SALTING DOWN THE VEGETABLES

"Salting" is an easy way to keep your vegetables. Here is the method as sent out from the United States food administration.

Use only fresh, tender beans of green or wax-pod varieties. Snap off the ends, wash the beans and pack them in an earthenware jar with alternate layers of salt, using one part salt to ten parts beans by weight. Weight the beans down, and two days later add enough ten per cent salt solution (about 1 1/2 ounces salt to 1 gallon water) to fill the jar. When removed from the solution the beans should be firm, although slightly darkened in color.

Beans may also be preserved in a salt-and-sugar solution as follows: Prepare selected, fresh beans as described in the preceding paragraph, and pack them in containers between alternate layers of salt and sugar, one part salt and one part sugar to seven parts beans by weight. The liquid produced by action of the salt and the sugar on the beans should cover them in three days after they are packed. Beans preserved in this way retain their original color much better than those preserved with salt alone, but the flavor is considered by some to be less agreeable.

Beets.

Select medium-sized smooth roots, wash them, and pack them in a large earthenware crock or jar. Cover them with a 10 per cent salt solution (about 1 1/2 ounces salt to 1 gallon water) in which one-twentieth of the water has been replaced by vinegar (about three-fourths cup vinegar to one gallon water), weight the beets down, and store the crock in a cellar where the temperature is from 45 degrees to 60 degrees F. When the beets are removed from the solution they should have the natural red color throughout and be firm and of good cooking quality when freshened. Salting beets is not practical if a cool moist cellar where roots will keep without wilting is not available.

Green Tomatoes.

Choose well-developed green tomatoes, wash them, pack them in a container, cover them with a 10 per cent brine, place a layer of chard leaves on the top and weight the tomatoes down under the brine. Green tomatoes similarly prepared and packed in salt and vinegar solution the same as that used for peppers are good for salads and relishes.

Corn in the Husks.

Select well filled ears of sweet corn, and remove the loose outer husks and silks. Pack the ears between alternate layers of salt (one pound salt to seven pounds of corn) in a crock, and cover and weight them securely. Several days after packing them, add enough 10 per cent brine to fill the jar completely. Corn cut from the brine, but since dried after the brine, in flavor and requires but little more labor, salting corn cut from the cob is not recommended except as an experiment.

Sealing of Salted Vegetables.

Cottonseed oil or melted paraffin poured over the surface of the brine to form a layer sufficiently thick to make a seal will prevent the growth of molds and aid in checking rapid evaporation of the liquid. The surface of the brine should not be covered, however, until all bubbling has ceased, which may be weak after the vegetables are packed. The container should be stored in a cool place and examined once or twice a week for several weeks.

Directions for Using Salted Vegetables

Salted vegetables should in general be well rinsed in cold water then removed from the brine and then soaked in three or four times their measure of cold water to draw out the excess salt. The time necessary for soaking varies with the kind of vegetable. If the water is changed occasionally, less time will be required for soaking. They should then be drained, rinsed well, put on to cook in cold water, and brought slowly to the boiling point, after which they should be cooked until they are tender, the time required being practically the same as for fresh vegetables.

Beans.

Soak salted beans for two to three hours, and cook them until they are tender, the time required depending on the condition of the beans when packed. Season them by cooking with bacon or salt pork and serve them as fresh beans or chill them and use them in salad.

Beets.

Before using salted beets, soak them in cold water for two hours, changing the water once or twice if necessary

SECRET PLOTTING AGAINST U. S.

Documents Passing Between the Bolsheviki and the Germans Published.

HUNS MAKE DEMANDS

Regular Propaganda Launched Against America, France and England by Socialists.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Secret activities against the United States and the allies of the German paid and controlled Russian Bolsheviki government are the subject of today's chapter of confidential documents from Russia given to the public by the American government.

One of the documents, a terse note from the German general staff to the Council of People's Commissars, discloses that as long ago as November, 1917, when the Russian regime still was regarded as an ally of the nations at war with Germany, the Germans were brusquely requiring Lenin and Trotzky to furnish information regarding the amounts and places of storage of supplies received by Russia from America, England and France.

Others tell of the launching in January and February of a Bolsheviki peace and Socialistic propaganda against the United States, England and France, at the direction of the German intelligence service. This was at the very time that Scheidemann, the powerful German Socialist and world socialism apostle, was in communication with his Russian brothers regarding the destruction of the traces of the party's business relations with the imperial government.

The intelligence service required the Bolsheviki to send to the allied countries through neutral Europe "comrades" under assumed names and with false neutral passports, to preach their doctrine of disorganization and to carry on campaigns of "counter-revolution, sabotage, looting, etc."

Plans of the Germans for sending three submarines, disassembled, by rail overland to Vladivostok for service on the Pacific are disclosed in a communication of the German high seas fleet general staff to the commissars. Another of the naval communications reveals a scheme conceived in January of employing Russian ships on the Pacific under the Russian flag to carry agitators and "agents-destroyers" to the United States, Japan and the British colonies in eastern Asia.

Personal notes from the German intelligence service to the commissars describe the assault upon and robbery of the Italian ambassador in the streets of Petrograd in February last in a vain effort to get possession of important papers believed to have been in the ambassador's possession. Other notes tell in detail of the watch kept upon the American and other allied embassies.

Like the remainder of the documents of the series, those made public today, are accompanied by notes explaining which are originals and which photographic copies, and by explanatory comments by Edgar Sisson, who obtained the correspondence in Russia for the committee on public information.

The part played by the German imperial bank in financing the Bolsheviki movement, the cable taken by the German military authorities to prevent spread among their own people of the socialist preaching of their Russian tools, and the plans laid for German control of Russia economically and financially during and after the war, feature the disclosures in the second installment of the sensational series of secret documents which the American government is making public.

Copies of the documents, given out tonight carry the file numbers of the Reichsbank or of the German general staff, and in some instances notation by Lenin or Trotzky, the Bolsheviki leaders now shown to have been in the pay of Germany since long before they overthrew Russia's law-abiding government and virtually turned the country over to the Teutons. There are illuminating explanatory notes by Edgar Sisson, of the committee on public information, who directed the investigation which resulted in the disclosures.

One of the reichsbank memoranda, dated last January, announces to the commission of foreign affairs, (Lenine) that 50,000,000 rubles of gold has been placed to the credit at Stockholm of the representatives of the commissars to cover the cost of Red Guards and agitators. Another of a few days later tells of a credit of 5,000,000 rubles for the assistant naval commissar in the far east, who is entrusted with the task of carrying off or destroying the great American and Japanese stores or war materials at Vladivostok—a scheme that probably was well underway when the landing of American and allied forces at Vladivostok ended the sway of the Bolsheviki there.

A resolution adopted by the German commercial banks under the auspices of the reichsbank outlines an elaborate program for control of Russia by Germany and the barring of America and the allies from the Russian commercial and industrial field after the war. What has happened to this scheme is not definitely known, but it is suggested that it may be the subject of one of the secret sections of the German Bolsheviki Treaty.

How Lenin and Trotzky were betraying their Socialist friends along with Russia, is disclosed by a sharp note to Lenin from the Nachrichten bureau, demanding to know what steps he would take to make good his personal promise that socialistic and agitational literature would not be circulated among German troops. Trotzky wrote on the margin "I ask to discuss it—L. T."

The concluding document of the installment is a German warning on January 29 to Lenin that unknown agitators were circulating propaganda telling in advance of the plans of the Bolsheviki to openly surrender to the Germans as they actually did later.

Amazing Things Revealed

Proofs removing any doubts that Lenin and Trotzky, the Bolsheviki leaders, are paid German agents—if indeed any doubts remain—were laid before the world by the United States Government in the first installment of an amazing series of official documents disclosed through the committee on public information.

Secured in Russia by American agents, these documents not only show how the German government, through its imperial bank paid its gold to Lenin, Trotzky and his immediate associates to betray Russia into deserting her allies, but gave added proofs, if any be necessary, that Germany had perfected her plans for a war of world conquest long before the assassinations at Sarajevo, which as the world is now convinced conveniently furnished her pretext.

These documents further show that before the world war was four months old, and more than two years before the United States was drawn into it, Germany already was setting afoot her plans to "mobilize destructive agents and observers," to cause explosions, strikes and outrages in this country and planned the employment of anarchists and escaped criminals, for the purpose.

Almost ranking in their sensational nature with the notorious Zimmerman note proposing war by Mexico and Japan upon the United States, which was first given to the world through the Associated Press, these documents lay bare a new strata of Prussian intrigue, a new view of the workings of Kultur to disrupt the allies, standing between the world and kaiserism. They disclose a new story of human treachery for gold which almost would be described without sacrifice as placing its perpetrators on a pedestal with Judas and his 30 pieces of silver.

The intrigue appears to have been carried down to the last detail of arrangement with typical German system. It will be revealed completely in a series of seven articles furnished by the committee on public information each morning beginning today until the series is complete.

Not only do the disclosures prove that Lenin, Trotzky and their band are paid German agents. They show that the Bolsheviki revolution which threw Russia into such orgy of murder and excesses as the world seldom has seen, actually was arranged by the German general staff. They show how the paid agents of Germany secreted Russia at the Brest-Litovsk "peace" conference; how German staff officers secretly have been received by the Bolsheviki as military advisers; how they have acted as spies upon the embassies of the nations with which Russia was allied or at peace, how they effectively have directed the Bolsheviki foreign, domestic and economic policy, and how they have directed the German government in the interest of Germany and the shame and degradation of Russia.

They show how a picked German commander was detailed to "defend" Petrograd against the German army and an extent of German intrigue and domination almost beyond the realm of imagination.

Originals of documents, photographs of originals and typewritten circulars, some of them marked "secret" or "private" and many of them bearing the annotations of the Bolsheviki leaders themselves; some containing references to "comrade Trotzky," or "comrade Lenin," comprise the damning record. Some of the originals, it is shown, although deposited in the secret archives of the Bolsheviki, were required to be returned later by representatives of the German general staff in Petrograd that they might be destroyed. But evidences of them remained in the fabric of roquetry and into the vacancies they fit perfectly. The Bolsheviki leaders themselves informed their "comrades" that the German government had required the return of the order of the German imperial bank depositing 50,000,000 gold rubles in a Stockholm bank for Lenin and Trotzky, and that at the same time the accounts of the bank had been "audited" to conceal the payments.

The first installment of the revelations appearing herewith is prefaced by an official statement by the committee on public information, which tells briefly what the succeeding installments of documents will prove. This official resume of the disclosures:

FRENCH OFFICER REVIEWS FIGHT

Figures Germans Were Weak Behind in Plans for Evacuation of St. Mihiel.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, Saturday, Sept. 14.—Night. (By the Associated Press.)—The operations by which the St. Mihiel salient was emptied in less than forty-eight hours were as well executed as ever today. The Germans had held it for four years; they were required to get out of it much more quickly than they had figured on.

In the estimation of a staff officer of the French forces cooperating under General Pershing's orders, the enemy was just about a week behind his plan for the evacuation of the salient.

He left it so hurriedly that there was no time to carry out destruction to such a marked degree as in other evacuated regions.

Blew Up Meuse Bridge.

At St. Mihiel the Germans blew up the bridge over the Meuse and marched away without doing further damage than what was accomplished four years ago when they tried to advance over the heights of the Meuse and take Sarraill's army in the rear, during the battle of the Marne. On that occasion they got no further than St. Mihiel, in the subsequent fighting there after the battle of the Marne the town was half destroyed. It remains in that condition today.

That portion nearest the river is entirely demolished. Nearly all the other buildings were found on examination to have been hit somewhere and the wonder is where were lodged the 2500 inhabitants that remained out of a total of 9000 in the town through the four years under German yoke.

Committed Few Atrocities.

So far as can be learned the Germans appear to have been on their best war behavior here. They are credited with committing no atrocities and they took few hostages and treated them with far less brutality than elsewhere.

They contented themselves with pillaging houses and purses. Half a million francs was demanded after the occupation ransom for the safety of the town. It was paid after great effort by collecting all the money and securities that could be found. Another half million francs was demanded later and was raised on bonds of the Commune.

All the gold the Germans found after that was seized in exchange for other bonds of the commune, making the pillaging a collective, rather than an individual affair.

Take Mattress From Sick Man.

Nothing much remained in the houses except woodwork that could not be removed. Every copper kitchen utensil had long ago been shipped to Germany. The fine old furniture of the well-to-do families had gone to furnish comforts in the trenches and dug-outs. Beds and bed clothing were requisitioned, a mattress even being taken from under a sick man, sixty-four years of age.

With these exceptions, and overlooking the fact that they appropriated part of the provisions provided for the inhabitants by the international commission, the conduct of the troops of occupation was above the average. For the greater part of four years the people remaining in St. Mihiel lived on three-fifths of a pound of bread a day while the soldiers of the garrison were well fed.

Norman Tevo, an Indian arrested last week for horse stealing, who took ill after being arrested and was placed in a hospital, escaped from the institution early yesterday morning from a second story ward by tying sheets together and lowering himself through a window. Those in charge of the hospital had taken the precaution of taking most of the Indians clothing out of the room, but even the lack of clothing did not hold the Indian when he saw a chance to make his escape. The exceptionally chilly breezes this morning evidently made an "impression" on the escaping copper-face, because he did not have enough clothes to keep him warm.

The city has started a strenuous campaign against dogs. A special officer has been named to look after the dog question and he is making a canvass of the city gathering up every canine not properly labeled. Upwards of fifty scrubs have been gathered in and only a small part of the city has been covered. The dogs will be held in a stockade for a certain number of days, and if not redeemed by the owners, they will be put up at auction, the lowest bid not to be less than $2. Unsold dogs at the auction block will be killed by the city.

The remains of Mrs. Mayne J. Ellison of Los Angeles, who died in this city Sunday, were prepared for shipment and sent to California yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Ellison had been spending two months in this city visiting relatives, when she took suddenly ill and died and was removed to a hospital.
