"Speed Kings"

RACING automobile drivers take their lives in their hands every time they enter a race—and the greatest risk they run is that of friction. Think of the tremendous strain put on every bearing, the enormous heat generated. Let one little bearing get dry and—Zing!—Mr. Driver keeps right on going to the Pearly Gates.

Life and limb are the greatest stakes that figure in any auto race. The prizes are mere junk in comparison. What is the answer? Every well-informed racing driver lubricates his car with Dixon's Graphite Automobile Lubricants. They know that their bearings when thus lubricated, are safe against lubricating failures.

One of the foremost racing drivers in America was offered $500 in cash if he would use a certain lubricant in his car, and the reply was, "No, I would rather pay $5 per pound for Dixon's Automobile Lubricants than use any other as a gift."

Dixon's Graphite Automobile Lubricants have as a basis Dixon's selected flake graphite, the only form of flake graphite that will successfully lubricate an automobile without packing or balling up in the bearings. The Joseph Dixon Crucible Company are the only producers in the world of this peculiar form of flake graphite.

But some motorists are not boosters for graphite lubricants. Why? Because irresponsible makers, trading on the name of graphite established by the Joseph Dixon Crucible Co., have put out inferior greases loaded with impure graphites that hinder lubrication rather than help.

Try out Dixon's Transmission and Differential Grease No. 677 and see for yourself what a perfect lubricant this is.

T. P. O'CONNOR TO SEE PRESIDENT

Famous Irishman Pays High Praise to the Power of United States.

NEW YORK, June 24.—"I tell you the opinion of this democratic republic remains the most potent factor in working out the liberation of Ireland as well as the freedom of all other nationalities in the world."

Thomas Power O'Connor (Tay Pay) a leader of the Irish Nationalist party and member of parliament made this declaration upon arriving in New York, as an official representative of the Nationalist party to lay the present situation in Ireland before the Irish people of America.

The Irish leader also asserted that the war has worked a huge change in the people of Europe.

"The soul of Europe has changed," he said. "Every man's political, mental and social viewpoint has changed."

Mr. O'Connor was accompanied by Richard Hazelton, member of the house of commons from North Galway and secretary of the Irish party. They took up official headquarters in one of the local hotels and are prepared for an indefinite stay in this city.

Purpose of Visit.

"I'm here," Mr. O'Connor announced this evening, "as an official representative of the Nationalist party. I want to put before the men of my race—the Irishmen of America and all the friends of Ireland here—the realities of the present Irish situation."

"The situation in Ireland," he continued, "is still confused. A series of unfortunate mistakes and events have produced resentment and thrown many of the younger men of the country off their balance for the moment. But this, in my opinion, represents a mood and not a settled preference for the hopeless program of armed insurrection over a constitutional government."

It was at this point that the distinguished visitor paid his tribute to the United States.

Home-sick for U. S.

"Never do I stay away from America five years at a time," he said, "but I get so homesick to get back I can hardly hold in my impatience. And now you know coming back means so much more to me. I tell you the opinion of this democratic republic remains the most potent factor in working out the liberation of Ireland as well as the freedom of all other nationalities in the world."

The Irish leader wanted it emphasized that he is not in the United States at this time to enter into any controversy with anyone.

"No fighting, just policies, peace, this time."

Mr. O'Connor then told of the great changes that have been wrought by the war, but declared there doesn't seem to be any lack of food in England.

Soul of Europe Changed.

"Everybody has plenty to eat over there as far as I could ever see," he said. "I know plenty of members of the house who thought potatoes most succulent vegetables—now dining cheerfully on rice and liking it a lot. But their point of view has changed. That's the secret of it all. The soul of Europe has changed since the war. A man who had money never thought of serving a dinner with less than ten courses in the ante-bellum days of London. Now three courses is not only the fashion, it's the fixed habit, like afternoon tea."

"Societies different. Every man's political, mental and social viewpoint has changed."

Touching on the questions of the submarines and Zeppelins, Mr. O'Connor said the submarines were more or less serious, but the Zeppelins were no longer worrying England.

"The Zeps are not sailing over London with the same impunity that they did at first," he explained, "and they are not scaring the people or affecting them at all."

Intervention Decisive.

"The submarines are making us face the food situation, but it is far from being serious, at that. It is only keeping England busy meeting a rather stringent food demand. But let me say one thing, and say it just as emphatically as I know how—I have always thought that the intervention of America was decisive, and now, even decisive history may come from America. While the Zeppelins have had no military significance in England, I do think that aviation on a huge scale—great numbers of airships—would be a wonderfully potent force of the war at this time. This is what Europe is hoping America may be able to do."

"You know it is a truism now—the fact of keeping the enemy back of his own lines. That's the way you take away his eyes."
