The instrument was found at the rear of the Ogden theater, only a short distance from the telephone office. It had been broken to pieces for the evident purpose of getting the money from the locked box. The thieves used an old chair that had been left at the rear of the theater to demolish the box, broken parts of the chair being found.

COMMISSION IS STILL SILENT

There is still a grim silence reigning over the Utah commission to the Yukon-Pacific-Alaska exposition in regard to the shortage or non-accounting for the $12,906.45 drawn by Thomas Hull, treasurer of the commission, over a year ago. No vouchers, receipts or statements of this amount have yet been filed.

The state auditor is getting anxious, for without some semblance of such a statement, how can he balance his books in order to make his annual statement of the finances of the state?

Chairman Spry must hurry up, or Governor Spry must say something about the non-accounting in his message to the incoming legislature.

WHERE THE BUFFALO STILL SURVIVES.

What young man of our race would not gladly give a year of his life to roll backward the scroll of time for five decades and live that year in the romantic bygone days of the wild west, to see the great Missouri while the buffalo roamed in its banks, while big game teemed in sight and the red man roamed and hunted, unchecked by fence or hint of white man's rule; or when that rule was represented only by scattered trading posts, hundreds of miles apart, and at best, the traders could exchange the news by horse or canoe, and months of lonely travel?

For one, would have rejoiced in tenfold payment for the privilege of this backward look in our age, and had reached middle life before I realized that, at much less heavy cost, the miracle was possible today.

For the uncivilized Indian still roams the far reaches of absolutely unbroken forest and prairie leagues, and has knowledge of white men only in bartering furs at the scattered trading posts where locomotive and telegraph are unknown; still the wild buffalo elude the hunters, fight the wolves, wallow, wander and breed; and still there is hoofed game by the million to be found where the Saxon is as seldom seen as on the Missouri in the times of Lewis and Clarke. Only we must seek it all not in the west, but in the far northwest; and for "Missouri and Mississippi" read "Peace and Mackenzie rivers," those noble streams that northward roll their mile wide turbid floods a thousand leagues to the silent Arctic sea.

SHAVIAN WIT.

Bernard Shaw, although a vegetarian himself, does not fail to see the possibility of humor in the practice. Presiding recently at a meeting he was called upon to introduce Sir Edward Lyon, who confines his diet to butts.

"And now," said Shaw, "I present to you Sir Edward Lyon, he of the earth, earthy, and of the nuts, nutty."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Comes now a British humorist with the unkind suggestion that the most dangerous hole in a man's pocket is the one in the top.

POPULATION OF UNITED STATES

Washington, Dec. 2.—The population of the United States, as revealed by the thirteenth census, is expected to be announced by the census bureau on November 10. Counting Arizona and New Mexico as states, the totals for 28 of the 48 states already have been announced. The grand total for 26 of these states is 60,937,759, which is a gain of between 21 and 22 per cent over the population of the same states in 1900. At this rate of increase, the total population of the country should be about 91,000,000. The most striking development of the census so far as shown is the relative growth of cities and industrial centers as compared with the farming region. The eastern states have more than held their own, while the states of the middle-west have fallen off.

LOUISA M. ALCOTT FLIRTED WITH PRINCE

It seems an awful thing, but here is the circumstance on record that Louisa M. Alcott, the sainted author of "Little Women," once publicly flirted with Edward VII. That fact comes out in Mrs. Belle Mose's book, "Louise May Alcott, Dreamer and Worker." There is a passage in the book which contains Miss Alcott's personal account of this incident. It refers to the time when the late king, then Prince of Wales, made his famous visit to this country. "I went to Boston," Miss Alcott relates, "and saw the Prince of Wales trot over the common with his train at a gallop—a yellow-haired laddie, very like his mother. Fanny W. and I nodded and waved as he passed and he openly winked his boyish eye at us, for Fanny, with her yellow curls and wild waving looked rather rowdy and the poor little prince wanted some fun. We laughed and thought that we had been more distinguished by the saucy wink than by a stately bow. Boys are always jolly—even princes." By the way, this incident occurred in 1860, when the Prince of Wales was 19 years old and consequently quite a brother of a boy, and when Miss Alcott—we blush to record it—was 23.—New York Mail.

gance took two Englishmen to a night cafe in Montmartre.

"How much?" he asked, the journey ended.

"Two francs twenty-five," replied Lugance.

As the dial of the taximeter marked only 75 centimes, the Englishman asked the chasseur or messenger of the cab to pay for them. Like a sensible chasseur he gave Lugance his bare fare of 75 centimes.

Lugance drove off, but returning in a few moments with a broken shaft tipped with iron, struck the chasseur violently on the head and killed him. Lugance came up for trial in a few days at the assizes and received a sentence of two years' imprisonment "aveo arsus," which means that he will serve no sentence at all.

It only remains to add that Maitre Henri-Robert defended him. The famous criminal lawyer has been described as a public danger, and if his eloquence allows cochers to play "Collignon" with impunity Paris is in danger of seeing that ultimate epithet lose all its force and meaning.—Paris Correspondence New York Sun.

COST OF A ROYAL PROGRESS.

Although King George has traveled more extensively than any other royal personage, his bills have not run into a very large amount. Thus, the Ophir trip to Australia was estimated at 150,000 pounds, which is not a large sum, taking everything into consideration—the chartering of a special steamer for so long a time, the expenses of a naval escort and traveling charges. His little jaunt to Canada a year or two ago was done for the modest figure of 2,000 pounds; but the tour in India in 1905 cost a large sum, although the exact total has never been published, as a good deal of the expenditure came out of the royal purse. Parliament voted 20,000 pounds, while the cost of altering the Revenue was borne by the naval estimates, and most of the ceremonial charges by India. The total probably came to about 250,000 pounds.

This was not so much as that incurred by King Edward's visit to India as Prince of Wales in 1875. This tour was arranged by Sir Bartle Frere, who was kept busy for seven months making all the arrangements. Parliament voted 60,000 pounds for the general expenses, which Sir Bartle said was quite inadequate, as the presents to native princes amounted to nearly that sum, and he asked for 100,000 pounds. This was not forthcoming, so he made the best of matters by going to Lord Northbrook, the viceroy, who induced the Indian treasury to grant another 10,000 pounds to the presents fund.

People in England thought that the 60,000 pounds, together with the 52,000 pounds which came out of the naval estimates, was too much, and there was actually a meeting of protest in Hyde Park. Even Mr. Fawcett protested in the House of Commons, but public opinion became reconciled when it was seen that the Prince was not merely having a holiday at the country's expense. Presents to native princes ate up the nice little sum of 40,000 pounds, which was really very small when we consider it was generally estimated that he received gifts worth pretty well 500, 600 pounds, one maharajah offering him a jeweled sword worth 12,000 pounds, while English shopkeepers and manufacturers netted some 250,000 pounds out of presents sent from England. The total cost of the trip was considerably over 200,000 pounds.

Every one remembers the spectacular trip of the Kaiser to the Holy Land some ten or twelve years ago. As Messrs. Cook arranged that tour, the exact cost has not been made public, though it is reported to have amounted to no more than 5,000 pounds. But the Kaiser can be lavish when he likes, and his visit to Hohenzollern a year ago cost 35,000 pounds, although he was only there one hour.

Royal visits to foreign countries are usually borne by the king's own privy purse, although if he is engaged in national business he may receive a grant in aid. For instance, when King Edward and Queen Alexandra went to Scandinavia parliament voted 3,668 pounds. Queen Victoria's last trip to the continent cost 4,382 pounds, exclusive of 1,500 pounds incurred by the master of the horse—London Tit Bits.

They Were Clean Misses.

There are always two ways of telling the truth. The man who told the king that he would outlive all his subjects was a true courtier, and understood human nature far more than the man who was put to death for declaring to the same monarch that all his subjects would die before him.

The gamekeeper in Francis Pigon's "Odds and Ends" also had the gift of presenting the pleasant side of a fact.

A certain noble lord was a very bad shot. One day, after a particularly discouraging exhibition of his bungling, he said to the keeper:

"Now, my man, tell me the truth. Did you ever see any one who shot as badly as I do?"

"Oh, yes, my lord," returned the keeper. "I've seen worse shots than your lordship. Your lordship misses the birds so clean."—Youth's Companion.

ANXIOUS TO LEARN IT.

"I have been an office holder for twenty-five years, and no man can show where I ever took a dollar dishonestly."

"Gee, old man," replied the grafter "put me wise to your system, will you?"—Chicago Record-Herald.
