

CANALS FOR BENEFIT

LESSON FROM EUROPE SHOWS HOW WATERWAY IMPROVEMENT HELPS RAILROADS.

HAS A CREATIVE EFFECT

Construction of the Manchester Ship Canal Shown to Have Resuscitated Many Dying Towns—Many Give Similar Experiences.

In previous articles it was shown that the waterways carry goods more cheaply than railroads do or can and compel the railways to carry for less than they otherwise would, and then the claim was made that the improvement of waterways is a benefit to the railways with which they compete.

Waterways, as has been said before, produce benefits in three principal ways—by direct saving in the cost of transportation of goods carried by water, indirect saving, by the lowering of railway rates through the competition of water routes, and by what may be called a creative effect.

Manchester, England, before the construction of the ship canal, was a dying town. Hundreds of stores and thousands of dwellings were empty, factories were closed—some moved away—and population was decreasing.

Liverpool fought desperately to prevent the building of the canal and the establishment of the new port of Manchester, but instead of being injured by the canal, the business of Liverpool has increased faster than before.

Frankfort, Germany, before the River Main was improved was not a dying city but was decidedly stagnant. Mannheim and Mayence on the Rhine, which had been improved, were growing rapidly, while Frankfort was growing very little.

Hint the world around and always and everywhere we find that the improvement of waterways sets cities to growing, factory wheels to humming, and commerce to moving in a wider and swifter stream.

Woods entered a plea of guilty, but laid the blame on his sausage maker. He said he had given instructions some time ago to the manufacturer of the sausages not to use any of the "freeze em," but that his orders had been disregarded.

OGDEN-SALT LAKE SHIPPERS MEET

SALT LAKE, Sept. 7.—Forty well known shippers of Salt Lake and Ogden met with representatives of the local railroads in the Commercial Club rooms Tuesday afternoon in response to a call issued by the railroads for the purpose of considering a proposed compromise schedule of freight rates, to be presented to the interstate commerce commission as a substitute for the schedule proposed by the commission.

PEACH DAY A GREAT SUCCESS

Brigham City's Peach Day this year was the most successful celebration of its kind ever held. It was conservatively estimated that 15,000 people attended the festival.

The crowd was so dense, and the town so utterly inadequate to cope with the situation, that hundreds upon hundreds of people traveled the city over until they became footsore and weary in a vain hunt for a resting place, or a place where food and refreshment might be obtained.

The attractions and program of entertainment were numerous and inviting, but the concessions were so overwhelmed with humanity that enjoyment was well nigh impossible.

There were no peach trees, however, for the novelty of the entertainment, and the general good nature prevailing during the entire day made the trip worth while.

Parade a Feature of Day. The parade at noon was the feature of the day. Three bands, furnished enough music to drown the noise and bustle of the throng and the floats composing the pageant would float even the famed efforts of the rival-makers of the mystic societies of the Gulf Coast.

Mayor Welcomes the Visitors. After the parade, Mayor T. H. Blackburn of Brigham City, welcomed the visitors on behalf of the city, and extended to them the privilege and pleasures of the city, not only for the day but at an time they cared to come.

City Beautifully Decorated. The city was decorated in a beautiful manner. Flags and bunting lined the streets from the depot to Main street and down the main thoroughfare, with the telegraph poles in the center of the streets draped appropriately in the national colors.

ROOSEVELT VISITS TRADE'S SCHOOLS

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 7.—The Germans had their day with ex-President Roosevelt today. Beginning the day with a visit to Milwaukee's Socialists, he then went to the city's trade schools.

Before he had his breakfast Colonel Roosevelt issued a reply to the mayor of Milwaukee who had refused to welcome him to the city, telling the people that he would prefer to have them hear what he had written in the magazine to which the mayor took exception, rather than what the mayor said about what he had written.

The original program for the day included six speeches and visits to a dozen places. Colonel Roosevelt looked over as soon as he arrived and said that he could not possibly get it all done in one day.

He wanted to visit the trade's schools and started for them. At the boys' trade school, where the youths of Milwaukee are taught useful occupations, chiefly mechanics, the colonel put in nearly an hour in questioning the instructors and students about their work.

Meets Boys of Trade School. He refused absolutely to give any advice. "I'm here to learn, not to teach," he said.

He shook hands with all the boys and then went down stairs, where there was more handshaking. As one little boy edged up to him, the colonel pointed his finger at him and said:

"Ha, ha, you're a ringer. I shook hands with you up stairs. But he shook hands with me again. Then the colonel went to the west side to the girls' school. He saw the girls at work there, learning to sew and cook. Around the walls of the sewing room were exhibits of the work done there from simple aprons, which almost any one can make, to some thin and filmy laces and hand embroidered things, to manufacture, the colonel was told, it takes a long course of training.

"I don't think a girl really has been educated unless she can do this work," said the colonel, as he gazed on the samples held up for his opinion.

Eats Soup in the Kitchen. The colonel was led to the kitchen and asked if he might have some of the potato soup which had been prepared for the girls' lunch. He ate his soup while the crowd looked on and he said he had never tasted better. Then Colonel Roosevelt said he wanted to go to the Deutscher Club. The members of the club had been notified that he was coming and were waiting for him. As he mounted the steps of the club house, the Germans gathered around him and half carried him inside. They sang "Hoch Soll Er Leben" through several times before they stopped to talk.

Visits Deutscher Club. "I found out last night that no arrangements had been made for a visit to the Deutscher club and I said I was going there anyway. When I was in Berlin I told the emperor that I should visit this club again in the near future and that I would bring his regards.

The German sang "Hoch Soll Er Leben" again and raised their tall green glasses, filled with German wine to drink to the colonel's health. Emil Von Schleinitz, who is an old friend of Colonel Roosevelt's, said:

"The Germans are glad to have you back here again. This is a German city, as you know. We permit the publication of English newspapers here, but otherwise we don't encourage foreign languages."

After the speeches were over they shouted "Prost" and drank to the colonel again. They sang some German songs and gave the colonel a German luncheon.

From the club the colonel went to another luncheon at his hotel, after which he held a reception there. Then he was driven to White Fish Bay and met more Germans. They brought him a stein of beer, but the colonel declined with thanks.

Dinner With Scribes. The dinner was served at the Press club where there were German and American newspaper men and a German dinner.

Then the colonel went out to make his speech. It was given originally to speak in the Auditorium, but the building would hold only a part of the crowd that wanted to hear him and so another was engaged for an overflow meeting. Colonel Roosevelt spoke at the overflow meeting then went to the Auditorium.

CONVICT DIES IN THE WORKHOUSE

DUBLIN, Sept. 7.—James Fitzharris, better known by the name of "Skin the Goat," who drove the car containing the assassin of Lord Frederick Cavendish, chief secretary of Ireland, and T. H. Burke, the permanent under secretary, to that scene of the crime in Phoenix Park, May 6, 1882, died today in the workhouse.

Fitzharris was released in 1902 after serving twenty years of a life sentence for his share in the tragedy.

SALT LAKE, Sept. 7.—Glen Howard Bawden, a 5-year-old son of Thomas J. Bawden, a Mill Creek farmer, was found dead with his face in the water of an irrigating ditch.

MURDER OF CHINAMEN CAUSES NEAR PANIC

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 7.—Two shots fired in quick succession snuffed out the life of a Chinaman and caused a near panic to the night in Chinatown's Oriental theater, where an audience was made up largely of tourists.

Visitors here for the Admission Day celebration.

Law Sing Chow, a member of the On Yick tong, was the victim of the assassination, and Chinaman was given another murder to add to its long list of stealthy crimes.

INSURGENTS WIN OUT IN NEVADA

CARSON, Nev., Sept. 7.—E. E. Roberts, "Insurgent" Republican candidate for congress, claims to have been nominated over Douglas, the regular Republican candidate, by him to be leading in nine counties.

Figures compiled at the governor's office indicate that Governor Dickerson has defeated the nomination by 4 to 1.

SPRINGMEYER DEFEATS BROWN

RENO, Nev., Sept. 7.—Contrary to reports first received, it is now conceded by the regular Republicans that George Springmeyer, insurgent candidate for nomination as attorney general, has won over his opponent, Hugh Brown.

Judge W. A. Massey claims the Republican nomination over T. L. Odde, insurgent, although it is admitted that the vote is close and returns are not at all complete. The nomination of Governor Dickerson, and what is known as the Dickerson Democratic ticket is confirmed.

"I DO NOT FEAR THE CRITICISM," SAYS SECRETARY BALLINGER

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 7.—Secretary of the Interior Ballinger at the Arctic club smoker, given in honor of Secretary of Commerce and Labor Nagel and Attorney General Wickert, spoke bitterly of his detractors.

"With my consciousness of rectitude in every act, public and private, and with my determination to go forward in the same path, I do not fear the criticism of any man or set of men," said the secretary.

"It is a time for men to stand by the laws and institutions of our fathers. From the head of the administration through all the departments there is a determination to uphold the constitution and laws and hand them down unimpaired. It has been said that the criticism of me, whether true or untrue, has made me unfit to hold office. If this is the case, then every public man may be disqualified by the attacks of the disingenuous, the hypocrite and the fanatic."

"I don't propose to enter a plea of guilty, because there is not one particle of truth in all the allegations brought against me, and I shall take none of your time in making a defense, for in this community I need no defense."

Secretary Ballinger was received with long applause from his hearers when introduced by United States District Judge Cornelius H. Hanford, who made the Ballinger-Pinchot committee meeting in Minneapolis today the subject of his discourse.

The judge declared that Mr. Ballinger had been singled out as the object of the malevolence of muckrakers and denounced the action taken at Minneapolis today as "an outrage unparalleled."

LIBERAL WITH FRUIT

There were no peach trees, however, for the novelty of the entertainment, and the general good nature prevailing during the entire day made the trip worth while.

The liberal distribution of fruit, the numerous varieties of entertainment, and the generous manner in which they were received by the town people compensated for the inconveniences of the outing.

Everywhere, even on the incoming trains, peaches, melons and other sample fruit of the fertile valley were handed around in such a generous manner that many people complained of an uncomfortable feeling from eating too much of the fruit.

There were immense crates of peaches and melons at conspicuous places along the main street, with signs inviting the visitors to help themselves—to even fill their lunch baskets, and take as much of it away as they could carry.

Parade a Feature of Day. The parade at noon was the feature of the day. Three bands, furnished enough music to drown the noise and bustle of the throng and the floats composing the pageant would float even the famed efforts of the rival-makers of the mystic societies of the Gulf Coast.

GRAFT OF N. Y. LEGISLATORS

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—Within two hours of the beginning today of the Merritt legislative committee investigation into the charges of corruption in connection with legislation at Albany, G. Tracey Rogers, for years a representative of the street railway interests at the state capital, testified that the brokers with whom he was connected for several years after 1899 had carried partnership accounts for former Senator Fred R. Green and Assemblyman Louis Bedell.

The firm also had as customers a number of other senators and assemblymen, whom Rogers had introduced, the witness said.

The books of this firm, the defunct firm of Ellingwood and Cunningham, are in the committee's possession. Mr. Rogers also testified to having in 1900 bought 1,000 shares of the stock of the New York Transportation company for James T. Rogers, Republican leader of the assembly, and four hundred shares for the late speaker, S. Fred Nixon.

A bill giving this company extensive privileges of operation in the streets of New York City was passed.

DEPALMA'S AUTO RECORD STANDS

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—The official automobile record for one mile circular track is still held by Ralph De Palma, who made it in 50.45 seconds on Sept. 11, 1909, at Minneapolis, driving a Fiat car.

Although several split second watches caught Barney Oldfield's time at 50.35 seconds in his first trial last Monday at the Brighton Beach track for a new record and at 49.45 seconds in a later attempt, the contest board of the American Automobile association announced today that it would not allow a record because it is the rule that contests of one mile and under and up to five miles must be timed by an automatic electric or mechanical device.
