is eternal justice. John Morrissey can come nearer representing perfectly the people of that ward than I ever could."
And so we say the Ogden capitol for $250,000 ought to suit the majority in Utah better than an elaborate structure, even though that structure might be an honor to this state.
Editor Goodwin should not fill his mind with such forebodings. Ogden will build a capitol which will be a credit to the state in which even Goodwin lives. The hills and valleys will labor for us in shaping a thing of art, and to that extent at least our capital will be grander than anything which might have been built in the city resting on sun baked hills bordering on alkali flats.

tion, it would be well to take up the question of calling a meeting of the peace officers of the west, to be held in Ogden, for the purpose of reaching some conclusion as to how vagrants and criminally inclined wanderers should be treated by each community. As it is now, all communities are shirking responsibility, driving the vagrant and suspicious character from place to place, refusing to meet the problem until, by overt acts of criminal transgression, these itinerants finally become a heavy charge upon the law-abiding.
Inasmuch as all communities suffer, by reason of this failure on the part of any one to do its full duty, some concerted action should be decided upon. The only manner by which this fixing of community responsibility can be arrived at is in holding a convention of those instructed with the enforcing of law and order and caring for the derelict of society, and this Ogden can bring about by calling a convention to be held in this city some time soon.

CONVINCE YOURSELF THE WEATHER IS FINE.
About a week ago there were complaints that the weather was unseasonable—too cold. Now with the thermometer registering eighty in the shade, there is another complaint—it is too warm.
Man is hard to please. When cold weather comes, he prays for warm days, when the summer days are with him, he asks for the zephyrs of winter.
In those sections of Southern California where the climate is equable, the inhabitants grow inactive. The lassitude interferes with the progress of the people and they complain. The snowcapped mountains far distant are their dreams of Paradise.
Americans who visit the Hawaiian Islands are delighted with the rich vegetation, but the beauty, as it grows commonplace, loses its charm, and the travelers sigh for home.
Now what do you think of such persuasiveness? The lesson it teaches is this:
Train yourself to be contented with your lot, while still retaining an ambition. You cannot hope to have all nature conform to your likes and dislikes. When it is warm say to yourself that warm weather is just the thing. While saying so may be a stretch of the truth, the effect will be magical. The hottest day will be bearable. The mind helps to make good or bad weather. Storm clouds have their sun tints which are incomparably beautiful for one who does not mind the storm. Lightning flashes open up the depths of strange lands in the sky and unfold magnificent pictures to those who do not dread the roar of thunder which follows in the wake.
Summer days are enjoyable if you keep cool. Tingling nerves make warm weather warmer.

OGDEN SHOULD BE MADE A CONVENTION CITY.
Ogden should become a convention city. The more this city advertises its attractions to the outside world, the greater will be its growth.
Everyone admits Ogden is beautifully situated and has more natural resources than any other city of its size in the intermountain country, but the development of those resources is comparatively slow.
There is one way in which to advertise which will bring results and that is to draw the people here by conventions or other gatherings.
Our hotel accommodations may not be equal to the demands of large conventions, but hotels will come, if we create the demand.
Already plans are being made for a convention of the business men and livestock people of the "inland empire" to be held in Ogden. That convention should bring to this city 2,000 representative merchants and freight shippers of this interior country. It should be a business convention without a hurrah or parade. The purpose is to bring the heads of big business institutions and others together to discuss ways and means to force the railroads to deal impartially with the people of what is known as the inland empire; and there would be no need for diverting pleasures while the conference was on. At the close of the convention, the visitors might be shown over the city and taken for a trip through Ogden Canyon.
While the Weber club has this subject of conventions under considera-

COMPANIONSHIP.
Man is a friendly animal, says Times. He seeks companionship. If not known by the company he keeps, he is not known at all. Intoxicated and inclined to sulk, he wants to associate with his fellows in exactly the same state. If sober with a tendency to moralize upon the failings of others, he wants a sympathetic audience. His associates must be of his own kind. The man out of tune with his neighbors ought to move. For none is so unhappy as the one who is not appreciated, or who thinks he is not, which is much the same thing. The man whose estimate of himself is not shared by those about him should either change his location or his appraisal of his own value. With congenial spirits he may be content anywhere; without them he cannot fit happily into any place under the sun.

STORAGE RESERVOIR A GREAT BLESSING.
(Morning Examiner)
It is not generally known that water in storage eliminates many of the most dangerous bacteria carried by streams. The director of the water supply of London has made a report in which he shows that in thirty days the typhoid bacillus is completely de- vitalized.
Although London uses a mighty river of water, the metropolitan water board endeavors to provide storage for at least thirty days in order to avoid the destructiveness to human life of the microbes of typhoid fever. The claim is made that raw river water should never be consumed until it has stood for a month.
The enlarging of Ogden's water storage capacity by the building of the new reservoir, which is of many times greater capacity than the reservoir which has been in service for twenty years or more, will make possible this impounding for a long period, and, if it is proved that typhoid bacillus can be rendered harmless by storing the water a greater length of time, then the reservoir capacity should be increased until the full thirty days' storage is secured.
There is nothing in modern civilization more dreaded than typhoid fever and yet the water supply of few cities is free from the death-dealing germs.

KEEPS CURLS CURLED
Hook Holds Hair in Shape Until It Is Pinned Fast.
In these days of puffs and curls and other marvelous components of the modern coiffure the man who can find a way to make curls better or easier is on the high road to fame and fortune. A device for this purpose is that shown in the illustration, and is the invention of an Illinois man. It consists of a single curling iron, which has grooves along its length large enough to receive one side of a double wire hook, of much the same shape as a safety pin. The hair is curled around the cylinder and over one end of the hook, and when the curl or puff is made the hook is fastened at the free end, which is constructed to permit fastening, and the puff is held together until it can be pinned in place on the head. The device can also be used in curling natural hair, and the hook will hold the curl in shape until that shape is well set. The chief advantage in rolling false curls is experienced in their coming unrolled before adjusted.

ONIONS, SALT AND LIQUOR FOR A WOMAN.
Mrs. Katherine Gould spent one million dollars in eight years for liquor, onions, salt and chicken feed. A million spent in onions and salt and washed down with strong drink must have afforded Mrs. Gould as much real comfort as an old set obtains at the free lunch counter.
There are millions being squandered each year by women of the perverted tastes of Mrs. Gould. These women of the idle rich are restless, nervous, dissatisfied beings, pandering to false appetites. They arise tired, seek diversions new and novel, and end the day with twitching nerves. Their nights are sleepless because of their dissipated habits which claim them as victims, and they end their days either in melancholy or some other form of nervous collapse.
There are other women, robust and mentally strong, who never see a dollar beyond the immediate wants of their families, who sometimes sigh for the wealth of a Mrs. Gould, but they would not forfeit their health and mental balance for the millions of a Rockefeller.
After all, true wealth can not be measured in dollars. Mrs. Gould can have her onions and salt and liquor, but the woman of plain habits and common sense will thank good fortune that there has never come to her a temptation which, if accepted by being beyond her power to resist, would have filled her mind with wild cravings and hallucinations.

THREE SMALL FIRES CAUSED BY LIGHTNING
Salt Lake, June 14.—Three fires at the same time and a dash by two loose fire horses through the streets, followed a terrific crash of lightning and thunder crash about midnight Sunday night.
The fires were of little moment. The horses, after the first few leaps of their frightened dash, galloped back into the fire headquarters through a rear door, went to their places and stood to be harnessed.
The single bolt of lightning which produced the thunderous crash apparently caused all three of the fires. It is supposed that it struck a light feed wire which led to the three places, though each was widely separated from the other.
The department made its first run to the Elite theater, South State street, near South Fourth. There it was found that a fuse had been burned out.
The department had hardly turned the corner of First South and State streets on its return, when an alarm was sent in from the Crane company, plumbing supplies, 141 East First South street, directly across the street from fire headquarters. The lightning had burned out a switchboard, which in turn had set fire to some boxes. This blaze was put out with trifling damage, but not before Thomas J. Thomas, a night watchman for the Crane company, in his panic had thrown a heavy hammer through the glass of the front door.
While the firemen were at work at the Crane company, an alarm came in from "Jim" Bombino's saloon, 13 Commercial street, but the fire there, which had been caused by lightning, also was extinguished quickly.

DIRECTOR CROSS SOCIETY AT UTAH'S SERVICE.
Salt Lake City, June 13.—A communication from President W. H. Taft, in his capacity of president of the American National Red Cross society, was received Saturday by Governor William Spry, in which the president calls attention to the fact that the services of Ernest P. Becknell, the national director of the society, are at the disposal of any state or city which may require assistance. The president also refers to the facilities or the organization. The letter contains a statement showing that the society spent $4,472,892.60 between January 5, 1905, and May 5, 1909. Receipts from the sale of Red Cross Christmas stamps for the benefit of tuberculosis work amounted to $138,000. The expenses of the society were but $30,195.

YOUTH CAUGHT STEALING AND PLACED IN JAIL.
Salt Lake City, June 13.—Vernon Walker, a lad of seventeen years, hailing from Pleasant Grove, was arrested by the police Saturday night for drinking beer in a saloon. He was given a lecture by Lieutenant Richard Shannon and allowed to go on his way. At 8 o'clock Patrolman J. K. Hinton brought the same lad back into the police station. This time he was caught stealing a sack of oats from John Green at the corner of Fifth South and State streets. Green who is a neighbor of Walker in Pleasant Grove, was allowing him to sleep in his barn. For the last few days, he says, he has been missing oats from his supply. Saturday night he lay in wait and caught Walker as he was leaving the barn with the oats.
At the station Walker admitted he had taken the oats for the purpose of selling them. He was locked up in the boys' ward of the city jail and as he is under age he will be turned over to the juvenile court Monday.
