Market Place of the Munnimakers

Don't Let Your Time Go to Waste. Sell It—All of It, or Part of It—But Don't Let Any of It Be Lost When a Munnimaker Ad Will Find a Buyer For It So Quickly and So Easily.

Standard Readers Look for the Special "Specials"

BY MR. MUNNIMAKER

The Famous Profit-Wizard of the Standard Classified Advertising Columns.

Yesterday, when Mr. Munnimaker was in a down town retail store, in conversation with the proprietor, he saw a clerk lettering a display card with the words, "LOOK ON THIS TABLE EVERY DAY FOR OUR NEW SPECIALS."

"Well," said Mr. Munnimaker to the proprietor, "those specials ought to do a lot to bring customers into your store at frequent intervals." "Yes," said the proprietor, "that's what I calculate." "But isn't it a fact," said Mr. Munnimaker, "that the only people who know about today's specials are the people who happen to come into the store today." "True enough," said the proprietor.

"Well, now, isn't it also a fact that most of the people who come into the store today would come in anyhow—not drawn here by these specials, but coming in for some definite purpose?"

"Yes," said the proprietor, "that is also true, Mr. Munnimaker."

"So really, the best way in which to get the full benefit of those very attractive specials on that table, would be if you could make those specials known to people who had not intended to come to your store today. The way you have them now, they are simply a little extra advantage for people who do happen to come to the store. But if you would use them right, you could make those specials draw to your store today a great many people who would not otherwise have dropped in."

"How do you mean," said the proprietor, with rising interest.

"I mean," said Mr. Munnimaker, "that the main usefulness of those specials is to draw people to your store, and you are simply wasting your chance if these specials are known only to people who do come in. What you ought to do is to make them known to people who do not come into the store. Advertise them. Just let the readers of the Standard know that a special corner of the Market Place of the Munnimakers, the classified columns of the Standard, will contain your message every day, and then, every day, tell them about some especially attractive, advantageous special which is waiting for them if they will come in. Don't crowd your advertisement with a whole list of

"A Special 'Special' Every Day." Look for an announcement of it in the Market Place of the Munnimakers, the Classified Columns of the Standard." Mr. Munnimaker, as everybody knows, is the presiding genius of the classified columns of the Standard—the busy Market Place of the Munnimakers. He is full of bright, practical, useful suggestions like this to increase trade, to get new customers, and to keep old customers interested. He is always at the service of any readers of the Standard, whether an individual or a business man, and he can always be reached. If you will simply lift the receiver off the hook and telephone No. 56, to Mr. Munnimaker, at the office of the Standard. (Copyright, 1909, by Metropolitan Syndicate, Inc., N. Y.)
