Because--

If, in your seeking for a place to trade you bear in mind all the things a store should be, you will inevitably come to the conclusion that the institution that expresses best the spirit of public service in its broadest sense is, after all, the best place to buy.

Our interpretation of "public service" has been, and always will be, to do the greatest good to the greatest number of people. That means selling merchandise of real intrinsic worth—commodities of proven quality—at the lowest prices consistent with that quality and always with the most courteous service to everybody.

That is the reason why—you should trade here, BECAUSE of those things.

Three Big Bargains in EMBROIDERY

PLAYING THE MINISTER. "You must," the good wife said to me, "devote one pleasant day unto our new-come minister. At golf he likes to play!" And so, obedient to her wish, I sought the goodly man. And asked him would he like to shoot the ball into the can. "Aye, that I would," he smiling said, "I think the game sublime." So I prepared that afternoon to have a rotten time. I'd never played with ministers; it did not seem to me That one could preach the word of God and still a golfer be. Yet when he changed his clerical garb and hooked his vest behind, "What odds shall I bestow?" I asked. He answered, "None at all, I'll play you level round the course. A ball, a ball!"

Now that is true-born golfers' speech. It startled me a bit. Thought I, "The parson knows the game. Perhaps the church can hit!"

And when I saw him make a swing and then observed his smile, I whispered low to Alex Ross: "The dominie has style!" Then as his first drive left the tee I further said it looked As though for three good dollar balls the clergy had me hooked.

He hit 'em far and straight and true, he putted like a fiend, He smote the pill with all his might, and into it he leanned; He kept the honor all the way; and at the final cup, I paid him three good dollar balls for which all golfers search. "My friend," said I, "you have a style for which all golfers search. If I thought I could play like you I'd gladly go to church"

Petro claims that dancing is a Bolshevik pastime because everybody is Lenine and hobnobbing about with the fox Trotzky.

We have the impression that some of our friends, to whom we lend a dollar until pay day, are dollar-a-year men.
