How to Fight the High Cost of Living

EXPENSIVE PLEASURES OMITTED—GOOD LECTURES AND GOOD READING TAKE THE PLACE OF CHEAP SHOWS OR MANY HIGH PRICED ONES—FLOWERS AND PLANTS GREATEST BLESSING TO MANKIND—FOUR RECIPES BY UTAH LADIES

NO EXPENSIVE PLEASURES.
My husband earns $90 per month and keeps $20 for his expenses, clothing, carfare, etc., including about $10 which he banks. I have $16 per week. Of this I save $6, leaving $9 for fuel, groceries, meat, milk, gas, insurance (25 cents weekly), clothing for myself and incidentals.

We own a five-room cottage and in winter keep one heating stove going all the time, another we use occasionally, principally on Sunday and when the weather is especially severe. We use a little more than a ton of coal a month. I sift the ashes and use the cinders in the morning, as they are liable to clog the stove if used at night.

I use a three burner gas "hot plate" for cooking, and have a small oven that I use on one of the burners when I wish to bake. I am well satisfied with it. My gas bill is only about $1 in winter for cooking and a little more in summer.

In the meat line I buy a small pot roast for Sunday for about 50 cents (which furnishes meat for two days when we have no visitors), or a small stewing chicken. I also buy steak, stewing beef (cooking slowly with vegetables), and occasionally mutton steak or pork chops. About once a week we have oysters when in season. We eat plenty of fruit and vegetables. I can fruit and make jelly in the summer and in winter have this for dessert. Also make puddings, custard, rice, apple or cornstarch.

We live fairly well, but have no expensive pleasures. On an occasional card party or lecture and have plenty of good reading matter.

SAVES BY BEING INDEPENDENT.
Having lived during the year 1911 in New York and the year 1912 in a town of 25,000, I have found that the most economize differently in the large cities than in smaller ones. Beside the hundred and one economies practiced with regard to our table while in New York we found it necessary more especially to put a definite limit on our recreation expenses. We watched the papers for the announcements of the free lectures and other than those saw just no good play a month. We never spent money for mediocre shows or visited the cafes.

On the other hand in a small town the people find their friends' homes their main source of recreation. Each family seems to try to outdo the other in the fancy evening lunches they can give—but our own—and I find our home quite a gathering place for the young married couples. They now there will be no olives, nut sandwiches, or elaborate dessert; just a few home made doughnuts and coffee or plain cake and grape juice which we put ourselves.

I figure that I save simply by being independent.

CHICAGO, ILL.

Ruskin says: "Wherefore do not find that flowers and fair trees and kindly skies are given only where man may see them and be fed by them. But the spirit of God works everywhere alike where there is no eye to see, covering all lonely places with an equal glory, using the same pencil and outpouring the same splendor in the caves of the water, where the snakes swim, and in the desert, where the satyr's dance, among the fir trees of the stork and the rocks of the cooys, as among those highest creatures whom he has made capable witnesses of his working."

I always feel hurt when I see a person break a rose stem or tear up a flower by the roots. Persons who really intelligently love flowers are just as happy to see them growing as to pull them. And it is often that they would leave them on their stems were they not educated to think that the full blossoms must be removed to make way for the opening buds.

When you see a dear old lady pulling dead leaves from her plants it is more often for the comfort and beauty of the plants than for her desire to pull the leaves.

Some people wonder why flowers grow better for old people than for young ones. It is because the older people are more patient and intelligent in their treatment of them.

Of all the gifts given to man for his use in this world I consider flowers and plants the greatest blessing. Fruits, vegetables, grains, animals, fishes and other things are given us for our use and entertainment, all of which we like or dislike—according to our different temperaments.

Flowers are the only decoration to humanity that enjoys the unanimous good opinion of the universe. There is nothing created that we have for our immediate use that gives such pleasure at all times and under all conditions as beautiful flowers. Whether they be natural or imitation there is always beauty and symmetry to be found. They are so much a part of our lives that without them life would be incomplete.

Have you thought how great a part they play in this world? From birth to death no ceremony is complete without them. There is never a soul so alone that flowers are not of place with it. The baby must have flowers in its room from birth. The little girl and boy must have their little gardens. Then the bride comes next with her flowers in place of jewels. The mother, the grandmother with her flower pots and gardens, and last of all, the grave.

There is a spiritual femininity about flowers—their natural grace, exquisite colors and delicate fibers tell story upon story to creation, symbolical of the fleetingness of life and always renewing love and gratitude.

I cannot imagine any one without flowers of some sort. Life would be barren, indeed. What church or house can do without them?

RECIPES.

The following tried recipes were awarded prizes in a cooking contest:
Pork Pie—Slice in a stew kettle two or three potatoes, two onions, the gravy left from roast pork, one fourth teaspoon of extract of beef and just enough hot water to cover. Cook until soft, add salt and pepper to taste, and about two cups of left-over pork cut in small pieces. Place all in a deep pie plate with top and bottom crust—Mrs. C. M. Bull, State Line, Iron county.

Lemon Cream—Grate the rind and squeeze the juice from four good lemons, put into the top of double boiler with three cups of sugar, and bring to a boil. Then stir in six well beaten eggs and cook until it begins to thicken, stirring occasionally. This will take about 35 minutes. Remove from the fire and beat into the mixture two ounces of lard and two ounces of butter. This will make one quart; it is excellent for tart or for cake filling and it is delicious served as a preserve. If placed in a covered jar the cream will keep quite six months—Mrs. Lillian Bruerton, 3512 Ogden avenue, Ogden.

Mince Pie—Make a rich pastry of lard. Empty one can of mince meat in a dish, sweeten and spice to taste, and thin with freshly made strong coffee. Put mince meat in the pastry and bake.—Mrs. Harry Magie, Milford.

STRANGE ORDER IN INVENTOR'S WILL
Washington, Feb. 27.—While protesting that he had absolute confidence in his son's ability to care for himself, Talbert Lanston, a well-known inventor who died a few days ago, left in his will a strange provision for his son's protection, which just came to light today. After making a number of bequests Mr. Lanston had written:

"While I have full confidence in my son, Aubrey, Lanston, in his intelligence, probity, and sobriety, yet, in order to protect him in the event any attack is made upon his liberty, I direct the trustee to expend, if necessary, the sum of $10,000 in his defense."

An amendment to provide for one battleship instead of two as recommended by the committee, was carried by a vote of 174 to 156.

NEW BOXING STAR LOOMS UP ON PACIFIC COAST; "McALLISTER CAN BEAT McGOORTY, KLAUS OR GIBBONS," SAYS JIM CORBETT
In Robert McAllister, a 19-year-old stenographer in a San Francisco fire insurance office, followers of the flat art on the Pacific coast believe they have the most promising piece of middleweight machinery ever turned out in California. He has been boxing in amateur middleweight ranks and has won every ring engagement with ease. "This kid looks like the making of a champion," said former heavyweight champion James J. Corbett, after watching McAllister perform. "I honestly believe that he can beat Eddie McGoorty, Frank Klaus or Mike Gibbons. He has over them in point of boxing skill, class and cleverness."

Huertea's Amazing Treachery Made Known by Revolutionary Leader

Mexico City, Feb. 26.—The ten days artillery battle in Mexico City, with its tremendous loss of life, was a pre-arranged combat. The outcome was never in doubt.

The battle was necessary only that the traitorous ambitions of one man might be satisfied. There was no thought for its terrible consequences. More than 3000 lives were stamped out and 11,000 persons wounded—needlessly.

That those ten bloody days of shrieking shell and death came as the overwhelming climax of a drama of amazing treachery in which General Huertea, in secret league with Felix Diaz, offered up his chief, Francisco I. Madero as the sacrifice, first became known today.

On the authority of one of the principal revolutionary leaders whose name obviously cannot be told here, all during the battle General Huertea and General Diaz were in complete accord, as were the federal soldiers in and out of the arsenal.

Death Traps for Maderists.
Huertea, in compliance with carefully considered plans, never sent regular troops against Diaz, but ordered into the thickest of the fray the irregular forces, whose loyalty to Madero was unquestioned.

This was Huertea's able to play the war game successfully—and at the same time to conveniently dispose of the only troops upon whom Madero could depend.

They were rushed into impossible charges that Diaz might kill them and thus weaken Madero.

These statements of this revolutionary leader are borne out by the hospital statistics which show that proportionately fourteen volunteers and rurales were killed during the fighting to every one federal soldier killed.

This conspiracy was hatched by Huertea and Diaz last year when Huertea was in command of a campaign against Orozco. However, Huertea kept delaying the final coup and the younger element of the officers forced the issue without his knowledge.

Huertea Intended to Desert.
When Huertea was informed that the time had come to strike he was about to join the impatient officers. But loyal irregulars sent by Madero surrounded him. Thereafter Huertea kept Huertea by his side, rendering desertion impossible.

His men, every day Huertea's aides, Major Siles and Captain Revilla, conferred with Diaz in the arsenal and planned fake movements to fool Madero.

One of Madero's artillery commanders was also in the conspiracy. This officer disadjusted the sights on the guns of the loyal artillery in order that the fire supposedly directed into the Diaz ranks and at the arsenal should be inaccurate.

This misdirected artillery fire seems to account for the hundreds of shells that went flying off at tangents from the enemy's position, wrecking public buildings and homes and killing scores of persons outside the danger zone.

It will be recalled that during the bombardment correspondents remarked the seeming disregard of federal gunners for the Diaz position.

Diaz in Hiding.
Diaz and General Mondragon, his second in command, were not allowed to leave the arsenal during the fighting lest they be killed.

And in spite of his understanding with Huertea, Diaz was wary, having profited by his experience at Vera Cruz when General Beltran, after promising to join him, captured him instead.

According to a correspondent, none of the officials of the Porfirio Diaz regime were in the conspiracy, which was planned and carried out by the artillery. Major Rafael Romero Lopez and twenty artillery captains and lieutenants attended to the details of the plot.

General Angeles was not a party to the conspiracy, the rebels realizing that his loyalty and honor were impescable.

General Blanquet, who acting on orders of Huertea, made the actual arrest of Madero in the palace, took no part in the fighting and today he has no standing with the administration.

Beltran Not in Favor.
General Beltran, who captured Diaz in Vera Cruz, is making frantic efforts to make a place for himself in the good graces of the administration, but without apparent success. He waited two hours today in an anteroom, hoping to see Diaz, but he was refused an interview by the rebel leader.

"NELLY BLY" CASE IN SUPREME COURT

Washington, Feb. 26.—The financial troubles of "Nelly Bly," now Mrs. Elizabeth C. Seaman, were brought to the supreme court today when her attorneys asked for an order requiring Judge Chatfield of the federal district court of Eastern New York to exercise jurisdiction over a bankruptcy case in which she is concerned and barring Judge Mayer of the southern district from action. Charges of bias of judges were the basis for the request. About $1,000,000 worth of property is involved.
