This afternoon the Alder Creek Irrigation company, an association of persons, through their attorney, Joseph Chez, filed articles of incorporation with County Clerk Dye.

The corporation is organized with a capital of $15,000, divided into 150 shares of the par value of $100 each.

The board of directors has the right to make assessments for the maintenance of said company but are limited to two assessments per year.

The company consists of sixteen stockholders, who own land adjoining said irrigation system and whose water rights are taken over by said corporation in lieu of their stock.

HUNTSVILLE DRAMATIC COMPANY

MADE A GOOD IMPRESSION AT THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

Considerable Ability Displayed by Amateurs Before an Audience of Good Size—Play Well Received.

The Huntsville Dramatic company presented "Escaped From the Law" at the Grand last evening and gave a very creditable amateur performance.

The players carried their various roles with considerable histrionic ability. The climaxes were well approached and delivered with effect in nearly every case.

Adam L. Peterson, as General Burleigh, was easily the star of the evening. He maintained excellent poise throughout the piece and rendered his lines with intelligence and care.

Elizabeth Peterson, as Nanette, had a very difficult role, and for an amateur, the lady did very well with it.

George E. Ferrin, as Michael Hatfield, the agitator, was good. He displayed an exceptional amount of intensity throughout and read most of his lines with effect.

Little Reia Schade, five years of age, played her part excellently for one so young and her appearance during the play never failed to arouse favorable comment.

Elmer Berlin, as Widow Dalroy, was also favorably received. She twisted her lines with humor and at times mis-spoke the sex of her late husband, but her general presence and rendition was very satisfactory.

The conditions under which an amateur performance is produced is often rough, and the professional actors are prepared for the public. The manuscript, in the case of the latter, is hashed and re-hashed under the supervision of experts until it often bears little resemblance to its original form.

With the amateur, however, his manuscript is printed and put in circulation as stage business, an occasional "cross to right" or "up center" being thrown in, and he is left in his ignorance and inexperience to work out these most important matters for himself.

Animals at New York Zoo. In the total number of mammals, birds, reptiles and amphibians (4,034), on exhibition, the New York Zoological park stands today at the head of all the zoological parks and gardens of the world.

The New York Zoological park in land and water embraces 264 acres. Of walks and roads there are about eight miles, and of fences 10 1/2 miles.

The maintenance force of the park, constantly on duty, embraces 141 persons. The number of visitors in 1907 was 1,273,046—nearly one-third of the entire population of the metropolis of the American continent.

The corporation is organized with a capital of $15,000, divided into 150 shares of the par value of $100 each.

SMALL POX AT CITY JAIL

NUMBER OF PRISONERS TEMPORARILY QUARANTINED.

Prisoner in Court Admits He Had Been Sustained by Woman in Her Life of Shame.

Two gentlemen of leisure, giving their residence as in the alley, and their occupation as nil, were effectively disposed of by the municipal judge this morning, the remainder of the docket being brief, owing to the sensational development of a case of smallpox in the jail and the temporary quarantine of a number of prisoners.

The individuals first mentioned were the individuals first mentioned and the charge of vagrancy against them drew forth a plea of guilty from each.

One of them, conspicuous in pink tie and shirt, a not overly fresh collar, and a pair of eyes that denoted a bad night passed in the battle, claimed that he had a wife and child in San Francisco.

He had admitted to the officers that he had been sustained by a woman of the underworld and was promptly sentenced to sixty days on the rock pile.

The other prisoner, Captain Brown stated, was of the same class of parasites as the previously confessed one, and he, also, was sentenced to serve sixty days in jail.

P. L. Roberts and Antone Butters forfeited $5.00 each for leaving their tents unroofed on the streets.

Kid Allen, the local queer-mixer who dispersed himself a week ago at the Oxford bar by shooting a "hole" through Mr. Paulson's hat, was arrested on complaint of Officer Cooney.

The charge being disturbing the peace, "The Kid" failed to show up in police court today and his bail of $50 was declared forfeited.

A large number of vagrant women and a few keepers of gambling dens and houses of prostitution forfeited their bail by not appearing to answer the charges against them.

HEAVY RUSH IS NOW IN SIGHT

ROADS PREPARING FOR RUSH OF COLONISTS.

Orders issued to Assemble Extra Equipment at Ogden to Meet the Coming Demands.

At the request of the passenger department managers, operating officials of the Southern Pacific and Oregon Short Line roads are assembling extra coaches and baggage cars at Ogden in large numbers to handle the colonist rush westward after March 1.

When the "hog" movement gets going into effect for sixty days on both the Harriman and Gould systems, officials are to the effect that the first ten days of the reduced rate will see the heaviest rush westward in the history of the colonist movement.

The equipment of the Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Short Line and Rio Grande systems will be taxed to the utmost to handle the westbound land and homeseekers.

The Rio Grande trains will act as feeders to the Southern Pacific and Short Line trains, with the crowds on the Union Pacific system, will throng Ogden with people from the east, south and central west.

In the meantime that exhibit of Weber county products might attract attention if it was arranged nicely in the waiting room of the big Ogden depot.

SOCIALIST LECTURE BY A DISTINGUISHED WOMAN

Mrs. Ida Crouch-Hazlett of Montana is a woman who has been before the public for a number of years as a lecturer upon various economic subjects.

She is one of the national Socialist speakers and has given pre-eminent satisfaction wherever her work is known. She has a genius for clear, forcible and eloquent expression.

There are few, if any, speakers in the field who are better posted on Socialism. She is particularly effective in a series of lectures by which she is endeavoring to reach a large part of the community and give a complete exposition of the subject.

She will lecture at the county court house February 24, 25, 26, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings, commencing at 8 o'clock every evening.

Cheap Apple Jelly. The apple has so undecided a flavor that it combines readily with quinces, grapes or peaches, giving the whole a delightful flavor, and helping grapes and peaches, which lack the jellying principle in themselves, firmness and body. Her Abiding Youth. "I am afraid I never will grow up and look like a woman," pouted the bride-to-be. "The other day, while I was having one of my new walking suits fitted and was insisting that it would have to be finished this week, the tailor asked me: 'When does your school open?' And that frock is a part of my trousseau!"

HUSBANDHAD REPOSED TRUST

ONLY TO FIND THAT HE HAD BEEN DECEIVED.

An injured husband, a bright, beautiful child, a wayward wife and heartless mother and her seductive lover are the central figures in a pathetic domestic drama which developed in the waiting room at the big Ogden Union depot this morning, and the sequel to which is to come later.

Among the passengers on a late train from Salt Lake last night was a well-dressed, intelligent looking young man of 25 or 30 years of age, and snuggling in his arms was a child perhaps one year old.

The man found a comfortable seat in which to place his charge and, while the babe slept the hours of night away, his father walked up and down the waiting room guarding the little one and impatiently waiting for the train from the capital city.

With the advent of day, light the child awoke and, while playing around the room and among other passengers, the tender solicitude for the babe and his sad expression attracted the attention of several ladies and employes at the depot.

When the 8:10 passenger train arrived from Salt Lake the man condescended to the babe to a lady in the waiting room and rushed out to watch the emerging passengers.

Not until the last one had left the car did he give up his vigil and then, slowly returning to the room, he grabbed up the child and walked nervously back and forth, while a suspicious moisture was noticeable in his eyes.

Walking up to the man, Depot Inspector Oscar Gutke asked him if he was in trouble and what he had desired to go out on.

The man replied that he did not know exactly where he would go yet, and then, in a burst of confidence, he continued: "I am deeply grateful, sir, for your kindly interest in my movements, but I and the little one are in deep trouble and I hardly know what to do at present. The facts are that I am deeply disappointed at the non-arrival of my wife on the train which was just arrived—and I realize now that she is not coming. We have been living at Salt Lake and until a few days ago she had been at Ogden. She was invaded by a treacherous scoundrel who posed as a friend, we were happy and contented. I finally found things were not as they should be, however, and after a candid interview with my wife, we decided to establish a new home elsewhere and to leave the scene of our trouble. She consented to this and everything was arranged for a trip west. We were to start last night, and everything was apparently agreeable all around. I was to take our babe to the train and my wife was to join me at the depot. A few minutes before the train started, I received a telephone message from her that she could not reach the depot in time, and she advised me to take the train at once and she would join me without fail on the next train to Ogden. Believing everything was all right, I did so and here I am, completely alone. My wife was simply a subterfuge in order to allow her to remain with her lover in Salt Lake. This ends the matter so far as I and the babe are concerned. I shall return to Salt Lake by the next train and make arrangements to place the little one with her father. If anything should happen that I am wrong in my conclusions, and my wife should arrive from Salt Lake on one of the trains today, kindly tell her I have returned to Salt Lake. But she will not come. I am sure of that. I have been deceived and I will not give my own child, at present at least."

After giving Inspector Gutke an accurate description of the woman, who was described as attractive in appearance and 22 years of age, disappointed and sorrowing man picked up the babe and took the early train for the capital city.

All day long Mr. Gutke has been on the lookout for the young wife and mother, but no one answering that description has arrived at the depot, and those familiar with the man's story are forced to the conclusion that he sized up the situation correctly.

Real Life in the Country. Life, to the average man, means hard, anxious work, with disappointment at the end, whereas it ought to mean plenty of time for books and talk. There is something wrong about a system which condemns ninety-nine hundredths of the race to an existence as bare of intellectual activity and enjoyment as that of a horse and with the addendum of concern for the next month's rent. Is there no escape? Through years of toil I suspected that there might be such an escape. Now, having escaped, I am sure of it, so long as oatmeal is less than three cents a pound, so long as the fish bite and the cabbage grows, I shall keep out of the slavery of modern city existence, and live in God's sunshine.—Hubert.

What He Knew. "Do you believe that love makes the world go round?" queried the sentimental maid in the big touring car. "I don't know about that," replied the practical young man at the steering wheel, "but it is gasoline that makes the wheels go round on a grade like this."

And realizing that it was a hopeless case, the s. m. closed her face and proceeded to get interested in the scenery.

AS HIS SET SAW OLD BEAU. A FEW OF LIFE'S PARADOXES. Put Their Own Definition on His Lordship's Statement. All True, Though at First They Seem to Read Rather Odd.

Mrs. Pierre Lorillard Ronalds, at a luncheon in New York, narrated her impressions of the great city that she had not seen for 20 years.

"New York has now taken her place among the world's capitals," she said. "New York is no longer young and unsophisticated. She has now all the weariness and vice of Paris, London and Rome."

"They who speak of New York as young, childish, innocent, speak very foolishly. They remind me of Lord Exe of the Carlton.

"Lord Exe, at 70, tried to lead the life of a youth of 25. He dyed his hair, wore a corset and frequented the music halls, Piccadilly circus and the Burlington arcade.

"One afternoon, as he drove from the Carlton in his brougham, a member said, smiling: "There goes Exe. He told me over a whisky and soda just now that he felt as fresh as a two-year-old."

"Another member sneered. "He probably meant a two-year-old egg," he murmured."

NOT FLATTERING TO LAWYER. Unkind Comparison Made by One. Time Popular Author.

With reference to the cry for the blood of the sparrow which is being heard just now, the attitude of Day, the author of "Sandford and Merton," on the killing of even an insect will appeal to many admirers of the little bird.

He was with Sir William Jones at his chambers one day and a spider fell on the table. "Kill that spider," said Jones. "No," preached Day in his Sandford style. "I will not kill that spider, Jones. I do not know that I have a right to kill that spider. Suppose when you are going in your coach to Westminster a superior being, who perhaps may have as much power over you as you have over this insect, should say to his companion, 'Kill that lawyer! Kill that lawyer!' How should you like that? And I am sure to most people a lawyer is a more noxious animal than a spider."

The Will to Live. Dr. Mason, a physician of considerable prominence and ability, suddenly developed a serious illness when far from home in a little town in Oregon, says the Woman's Home Companion. He felt able to prescribe for himself, but knew that what he really needed was careful nursing.

The widow of the late medical practitioner that described himself as being in the grip, and he asked to see her. She was thin, angular and severe of aspect, and at first glance he decided he needed more cheerful attendance. So he tried, as gracefully as possible, to express his doubts as to the volunteer's ability as a nurse.

"But," protested the lady, "I nursed my father until he died; I nursed both my sister and brother until they died; I nursed my husband."

"Yes, yes," interrupted the doctor, "but, you see, I want to live."

The Lazy Venus. She was very beautiful, though her face showed more indolence than intelligence—"a sort of lazy Venus," as Byron once said. While walking a very short distance in Van Cortlandt Park he observed the golfers and was asking her companion, a sprightly young girl, something about the game. The girl explained.

"My Gawd!" responded the other. "Walking all over these hills!"

Then she observed some more players on the links in the far distance. "And do they play it away off there, too?"

"Oh, yes," replied the girl. "They play it all over the place."

"Well," concluded the lady, dismissing the subject with definite finality and a shrug of her lovely shoulders, "that's another of those nice games I'd like to learn—I don't think."
