WORK TRAIN SAVES A BRIDGE

OGDEN RIVER WAS UNDERMINING SHORT LINE STRUCTURE.

Derrick Employed in Clearing the Stream of Trees and Timbers Lodged Against Bridge.

At 3 o'clock this morning a work train was ordered out to protect the Oregon Short Line bridge, in the north end of the yard limits, where high water and an accumulation of floating trees timber and general driftwood had formed a dam against the piers and, aside from inundating the low country in that section and immediately east, threatened serious damage to the railroad bridge.

No trouble is apprehended at the lower Southern Pacific bridge, although that structure is closely guarded and will receive attention as long as high water is threatening.

Trains are arriving over the Union Pacific, Oregon Short Line and Rio Grande lines nearly on time this afternoon and no serious delays as the result of recent rains are apprehended at this time.

Reports from points along the Utah division of the Union Pacific show that Wyoming has been swept by the heaviest and most storm of the season during the last forty-eight hours, but track conditions are reported in fairly good shape, although a little soft, between Ogden and Rawlins.

Precautionary measures have been taken at all vulnerable points and trains are very generally covering the division on slow orders wherever danger threatens.

Along the Oregon Short Line little rivulets have become wide and dangerous rivers at several points between Ogden and Pocatello, but as yet no interruption is noticeable in regular train service.

THREE OF A KIND Dropped Coffee, Picked Up Postum, and Health.

The harmful action of caffeine—the drug in coffee and tea—is the same in all cases, it is only a matter of degree.

One person may suffer more in the way of heart palpitation, sour stomach, nervousness, or insomnia, than another, but the poison is there all the time, if one continues to drink coffee or tea.

Having read frequently of Postum, I determined to try it. It certainly made a great change in me. Those spells left me entirely.

How M. M. McDonough, Tramping Around the World, Came to be a Benedict.

Mack McDonough, globe-trotter, soldier of fortune, matrimonial-plunger and correspondent extraordinary of the "London Times," arrived in this city at 2 o'clock this morning from the west and after fulfilling the obligations of his former contracts, proceeded on his way to the north.

McDonough is a native of Pretoria, South Africa, and is doing a globe-trotting stunt which has other projects of that nature beaten by long odds.

He started from Pretoria and the "London Times," for two months and fifteen days. Upon completing a tour of the world within five years in which he must visit the seats of government and secure, if possible, audience with the various rulers, he is to receive the sum of $21,000.

The "London Times," and a leading paper of Paris, and one of Berlin, are back of the project and each had a hand in framing the conditions under which the trip must be made.

During the three years he has been on the road, he has covered most of the countries of Europe and Asia as well as a large part of America.

He reached California a month ago and there met one of the peculiar stipulations of his contract, which was the marrying a native Californian.
