RANDOM REFERENCES

Beaten by Trainmen.—Because he refused to recognize two members of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen who were on the delinquency list, Clarence Warren was beaten up last night by Frank Shant and James McEva, the two trainmen. Warren was accused of being a "piker" and when he tried to explain his position both of the men turned on him and gave him a sound beating. He had the fellows arrested and was held as a witness.

Mrs. Labadie Makes a Hit.—Mrs. Harriett R. Labadie read Deussen's "A Doll's House" last evening to a crowd which filled the First Congregational church. The appearance of Mrs. Labadie in Ogden was under the auspices of the historical society. She has a clear and distinct voice which is capable of being changed to suit the character in the book. She interpreted the masculine parts as well as the feminine, and it is this quality which has placed her in the front ranks of readers. She is superior to many readers now on the platform, because of her ability to interpret masculine parts.

At Weber Academy.—The Whitney brothers quartette will be the next number on the programme for the Weber Academy Lecture course. The quartette, which is well known all over the country, comes here well recommended. The Whitney brothers are real brothers and not just stanzo brothers. They have a well balanced quartette and promise an evening of entertainment. Besides the singing, one of the brothers is a reader of note and his readings along with his facial expressions are most entertaining and amusing.

Building a Theatre for One Day's Use.

On Thanksgiving Day in Ogden, Utah, John E. Young, the original Johnnie Hicks in "The Time, the Place and the Girl," will play a matinee and night performance of the musical comedy, "Lo," in which he is starring this year, under what is probably the most unique and remarkable circumstances in which a big musical star has ever appeared.

Owing to the incompletion of John Cort's new theater in Ogden, which Mr. Young was scheduled to open Thanksgiving Day when his tour was planned last summer, William E. Burlock, general representative of the

JOHN E. YOUNG In the New Musical Comedy "LO"

Harry Askin company, Mr. Young's managers, found when he arrived in Ogden ten days ago that there was no theater for Mr. Young to play in Thanksgiving Day. Not only is that holiday considered the greatest theatrical holiday of the year, but there were other reasons why the impossibility of playing in Ogden was an extraordinarily serious blow, and Mr. Burlock determined that he would play Mr. Young somewhere in Ogden on that date, if he had to hire a circus tent or even play in the open air on the City Hall Square.

Inquiry developed the fact that the enormous Skating Rink Auditorium might be leased for the day, and an hour later Mr. Burlock had signed a contract for its use. Another twenty-four hours sufficed for the signing of contracts with electricians, carpenters and an orchestra, treasurers, ushers, stage hands, bill-posters and the hundred and one other means of work, unseen by the audience, nevertheless, contributes so essentially to the perfect performance of a big theatrical production, and the following morning "The Big Auditorium" was jammed with its gangs of perspiring mechanics working at break-neck speed transforming for the one day's use this barren hall into a warm, comfortable, perfectly appointed theater.

At the far end C. J. Humphreys, Ogden's leading contractor, was building a stage forty by seventy feet, and another gang was overhead hanging the enormous girders and beams necessary to support the hanging drops and borders of the three acts of the big show.

Other men were meanwhile building the dressing rooms necessary for the thirty-two pretty girls, the sixteen chorus men and the dozen principals to make their half score changes of costumes, upholsterers were furnishing ladies' dressing rooms, the gentlemen's smoking room and decorating the walls of the lobby.

Sixteen hundred chairs were engaged and by Thanksgiving Eve every detail of a first-class, up-to-date theater will be awaiting Mr. Young's performance.

The enormous amount of work involved could not be appreciated by anyone outside of the theatrical profession, and Mr. Burlock could not have accomplished it without the hearty co-operation of a big committee of the leading citizens of Ogden.

Mr. William Allison, one of the foremost residents, co-operated to the fullest extent. Neither he or Mr. Burlock leaving the Auditorium for a forty-eight hour stretch, except for food and black coffee.

"It will cost over a thousand dollars," said Mr. Allison, "to put this building in shape, and it is one of the most remarkable feats ever attempted by a theatrical manager."

Mr. Young, in "The Time, the Place and the Girl," however, has a most phenomenal record in Ogden. About a year and a half ago he played here on a Saturday night to receipts of $1,075. As the performance was progressing it was suggested that he play there the following night, as the company had not been scheduled to appear elsewhere. Mr. Young announced the fact upon the stage, and $964.00 were the receipts on Sunday night.

As the performance was progressing Sunday his manager was given a telegram announcing that the theater in the town where he was to play Monday was burning up. Accordingly the third performance in Ogden was announced for Monday, and the receipts were $389.00. Four months later he again played Ogden to the phenomenal receipts of $1,111.00, thus completing the fourth of the most remarkable performances ever recorded in a town of Ogden's size.

Wednesday night and Thursday morning the auditorium will be open for free inspection in order that attending patrons may see for themselves that every detail is complete for a perfect performance.

and Iowa points. She will remain east till after the holidays.

The Musical Comedy, "Lo," which is at the Skating Rink Auditorium Thanksgiving afternoon and evening, began its engagement in Salt Lake City last evening. This is what the Salt Lake Tribune says about it: "If there was nothing else in 'Lo,' the unique musical comedy, which began an engagement at the Salt Lake Theater on Monday evening, than the duets, 'It's the Little Things That Count' and 'You Can Always Be My Sweetheart,' you would not regret having attended the playhouse to hear this most tuneful musical play. But there are a great many other things that attract, that entertain, that make you feel glad that you were there. For there are handsome girls; there are beautiful costumes, there are magnificent stage settings, there is a chorus that is strong—both male chorus and female chorus, there are soloists who can sing, there are duets, and trios and quartettes, there is Annie Hall and Dorothy Brenner and Juliette Lange, and there is John E. Young. All this makes up a most happy combination, and the audience that gathered at the Salt Lake Theater on Monday evening was more than delighted with this enjoyable musical play and the manner in which it was presented." Seat sale now on at Culley's Drug Store.

Why do the public insist on U. S. inspected meats?

Because a large percent of all food animals are not in sound health, but affected with such diseases as tuberculosis, cholera, tapeworms, actinomycosis, pneumonia, septicemia, pyemia and numerous others.

Because diseased meats are condemned and utterly destroyed by skilled veterinary surgeons stationed at U. S. inspected packing plants by the U. S. government.

Because this is not the case at uninspected slaughter houses.

Because it requires a skilled veterinary surgeon to discover diseases in animals.

Because no veterinary surgeons are placed at uninspected slaughter houses to condemn diseased meats, which then go on the market.

Because U. S. inspected meats are handled at a clean and sanitary place and in a clean and sanitary manner.

Because U. S. inspected meats are not exposed to the infection carried by flies from dirty hog pens and filthy walls.

Because diseased and unclean meats are responsible for a great number of diseases to which man is liable.

Because the use of U. S. inspected meats is a life insurance to yourself and family which costs you nothing.

Because U. S. inspectors are paid by the government, which is, by the people.

Because U. S. inspected meats are just as cheap.

Because the U. S. government gives

John E. Young in Musical Comedy, "Lo." The others in the company are all good, and the stage settings, as said, are beautiful, the scene representing New York harbor, the one depicting a garden scene in Yucatan and the scenes in the forest and temple are as pretty as any ever shown upon a Salt Lake stage.
