PINNING DOWN THE MAYOR OF OGDEN

Pointed Questions Asked on the Bond Issue and Answered in a Frank Statement—Will Ogden Be Benefited by the Bond Issue to be Voted September 5th?

To the Honorable William Glasmann, Mayor of Ogden City.
Dear Sir:—Being interested in the better welfare and future prosperity of our city, I would like to ask a few questions in regard to the bonding of the city for the extension of water mains, etc.
If said bonds are voted by the people is there any definite assurance that our rate of insurance will be reduced?
Will the property owners be taxed at any future time to meet these obligations?
Where and how is this money to be expended?
Do you believe that the improvements are urgently needed and why?
(Signed) GEO. T. PORTER.
743 Twenty-sixth St.

No, there will be no taxes to meet the payment of the bonds, as we have made provision for paying the same from the profits of the water-works. But if the bonds are voted down, the taxes must be increased because the city must improve the water system.
The money will be spent, first, on a dam in Cold Water canyon; second, on a 24-inch conduit from Cold Water canyon to the new reservoir; third, a second conduit from the new reservoir to the distributive system.
The increased revenue resulting from the above improvements will give us enough profits from the water-works to make all the extensions required hereafter and pay off the bonds in four years. Thereafter the water system will pay Ogden City a profit each year to be applied on reducing the city taxes.
(Signed) WILLIAM GLASMANN, Mayor.

BUILDING OF A MODEL HIGHWAY

First Three Miles of Interstate Road Is to be Constructed Between Ogden and Riverdale During the Good Roads Convention in This City in September.

It was decided by the good roads people yesterday afternoon that the first mile of the three-state capital city highway shall be built from the Riverdale bridge toward Ogden.
The state will appropriate $2,000 and Weber county will contribute $2,000. It will be known as a state highway.
The first construction will be done at the time of the Intermountain Good Roads convention, which will be held at Ogden during the holding of the Four-State fair, and it will be an innovation in road building.
At the inception of the Intermountain Good Roads association, organized in Salt Lake last year, it was decided that a great capital highway, made of macadam, should be built between Salt Lake City and Cheyenne, Wyoming, and between the Wyoming capital and Boise, Idaho, and that there should also be such a road leading from Boise City to Salt Lake.

The first convention of the association was called to meet at Ogden, and it was decided that the first mile of this "capital city highway" should be built, the good work to be kept up until the plans of the association should be carried out.
The building of this road will attract national attention, and will likely do more toward encouraging the building of better roads throughout the intermountain country than any other event in the history of the good roads' movement.
It is anticipated that there will be more mayors of cities, governors of states and representatives and senators of the country in attendance at the convention than have ever gathered in the history of the western country. All the western states and cities will more than likely be represented and many will come from the east.

INTEREST IN THE GAMBLING CASES

Judge Murphy's Court Crowded With Spectators, Eager to Hear the Testimony—Elderkin, Scowcroft and Others on the Witness Stand—City Attorney is Probing for More Evidence.

The hearing of John Smith and E. A. Smith, on the charge of conducting a gambling house on Twenty-fifth street, was begun this morning before Judge Murphy of the municipal court and the throng of spectators which nearly bulged the walls of the court room and corridors proved that even a greater interest is being taken by the public in the present case than the one just completed. The municipal judge has not yet rendered his decision in the case against the alleged proprietors of the Turf gambling hall and it seems probable that he will not do so until the completion of the present hearing of the Elephant place proprietors.
As in the opening day of the Turf case, the Rev. N. S. Elderkin proved the most important witness for the city, although Heber Scowcroft of the Betterment League was more positive in his testimony this morning than in the testimony which he delivered in the hearing of Johnson, Watt and Trye.
Mr. Scowcroft, the wholesale merchant, was the first witness to take the stand and he told of the visit of the Betterment League leaders to the Elephant rooms on the night of August 3—the trip in which they were accompanied by the mayor and others. He said that the room was occupied by gaming tables, mentioning a roulette wheel, faro bank, crap game and another wheel which he described as having paper money attached to it.
Attorney Devine showed that he intends to make even a harder fight for conviction in the present case than in the former one. His pinning of the witnesses down to positive statements, which was not evident in the Turf case, was clearly displayed from the start and the Scowcroft examination at times bordered on the sweating process of a "third degree" inquisition.
The witness told of the crap table on which he said that he saw a man place two dimes which were raked in by the man in charge. He said that there were about two hundred men in the room and that he saw chips and money exchanged.
"Did you see either of the defendants in the room on the night that you visited the place?" asked Attorney Devine.
"I saw John Smith down stairs as we entered the place."
The cross examination started with Attorney Horn asking the witness where he had seen chips exchanged for money.
"At the faro table," answered Mr. Scowcroft, promptly.
"How do you know that one was a consideration for the other—how do you know that the chips were given for the money?"
"I saw the exchange made and I feel certain that one was given for the other."

This answer was objected to by the attorney doing the questioning, but was permitted to pass.
"How many chips were exchanged?"
"About half a dozen."
"How much money was given by the other man?"
"I don't know the amount, but it was silver money."
"In this dice game that you say you saw, Mr. Scowcroft, how many dice were used?"
"I can't say positively whether there were two dice or three or four, I am sure it was either two or three."
The witness told of seeing the dimes placed on the table and taken in by the man behind the table, but was confused by the interrogator when questioned as to how he knew that the money was lost on the throw of the cubes. The question as to whether the house of the player won on the throw of "seven" was too technical for Mr. Scowcroft to comprehend.
"Mr. Scowcroft, are you interested in the management of the Orpheum theatre?" asked the attorney for the defense in frigid tones, searching the witness for a show of embarrassment or a tremor of uneasiness.
"I am not," Mr. Scowcroft answered with barely noticeable hesitation.
"My brother is interested in the place."
"Have you taken any steps to stop the operation of Sunday theaters in Ogden, Mr. Scowcroft?" asked the attorney, with bitter sarcasm.
This question was strenuously objected to by Attorney Devine and the court sustained the objection as to Mayor Glasmann, who had entered the court room during the examination of Mr. Scowcroft, was called to the stand by Attorney Devine. The executive was not spared by the prosecuting counsel but little of a definite nature was gleaned by his testimony. Mr. Glasmann told of the trip to the Elephant room with the Betterment League reformers, but stated that he did not visit the place to gather testimony for the witness stand and for that reason did not pay as close attention to the things that he saw as he might have done under other conditions.
The mayor stated that he did not walk entirely through the rooms

ROOSEVELT OUTSPOKEN

He Declares Himself an Insurgent and Against Boss Rule

Carroll, Ia., Aug. 26.—Theodore Roosevelt definitely aligned himself with the Progressives of New York state in a statement which he made on the train in which he was traveling across Iowa. He told that the main issue of the fight in New York is no specific reform measure, but bossism. Bossism, he declared, frequently led to corrupt alliances between business and bosses.
Col. Roosevelt was asked about remarks by Timothy L. Woodruff, New York Republican state chairman, in regard to the factional fight in New York. In reply he issued this statement:
"The Progressives are emphatically in favor of taking a real step forward about direct primaries substantially on the lines of Governor Hughes' proposition, but this is not the main issue."
The main issue is that we stand against bossism, big or little, and in favor of general popular rule, not only at the elections, but within the party organizations and, above all, that our war is ruthless against every species of corruption, big and little, and against the alliance between corrupt business and corrupt politics, as to which it has been found that too often in the past the boss system has offered a peculiarly efficient communication of the interests of the party and the public by special interests, whether these special interests are political, business or a compound of the two."

spent the time near the door and that the crowd in the place prevented him from distinctly seeing the fixtures. He told also of being accosted by a Mr. Lambert and Brig Bowman and of talking with these two men. He could not recall seeing any money or any chips change hands.
Cross-examination was waived by the defense and the executive made way for Rev. Mr. Elderkin, who came forward, raised his hand methodically for the oath and took the witness chair.
The minister reviewed the trip made to the various gambling houses. He told of the crowded room and of the different devices which he saw with all the vicissitudes that he might use in picturing the scene in the Temple of Jerusalem when Christ drove from the place the money changers. In the vernacular of the gamblers themselves, he graphically described a roulette wheel and a faro bank. He, too, told of the vertical wheel on the wall, but his knowledge of games did not go far enough to tell the technical name of the device.
"I asked Mr. Bowman about this wheel—for I had never seen one like it," he said, "and he told me it was just a wheel. Mr. Glasmann asked me to play a dollar at this game as evidence, but I didn't happen to have a dollar with me. Another thing I know if I'd put a quarter on the blooming thing they'd have me sent to the pen."
"Did you see others playing the game?" asked the prosecution.
"Yes, I saw people playing the game. I saw one man place a silver dollar on the turn of the wheel and lose it."
Mr. Elderkin was interrupted at times by the defense for using such terms as "I think" and "I suppose" and was cautioned to make his answers more direct and positive.
"On the night of the raid, Mr. Elderkin, did you see or talk with any of the defendants?" was asked.
"On that night I talked with the Smiths and with Brig Bowman. One of them asked me why I did not get after James Pingree and David Eccles, the three-ply criminals."

In referring to the men in this way it was inferred by the hearers in the court room that the question of polygamy was to be brought into the examination, but the testimony continued without further reference to the subject.
"The gamblers told me that I could not reform the gamblers in Ogden; that I could not reform Mr. Smith or Mr. Bowman. I told them that I did not care a fig if I couldn't; that I intended to keep up the fight against the vice in this city as long as I remained in the town. They told me that I had better be preaching to young girls and let gambling alone. Finally J. H. Smith said to me, 'This is my place and you got out of here, I left as he ordered.'"
When the prosecution finished with the witness it was so near the noon hour that the defense stated that they did not desire to begin the cross-examination until the next session of the hearing.
F. A. Mattson, a contractor, was called to the stand and examined by the prosecution, but proved a most reluctant witness and his replies were all obviously evasive. Attorney Devine plied the witness with interrogations and vainly endeavored to wrench from the man some information of a damaging character to the defendant, but was only partly successful. Mattson swore that he could not tell one card from another, despite the fact that he had visited the supposed gambling hall on various occasions, and when in Idaho and Nevada had done some gambling.
The defense did not question Mr. Mattson.
With the conclusion of his testimony, the court was adjourned until Monday morning, when the cross-examination of Rev. Mr. Elderkin will be taken up.

WOUNDING OF HUTCHINGS FATAL

Frank Percy Hutchings, who accidentally shot himself in the right hand Wednesday while hunting sage chickens near Croysden, succumbed to his injuries yesterday afternoon at 4 p. m. at the general hospital. His death is said to have been the result of an excessive loss of blood attending the accident.
The body was conveyed to Larkin and Sons' funeral parlors, pending the funeral arrangements.
Mr. Hutchings was born April 15, 1883, at Spencer, New York. Mrs. Hutchings, the widow, was a Miss Jennima H. Jones of Ogden. The deceased is survived by his wife and two little children, a father, mother and four brothers; the latter residing at Rochester, N. Y.
A telegram was dispatched yesterday to the relatives in the East, and the announcement of the funeral will not be made until a reply is received.

W. J. MORAN SUED FOR DAMAGES

Oscar Benson and Louis C. Wessler have each commenced suit against Contractor W. J. Moran to recover $299, alleged to be due for personal injuries sustained while traveling with a horse and buggy over a certain street in Ogden in which, it is claimed, the contractor left piles of gravel and other obstructions. The complaint alleges that the defendant was negligent in leaving the obstructions in the street and that he failed to place adequate danger signals at the piles of gravel and other obstructions. In each complaint, it is stated that the buggy in which Mr. Benson and Mr. Wessler were traveling was tipped over and that the men were badly injured about the head and neck, also, considerable damage was done to the horse and buggy.
W. J. Moran is also suing Oscar Benson for $299, alleged to be due for the killing of a team of horses. The complaint states that Benson was leased to Moran for his use and that while the defendant was driving them they were driven upon the Crow Creek bridge, which broke down, hurling horses into the stream below where they drowned. It is claimed by the plaintiff that the horses were worth $250 and that other damage accrued by virtue of the killing of the horses, amounting to $40.
The Ogden State bank has commenced suit against Andrew and Peter Jensen to recover $172, claim-

DIVORCES IN DISTRICT COURT

Pauline Ziegenhirt has been granted a decree of absolute divorce from her husband, Paul, the interlocutory decree having been issued February 23, 1910. Judge Howell signed the decree today.
In the case of Marion Parsons against Charles Parsons, for divorce, default against the defendant having been heretofore entered, an interlocutory decree of divorce was granted the plaintiff today by Judge Howell. The grounds for divorce were failure to provide, the allegations of the complaint having been sustained in ex parte proceedings today. The parties were married at Afton, Wyoming, on March 9, 1908, but had resided within the jurisdiction of this court for some time past. The charges in the complaint were that the defendant had failed to provide the necessities of life for the plaintiff.
In the matter of the state against Fred Lang, charged with an infamous crime, the attorney for the defendant has filed a motion before Judge Howell asking that the information be quashed, the ground being taken that the act complained of does not constitute a statutory offense.
The major portion of the time of the district court was taken up this forenoon in hearing the appeal case of the firm of Carstensen & Anson, piano dealers of Salt Lake, against George D. Folkman of this city.
The suit was brought to recover $299, alleged to be due on a certain piano, which the plaintiff company maintains the defendant is unlawfully keeping in his possession. The de-

TYPHOID IN A LITTLE TOWN

E. W. Patrick has returned from southern Utah where he has been during the past two months selling blooded horses. He states that conditions generally in Washington and Iron counties are good and that business men of that section are looking forward to the building of the proposed railroad from Lund through Cedar City and the "Dixie Land" with great expectations of thrift and business activity.
Mr. Patrick states that for the past six weeks the whole southern country has been visited by heavy rainstorms and that the prospects for the winter ranges are better than for a number of years past. It is a fact, says Mr. Patrick, that the bunch grass on the Escalante desert west of Cedar City and north as far as Milford is now four inches high and the entire desert has the appearance of a meadow.
There is much typhoid fever in southern Utah, says Mr. Patrick, he having passed through a stage of it during the last few weeks. He was laid up at Cedar City for three weeks with the disease and was not able to return home until a few days ago. He arrived in Ogden yesterday. At Kanarra, a few miles south of Cedar, there are thirty cases of typhoid fever, that being more than the number of cases in Ogden. Kanarra has a population of only about 700. The cause of the epidemic is due largely to the water system, or, the lack of a water system. The water used in Kanarra is distributed to the people through irrigation ditches leading from Kanarra creek, passing corals, barns and rubbish heaps. It is also said that not sufficient effort is made in keeping cattle and sheep out of the creek above the city, this contributing greatly to the contamination of the water supply. The water supply of the little town comes directly from the mountain springs and, if protected from befouling influences, Kanarra could have the purest of water.
