POSTMASTER BROWNING KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

W. W. BROWNING.

The body, accompanied by Bishop Geo. E. Browning and J. E. Browning, will arrive in Ogden this afternoon, shortly after 4 o'clock, on the Utah-Idaho central railroad. From the depot, the body will be removed to the Lindquist mortuary, and after remaining there for a short time, will be taken to the home, 2747 Adams avenue.

No arrangements have yet been made for the funeral. It is expected, however, that services will be held in the Tabernacle.

Biographical Sketch.

W. W. Browning was born in Ogden, February 28, 1862, the son of Jonathan and Ann E. Browning. He was 57 years old at the time of his death. His father died about forty years ago and his mother a little over a year ago last April.

When a youth, Mr. Browning engaged in the printing business, and had a position setting type on the Ogden Junction, one of the pioneer papers in this city. He advanced through the trade, becoming a printer and continued this work on several of the papers in the state, including the Ogden Standard and the Salt Lake Herald.

About thirty-five years ago he set up an establishment for job printing on Twenty-fifth street. Later he moved to a location on Washington avenue and several years ago again enlarged his establishment under the name of W. W. Browning & Co., located on the top floor of the Parry building, at Twenty-third street and Washington avenue.

When named as Postmaster by President Wilson, six years ago, Mr. Browning took the place of L. W. Shurtliff. He was reappointed again two years ago for his second term, having completed two years of the second term when he met his death. Upon receiving the appointment as postmaster, Mr. Browning placed a manager in charge of his printing establishment and devoted his entire time to the post-office work.

During the later years of his life, Postmaster Browning developed a passion for thoroughbred poultry and was much interested in the raising of full-blooded chickens. So much of an expert on this subject did he become, that he was known among poultrymen of the west as "Judge" Browning, because of the large number of poultry shows that he had attended in the capacity of judge. It is said that he was official judge of poultry in the entire territory west of Denver.

Postmaster Browning was selected as president of the Utah Postmaster's association three years ago. During the war no conventions were held by the organization, President Browning and other officers of the association carrying through the activities during this period. Until the close of the convention held at Logan, Postmaster Browning retained his presidency.

Postmaster Browning was married three times. His widow, Mrs. Nora Browning, survives him, together with the following children:

Dr. W. J. Browning of Pleasant Grove; Dr. A. A. Browning and Dr. E. W. Browning of Ogden; Mrs. Josie Wilson, Mrs. Margie Wilson, Mrs. Arzell Beltz all of Ogden, and Mrs. Lulu Bassett of Salt Lake. Several grand-children also survive.

His brothers, J. Edward and George E. Browning, John M. Browning and M. S. Browning, The sisters are Mrs. Olive Wallace, Mrs. Malinda Middleton, Mrs. Martha Middleton and Mrs. Malvina Garner.

Due to a ruling of the federal department, to the effect that no flag shall be placed at half-mast on a federal building without the consent of the treasury department, the post-office flag was not set at half-mast this morning. Telegraphic communications requesting permission to half-mast the flag were forwarded to Washington, however, and the national emblem will probably hang at half-mast this evening.

This is the first death in the second generation of the Browning family. Five brothers and four sisters survive. The brothers are Mayor T. Samuel Browning, J. Edward Browning, George E. Browning, John M. Browning and M. S. Browning. The sisters are Mrs. Olive Wallace, Mrs. Malinda Middleton, Mrs. Martha Middleton and Mrs. Malvina Garner.

While the body is expected to arrive in Ogden this afternoon, no arrangements for the funeral have been made.

The body will be taken to the Lindquist & Sons mortuary.
