when the United States government ordered that 26 carloads of lumber owned by local contractors, bought for apartment building, should be diverted to Fort Douglas. The builders were asked by the government to set a price on the lumber but did not set the figure, saying they desired to retain it. However, the government demands are such at Fort Douglas, because of building work, that the army officials immediately requisitioned the supply and diverted the material to Salt Lake. Reports from Salt Lake are that practically all lumber in stock there has been bought by the government for use at the fort.

BELATED ALLOWED TO REGISTER TODAY

Everyone who failed to register yesterday for any reason is ordered to report today to the office of the mayor or if they reside in the city and to the sheriff if they reside in the county outside of the city.

Persons not registering are liable to immediate arrest and upon conviction to a term of one year in prison and then draft into the army. Officials in charge of the registration wish to call attention to this provision of the federal registration law.

Those who report today will be required to give an adequate reason for their failure to register yesterday.

SCENES LIKE THESE ARE FAMILIAR NOW IN CENTRAL WEST

Temporary shelter used by women and children in devastated town (above) and scene in tornado's wake.

Scenes like these are becoming all too familiar in states bordering on the Mississippi. During the last week in May tornadoes in seven states killed over 200 people, injured more than 1,000 and did damage estimated at above $5,000,000. The latest town to be visited by a tornado, Mineral Point, Mo., was practically wiped out. These photos have just been received from an Illinois town, and show how the people in devastated districts must live until their homes can be rebuilt.

KILLED AT BOONEVILLE.
 BOONEVILLE, Mo., June 6.—Five or six persons were killed last night in a tornado that dipped down seven miles east of here, near the Missouri river. The tornado's path was from 50 to 100 yards wide for an undetermined distance.
