William Glasmann, Publisher
An Independent Newspaper
(ESTABLISHED 1870.)

This paper will always fight for progress and reform. It will not knowingly tolerate injustice or corruption and will always fight demagogues of all parties. It will oppose privileged classes and public plunderers. It will never lack sympathy with the poor, it will always remain devoted to the public welfare and will never be satisfied with merely printing news. It will always be drastically independent and will never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

WHEN "LUNGERS" COME TO UTAH.

Ogden has no desire to become a sanitarium for the people of the states further east, who are afflicted with consumption, and, therefore, what we are about to say is not intended to serve as an appeal to the afflicted to make Ogden a health resort.

The statistics of the board of health of Utah prove that Ogden has a lower death rate from tuberculosis than any city its size in the country, and Utah as a state now ranks lowest in the world in deaths from the dreaded white plague.

Dr. T. B. Beatty, of the state board of health, has sent out the following circular on this subject:

"Utah now boasts of the lowest death rate from tuberculosis in the world, the average being thirty-one deaths annually per 100,000 population, compared with 161 per 100,000 in the United States at large. This low rate should be maintained and still further improved, but it cannot be without persistent and faithful efforts. Numerous victims of disease, attracted by the climate, remove to the state. Of these, many unfortunates are without means and become an especial menace to the public health.

To afford the temporary isolation of these cases until they can be returned to the state responsible for their care, and to protect the public from many resident cases that have no proper facilities for treatment or the exercise of the necessary precautions, a state sanitarium should be provided. The establishment of an institution of that character has been urged in the last two annual reports of the secretary of the state board of health, and efforts have been made to secure a law providing for the same.

The state board of health will again endeavor to secure the enactment of a law for the establishment of a sanitarium at the next session of the legislature, and health officers may promote the public health interests by using their influence with the members of that body to secure their favorable consideration of the proposed bill.

The arguments of those who formerly opposed the measure were based on the assumption that such an institution would attract indigent consumptives from other states; which argument is without merit for the reason that it should be available for continued occupancy exclusively to residents of the state, and affected persons from without should be there isolated only until they be returned to their legal place of residence. Health officers are reminded of the importance of carefully disinfecting premises from which a person affected with tuberculosis has removed. The process of disinfections should be the same as in other contagious diseases."

Down in Phoenix, Ariz., the people advertised their city as a resort for consumptives. The mild climate was set forth as a cure for the disease. That was years ago. Since then Phoenix has regretted the fame obtained and now the "lungers" are viewed as a pestilence, and owners of apartment houses and rooming houses first inquire, so we are informed by a former Ogdenite, whether an applicant for rooms is a carrier of the germs of tuberculosis, and they turn away the "lunger" with as little ceremony and compassion as a rooming house keeper in Ogden would show in rejecting a person with small-pox.

Our climate may be ideal and our altitude exactly right to ward off tuberculosis, but that disease will find lodgment and develop into a scourge wherever the disregard of sanitation and the other laws of health approaches criminal negligence and it is criminal for the people of this state not to so safeguard their present enviable immunity from tuberculosis to the extent of watching all importations of the disease and for all serious cases having a sanitarium where the afflicted can be isolated, cared for and their sputum rendered harmless by being properly disposed of.

As we said a few days ago, tuberculosis and typhoid are preventable diseases. Utah, with its many days of sunshine serving as a powerful germicide, should labor to the end that some day soon the announcement may be made in all truth that this state has been freed from those death-dealing maladies.

SOMEWHAT OF A MISUNDERSTANDING.

The Salt Lake Tribune, in a reference to the South Fork reservoir yesterday, made the statement that the promoter of that enterprise had announced a few days ago the abandonment of the project.

The Tribune writer might refresh his memory by re-reading the article on that subject which appeared in the Standard. If he has not the time, then we state for his benefit that the promoter did not say the enterprise had been abandoned, but stated that bedrock at two places in the first trenching had been lost, that a search was being made to locate solid formation and that, in case of failure, the undertaking might have to be abandoned. In the same article, the further statement was made that, while the loss of bedrock was a source of uneasiness, the builders of the dam had not lost faith as evidenced by the fact that the contractor was allowed to proceed with the hauling of heavy steel and other material in large quantities to be used in the dam construction.

Since then a gang of workmen, with picks, shovels and dynamite have been ripping open the ground to the west of the old trench and at one point at least have once more exposed bedrock. This new work already makes certain that part of the old trench, from the Cobble Creek bridge north, including almost half of the present excavation, is worse than worthless to the reservoir builders, as it must be abandoned and even filled in.

WHY PEOPLE STOP THE EXAMINER.

The Examiner people see ghosts. From every part of Ogden comes the request, "Stop the Examiner." For many days J. U. Eldridge, the manager of the Examiner, has been running up from Salt Lake City, to take a look at his paper. On these jaunts from Salt Lake City "Stops" have greeted him instead of dollars. The editor of the Examiner, LeRoy Armstrong, when he first came to Ogden, took a meal occasionally at the "Virginia," in order to be identified with the town, but he too makes his home in Salt Lake City, and, instead of sending his editorials all the time by mail, he at rare intervals, visits the Ogden Examiner office to open the letters addressed to "The Editor."

Ninety-nine out of each hundred of these letters read, "Stop my paper. We desire to subscribe for the Standard." So many are the requests to "stop" and so often do the same pile of "stops" greet the two men, who are trying to run the Examiner from Salt Lake City, that the two domestics begin to see ghosts as soon as they land in Ogden. On Thanksgiving day the two Salt Lakers came to Ogden to carry back to Salt Lake enough of Uncle Sam's filthy lucre to enjoy a great Thanksgiving blowout. The till was empty, but there was the mail not yet opened. Both the greedy Salt Lakers jumped for the letter pile. Each grabbed an envelope that looked delicate enough to contain a check or money order.

Eldridge, with pen knife in hand, opened the first and, behold, it said:

"This is the third time I have asked you to stop the Examiner. You will please stop it at once. We now are taking the Standard." "Hang the Standard," said Eldridge, as he crumpled the letter in his hand. Armstrong, with palsied hand, next opened a letter and he read aloud:

"Please stop the Examiner, we are taking 'Uncle Billy's' paper."

"To — with Uncle Billy," said the profane editor, as he jumped with both feet on the poor inoffensive "Uncle Billy" letter. Both now pulled up their chairs, wiped their brows. With hope deferred, Armstrong mistrustfully opened a third letter, nicely addressed to the "Ogden Examiner," the contents of which is included in the following editorial, reproduced from this morning's Examiner. It will be seen that the Examiner charges that the Standard is responsible for the "stop letters," which is probably true, because the Standard gives the people what they want, but the Examiner is mistaken in assuming that we had anything to do with the writing of the letters, other than in the printing of a far better paper.

THE SLAM-BANGING EDITORIAL.

We have the following letter:

"The Morning Examiner, Ogden, Utah. Gentlemen: Being wearied of your abusive and 'slam-banging' editorials in your paper, I hope you will be kind enough to take my name from your subscription list.

I hope more of your subscribers will take up the cudgel as I have done, whereby a great deal of this strenuous and undesirable reading matter will be eliminated from our homes.

"Hoping you will be able to see where I have done my part in attempting, at least, to put a stop to the blackmailing in my home of a good citizen, a man of integrity and a powerful factor in the business of the city; also in the continued haranguing and backbiting of one of our ex-presidents, I trust you will be able to take a hint at least from this. Very truly yours,

GEO. S. WAGGONER, 456 Twenty-second St., City.

In Ogden the slam-banging editorial certainly is effective. It makes the publisher of all afternoon papers take an innocent old gentleman into the sanctum, and there secure from him a signature to a letter the innocent old gentleman couldn't write in ten thousand years. And a letter which, if he could write, he would be far too wise to sign.

The slam-bang editorial has the power to make the evening editor do the one thing he cannot get the community to do for him—testify to his own goodness, and his own greatness. It has the effect of revealing, as nothing else in the world has been able to do, the empty boastfulness, the limitless egotism, the passion for self-praise, which Glasmann thirsts for, and which careful people never give him.

From the foregoing it is evident that the Examiner is being haunted by its own shortcomings.
